Mundt Visions Big Saving on Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican victory, says Sen. Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, would bring a 20-billion-dollar cut in the national budget based on economies in military and foreign aid spending as well as in the domestic field.

Mundt, co-chairman of the Republican Speakers Bureau, opposed his Democratic party counterpart, Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma, in an NBC radio-television debate last night.

Speaking on "American Forum of the Air," Mundt cited statements by Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, GOP presidential nominee, that Republicans would cut 20 billions off the budget, now about 85 billions.

"We are going to do that," Mundt said, "in the first place by reducing sharply our military expenditures through substituting efficiency for waste. . . .

"In the second place, by substituting for a policy of containment of communism abroad a positive, forward-moving program. . . designed to get our friends to help themselves rather than trying to put the burdens of 44 foreign countries on the taxpayers' shoulders in America. . . .

"We are going to do it on the domestic front by cutting corruption out of government."

Monroney said he doubted Eisenhower's "attitude on cutting down the military will correspondend with Sen. Mundt's branch of the Republican party's ideas of what can be done.

Cherry to Give Women Voice in Party

The Democratic gubernatorial nominee said Saturday that he would propose a change in rules to the state convention next week to allow equal representation to women on the state committee.

In other weekend actions, Cherry

1. Named Jonesboro Attorney W. B. Howard as tempoary chairman and keynote speaker for the state convention; chose Earl Williams of Fayetteville for temporary secretary; selected Jack Daily of Ft. Smith for permanent chairman, and Mack West of Paragould for permanent secretary.
2. Announced that Dr. Granville Davis, president of Little Rock Junior College, will make the welcoming address at the convention.
3. Said he would announce the first of his prospective appointees, five members of the Highway Commission, around Oct. 15.
4. Said Rep. Carroll Hollensworth of Bradley County was "acceptable" to him as speaker of the House in the 1953 General Assembly.

The Democratic State Committee, except for its three officers, is composed of a man and woman from each congressional district, plus one member from each judicial district. The officers, including one woman the vice chairman, are chosen from the state at large.

Cherry said he would propose that two members be named from each judicial district and require that one be a woman. This would increase the committee's membership from 32 to 50.

Cherry said he had not made a choice for the vice chairman, which by party rules must be a woman. He previously said he wanted Leffel Gentry of Little Rock, his campaign manager, for chairman, and a Little Rock court reporter, William P. Bill Bowen, for secretary.

Cherry declined to name any of [illegible] and would say only that he would name the five highway commissioners including one woman, before Oct. 15.

Hollensworth, a veteran member of the legislature, has claimed enough pledges to assure his election as speaker.

"I said before the election that I would work with anybody the House elected," commented Cherry "understand that Mr. Hollensworth has enough pledges to get the job if he wants it. That is agreeable to me. Certainly, he is acceptable."

Home Buyers Can Make Own Loan Terms Now

By FRANK O'BRIEN

WASHINGTON (AP)—Starting now you are free to buy a new house on whatever terms you can arrange, without any government supervision or regulation.

The Federal Reserve Board cut home buyers and purchasers of commercial property loose yesterday when it suspended Regulation X. That is the government order that since October, 1950, had set official limits on the amount of credit lenders could give in home and commercial sales.

Regulation X applied only to new buildings.

Simultaneously the Housing and Home Finance Agency (HHFA) announced it was loosening its regulations governing credit in home sales where government loans or guarantees are a part of the transaction.

These moves followed notice by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to the Federal Reserve Board and the HHFA yesterday that housing construction during June, July and August indicated that not more than 1,200,000 units would be started during the year.

Under amendments to the 1952 Defense Production Act, Regulation X had to be lifted if housing starts during three consecutive months, adjusted on a seasonal basis, pointed to fewer than 1,200,000 new homes or apartments in a year's building.

The Federal Reserve Board suspended Regulation X without comment.

But Housing Administrator Raymond M. Foley made it clear in a statement that he was not happy to open the credit dikes on government-backed housing. He suggested that Regulation X might have to be reimposed later on.

In the amendments which provided for suspension of Regulation X, Congress also provided that if during any three months housing starts went above 1,200,000 on an annual basis the government could put the regulation back into force. This, however, is not mandatory.

Regulation X, which went out last midnight required a down payment of at least 5 per cent on houses selling for $7,000 or less.

It imposed ever-higher down payment requirements as the sale price of the house went up, reaching 40 pr cent on houses selling for $25,000 or more.

In commercial building, Regulation X imposed a 50 per cent down payment requirement no matter what the cost of the strucure.

As a guarantee that the down-payment requirements would not be sidetracked, Regulation X forbade second mortgages.

Lewis Shaping Up Strike of Coal Miners

WASHINGTON (AP) — John L. Lewis appeared today to be shaping up an early strike of about 300,000 Eastern soft coal miners in a divide-and-conquer strategy against coal producers ....

But the United Mine Workers chief said a walkout isn't likely to produce a national emergency among coal users.

Breaking his silence on a month of private negotiations, Lewis sternly reported to newsmen yesterday he has reached a "most disturbing" impasse with Northern soft coal operators, with only four more days to go before their present contract expires Saturday.

Similarly, Lewis said, "no conclusions" have been reached in frequent talks with Southern soft coal producers, whose contract expires Sept. 30.

Lewis plainly implied both groups of mines would be shut down as their contracts run out. Traditionally, the miners don't work without a contract.

Together, the two groups turn out about 70 per cent of the nation's coal — or seven million tons a week. About 200,000 miners work in the Northern group, 100,000 in the Southern.

More Than Forty Cars Pledged to Make Tour

The Retail Merchants of the Hope Chamber of Commerce met at their weekly breakfast yesterday morning with some 25 business men and women present, the largest crowd to date.

Chairman Syvelle Burke presided and the report on the Goodwill Tour advertising the Third District Livestock Show was made by Herbert Burns, chairman of the tour committee. Committee members reported that some 40 people have already agreed to go and drive their cars in the caravan. The goal of at least 50 cars in the caravan seems almost in reach and any one who can possibly make the tour is urged to be present at the coliseum Wednesday morning at 7:30 a.m.

Some of the details for the Stock Show street parade scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Wednesday afternoon, September 24, were discussed. Parade chairman Frank Douglas was not present but sent the list of the appointment committees to be read and everyone present indicated their whole-hearted support.

Mr. Burke then introduced Mr. Bob Shivers, manager of the Third District Livestock Show, who outlined in general the program of activities scheduled for the Livestock Show. Mr. Shivers said that the gate admission will be 15 and 30 cents but there will be several free attractions inside the show grounds such as the Curtiss Candy Company Six Pony Hitch, and the Arkansas State Game and Fish Commission display.

State GOP Duel for Power Out in Open

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A duel for power in Arkansas' Republican Party smoldering undercover since the pre-national convention battle for the GOP presidential nomination, flamed into the open yesterday.

Two old line leaders of the state party, Wallace Townsend and Osro Cobb, bluntly warned a newcomer to the hierarchy, Gubernatorial Candidate Jeff Speck, to stay in line with the regular organization.

Speck promptly replied that Townsend and Cobb were trying to "repudiate" him and charged that they didn't want the Republicans to carry Arkansas in November.

The feud between the Old Guard and supporters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had been reported by newspapers as simmering below the surface of party organization since Ike won the presidential nomination from Sen. Robert A. Taft.

Arkansas party leaders, led by National Committeeman Townsend, went down the line for Taft before the national convention and succeeded in holding Arkansas in the Ohio senator's camp. Cobb supported Gen. Douglas MacArthur, another favorite of the Old Guard.

Speck was one of Eisenhower's first supporters in Arkansas and helped lead an unsuccessful fight to give Arkansas' votes to Ike in the convention.

And it was Speck, an East Arkansas cotton planter making his second bid for the governor's chair, who fanned the fire of party discontent into open strife.

At a meeting of the American Legion here Saturday, Speck admitted that he has little chance to break Arkansas tradition and defeat Democrat Francis Cherry. But, he added:

"If Eisenhower is elected, we're

Marine Flyers Die as Planes Hit Mountain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps announced today that six fighter pilots flew into a cloud shrouded hillside in Korea last Thursday and were killed.

An announcement said the pilots, flying Panther jets, were returning from a combat mission in bad weather and were trying to approach a strange landing field.

No further details were given.

GOP to Make T-H Law More Unfair - Truman

NEW YORK (AP)— President Truman told the American Federation of Labor today that plans are afoot to "make the Taft-Hartley law even more oppressive and unfair" to labor if the Republicans win in November.

In a message to the AFL's convention, the President said that "special interests are already grinding their axes for a fresh attack on labor in the event of a Republican victory."

He said he had "seen indication" that such "plans are afoot in Wall Street."

The message was aread at a session at which W. Averell Harriman, Mutual Security Administrator, was introduced as "the next secretary of state" by AFL President William Green.

Harriman, who at the Democratic convention in Chicago threw his delegate strength to Adlai Stevenson to help give him the nomination, has often been mentioned as a prospect for such an appointment if the Democrats win.

The AFL plans to endorse a presidential candidate. This morning, a lengthy resolution to give the endorsement to Stevenson was introduced into a committee on resolutions.

The three-page Truman message reviewed his seven-year administration in regard to labor, and said:

"We have suffered certain losses, but by and large, we have beaten back the main attacks and we have made real progress. I do not know what things will be like in the future, but I am sure that they will be determined largely by the result of the election this year."

"There is little doubt in my mind that a definite plot was hatched at the close of the war," he said, "to smash, or at least cripple our trade union movement in a period of post-war reaction.

Russia Keeps Navy Base, China Railway

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced today that it is handing back control of Manchuria's vital Changchun Railway to Communist China this year but that Russia will continue to use the Manchurian naval base of Port Arthur — 190 miles west of Korea —until Japan signs a peace treaty with the Communists.

The new agreement, announced here by the Soviet news agency Tass, came at the conclusion of top-level Soviet-Chinese talks which have been going on here since Aug. 17.

The Tass announcement included three important points:

1. The new agreement on Port Arthur, which was occupied by Soviet forces at the end of World War II. Under the 30-year Russian-Chinese treaty of friendship signed in Moscow on Feb. 14, 1950, the Soviets agreed to get out of Port Arthur by the end of 1952. In a note published today Red China's 'sPremier and Foreign Minister Chou En-lai asked the Soviets to stay because in the absence of the Japanese peace treaty with the Communist Powers, "conditions have arisen dangerous for peace and favorable for a reiteration of Japanese aggression."

2. A communique said that "important political and economic questions concerning the relations" between the two countries were discussed. Details were not given. Under the 1950 pact, Russia granted China 300 million dollars in credits toward the purchase of materials and equipment from the Soviet Union. Western observers had suggested that China probably was asking for additional aid because of her expenses in the Korean War.

Furlough Granted to Slayer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov. Sid McMath today granted a 90-day furlough to Josh Creamer, 64, who was sentenced to 15 years in prison for second degree murder in Phillips County.

Creamer, according to a doctor's statement in the pardon board's report, was suffering a number of ailments and needed medical attention which could not be given at the state penitentiary.

APPEALS CASE

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Oak Ridge Minerals Inc., today appealed to the Arkansas Supreme Court from judgment of $12,951 awarded against it in Benton Chancery Court in favor of H. R. McKnight. The lower court held that McKnight was entitled to the money for services performed for the company.

Local Watermelons Amaze Citizens of Michigan

From the Detroit Times comes two clippings mailed in by Mrs. Ruby Dodge, formerly of Hope, about Hempstead Watermelons.

One pictures two youths smacking their lips over a huge melon—that weighed 100 pounds and 12 ounces and had been shipped from Hope to Muskegon, Mich.

The other:

"Robert Rich was working at his desk at Barry Steel Co., this a.m. when in rolled an express company hand truck. Aboard was a 132-pound package for Bob from a pal in Hope, Ark. It was a watermelon, the biggest melon Bob had ever seen in his life. The thing weighed 123 pounds and was almost 7 feet around.

"Everybody just stood around and looked at the thing. Bob called his home and his wife was aghast and his 4-year-old daughter was enchanted, said she wished a lot of boys and girls could eat it.

"That gave Bob an idea. He called back the express company and is shipping the giant on to Children's Hospital.

Ching Resigns, Cole to Take Over Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cyrus S. Ching is resigning as director of the Federal Mediation Service, effective Sept. 30. He will be succeeded by David L. Cole, 50, a Patterson, N. J., lawyer.

President Truman announced the change yesterday in releasing a "Dear Cy" letter accepting Ching's resignation. Ching, 76, has been director of the mediation and conciliation service since 1947. He told the President "the time has come when I must of necessity give some consideration and attention to my personal affairs."

Cole has served on special federal boards dealing with union-management relations on several occasions. He is a former chairman of the New Jersey State Board of Mediation.

Truman also announced the appointment of Charles C. Killingsworth of Michigan to be a public member and vice chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — President Truman issued a new appeal today for blood donations, saying the reserve supplies are dangerously low.

In a prepared speech to the American Hospital Association, the President asserted:

"The suppy of blood needed for our troops in Korea, for the patients in your hospitals here at home, and for civil defense reserves is dangerously low. I appeal again to every American to give blood if he can."

J. M. Reed who operates several individual washing laundries in Arkansas is a new addition to the business fraternity in Hope.

"I decided to expand my operations to include Hope because I have been so well impressed by your fine community and its future possibilities," Mr. Reed said.

Mr. Reed is owner of the large and well known National Laundry and Cleaners in Hot Springs. He also owns and operates the National Laundry Cleaners in Benton in addition to other diversified business activities.

"Our program is simple," said Reed. "We are bringing big city economical laundry quality and service to the people of Hope. We know they will enjoy our quick service and our new methods that now permits washing each family laundry bundle all by itself and without marking the fine linen," he continued.

"We have just finished installing the latest equipment for dry cleaning. This dry cleaning plant is second to none in the state. We are offering the Sanitone method of dry cleaning, which is nationally advertised in all the leading magazines in the United States & Canada. There is a great difference in this method of dry cleaning — a difference that the customers can feel and see for themselves," he further stated.

"We will have a grand opening with interesting prizes in the near future. We want the people of Hope to see and understand our new Milnor home-like laundering Of course, I also want to personally meet as many people of Hope as possible," he said.

Mr. Reed recently took over the plant formerly known as Hope Steam Laundry at 406 S. Walnut Street which will be known in the future as the National Laundry Cleaners. New and modern equipment is being installed and operators are being trained in the new methods. Complete alternations and additions in this plant will be completed in the near future. In the meantime usual services are being offered. Formal notice of the grand opening will be made in The Hope Star soon.

"We look forward to serving this community in the same way we have done elsewhere," Mr. Reed said.

750 Involved; All Installations Are Destroyed

WAKE ISLAND, (UP) — Emergency rescue planes stood by today for a mass evacuation of this tiny mid-Pacific island after it was "leveled" by a violent 138-mile-an hour typhoon.

Mountainous seas, fed by the destructive storm which struck without warning yesterday, washed over the whole island.

The Navy said 90 per cent of the island's facilities were destroyed, "several" persons were injured and all communications from Wake were distrupted for eight hours.

Virtually every building on the island was reported wiped out and costly commercial air line and military installations were uprooted by gales and torrents of rain.

Most of Wake was still under water 17 hours after the typhoon struck. The island's 750 inhabitants huddled for shelter in trenches and foxholes used by the Japanese in World War II.

The island residents, most of them employes of American air line firms and service personnel also were forced to seek refuge in grounded planes.

A Pan American World Airways official radioed that all of the line's facilities on the island were "destroyed."

"All personnel must be evacuated," he said.

Commercial companies and military rescue groups readied planes at Honolulu, Tokyo, and Kwajalein island to fly emergency flights to Wake.

Airport runways on the island were so severely damaged in the violent storm that the evacuation planes were ordered not to attempt the trip until after sunrise.

Daylight was expected on Guam at about 11:40 a. m. PDT (2:40 p. m. EDT).

Reports indicated workers on the island had used a previously-devised typhoon disaster plan and thereby had kept the casualty toll small.

The Navy said the storm had passed on to the northeast of Wake but strong winds were still sweeping the island.

Pan American officials said one of the line's clippers, identified as an airlift plane, had made intermittent radio contact with Andersen Air Force Base here.

The clipper's crew reportedly

Governor Will Address Democrats

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Judge Francis Cherry yesterday invited outgoing Gov. Sid McMath to speak at the opening session of the Democratic State Convention beginning here Friday.

McMath, who lost his bid for nomination to a third term to Cherry, promptly accepted.

Leffel Gentry, campaign manager for Cherry in the summer primaries and the gubernatorial nominee's choice for chairman of the state committee, said yesterday afternoon that McMath had been invited to speak.

Earlier yesterday, McMath told a news conference that he had not been asked to address the convention, a traditional chore of outgoing governors.

However, McMath returned yesterday from a vacation in Canada and Minnesota, and Cherry explained that he had not been able to reach the governor previously.

Cherry emphasized that no slight against McMath had been intended. He said McMath would have as much time as himself to address the delegates and [illegible] speak on [illegible]

Mundt Visions Big Saving on Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican victory, says Sen. Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, would bring a 20-billion-dollar cut in the national budget based on economies in military and foreign aid spending as well as in the domestic field.

Mundt, co-chairman of the Republican Speakers Bureau, opposed his Democratic party counterpart, Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma, in an NBC radio-television debate last night.

Speaking on "American Forum of the Air," Mundt cited statements by Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, GOP presidential nominee, that Republicans would cut 20 billions off the budget, now about 85 billions.

"We are going to do that," Mundt said, "in the first place by reducing sharply our military expenditures through substituting efficiency for waste. . . .

"In the second place, by substituting for a policy of containment of communism abroad a positive, forward-moving program. . . designed to get our friends to help themselves rather than trying to put the burdens of 44 foreign countries on the taxpayers' shoulders in America. . . .

"We are going to do it on the domestic front by cutting corruption out of government."

Monroney said he doubted Eisenhower's "attitude on cutting down the military will correspondend with Sen. Mundt's branch of the Republican party's ideas of what can be done.

Cherry to Give Women Voice in Party

The Democratic gubernatorial nominee said Saturday that he would propose a change in rules to the state convention next week to allow equal representation to women on the state committee.

In other weekend actions, Cherry

1. Named Jonesboro Attorney W. B. Howard as tempoary chairman and keynote speaker for the state convention; chose Earl Williams of Fayetteville for temporary secretary; selected Jack Daily of Ft. Smith for permanent chairman, and Mack West of Paragould for permanent secretary.

2. Announced that Dr. Granville Davis, president of Little Rock Junior College, will make the welcoming address at the convention.

3. Said he would announce the first of his prospective appointees, five members of the Highway Commission, around Oct. 15.

4. Said Rep. Carroll Hollensworth of Bradley County was "acceptable" to him as speaker of the House in the 1953 General Assembly.

The Democratic State Committee, except for its three officers, is composed of a man and woman from each congressional district, plus one member from each judicial district. The officers, including one woman the vice chairman, are chosen from the state at large.

Cherry said he would propose that two members be named from each judicial district and require that one be a woman. This would increase the committee's membership from 32 to 50.

Cherry said he had not made a choice for the vice chairman, which by party rules must be a woman. He previously said he wanted Leffel Gentry of Little Rock, his campaign manager, for chairman, and a Little Rock court reporter, William P. Bill Bowen, for secretary.

Cherry declined to name any of [illegible] and would say only that he would name the five highway commissioners including one woman, before Oct. 15.

Hollensworth, a veteran member of the legislature, has claimed enough pledges to assure his election as speaker.

"I said before the election that I would work with anybody the House elected," commented Cherry "understand that Mr. Hollensworth has enough pledges to get the job if he wants it. That is agreeable to me. Certainly, he is acceptable."

By FRANK O'BRIEN

WASHINGTON (AP)—Starting now you are free to buy a new house on whatever terms you can arrange, without any government supervision or regulation.

The Federal Reserve Board cut home buyers and purchasers of commercial property loose yesterday when it suspended Regulation X. That is the government order that since October, 1950, had set official limits on the amount of credit lenders could give in home and commercial sales.

Regulation X applied only to new buildings.

Simultaneously the Housing and Home Finance Agency (HHFA) announced it was loosening its regulations governing credit in home sales where government loans or guarantees are a part of the transaction.

These moves followed notice by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to the Federal Reserve Board and the HHFA yesterday that housing construction during June, July and August indicated that not more than 1,200,000 units would be started during the year.

Under amendments to the 1952 Defense Produection Act, Regulation X had to be lifted if housing starts during three consecutive months, adjusted on a seasonal basis, pointed to fewer than 1,200,000 new homes or apartments in a year's building.

The Federal Reserve Board suspended Regulation X without comment.

But Housing Administrator Raymond M. Foley made it clear in a statement that he was not happy to open the credit dikes on government-backed housing. He suggested that Regulation X might have to be reimposed later on.

In the amendments which provided for suspension of Regulation X, Congress also provided that if during any three months housing starts went above 1,200,000 on an annual basis the government could put the regulation back into force. This, however, is not mandatory.

Regulation X, which went out last midnight required a down payment of at least 5 per cent on houses selling for $7,000 or less.

It imposed ever-higher down payment requirements as the sale price of the house went up, reaching 40 pr cent on houses selling for $25,000 or more.

In commercial building, Regulation X imposed a 50 per cent down payment requirement no matter what the cost of the strucure.

As a guarantee that the down-payment requirements would not be sidetracked, Regulation X forbade second mortgages.

Lewis Shaping Up Strike of Coal Miners

WASHINGTON (AP) — John L. Lewis appeared today to be shaping up an early strike of about 300,000 Eastern soft coal miners in a divide-and-conquer strategy against coal producers ......

But the United Mine Workers chief said a walkout isn't likely to produce a national emergency among coal users.

Breaking his silence on a month of private negotiations, Lewis sternly reported to newsmen yesterday he has reached a "most disturbing" impasse with Northern soft coal operators, with only four more days to go before their present contract expires Saturday.

Similarly, Lewis said, "no conclusions" have been reached in frequent talks with Southern soft coal producers, whose contract expires Sept. 30.

Lewis plainly implied both groups of mines would be shut down as their contracts run out. Traditionally, the miners don't work without a contract.

Together, the two groups turn out about 70 per cent of the nation's coal — or seven million tons a week. About 200,000 miners work in the Northern group, 100,000 in the Southern.

More Than Forty Cars Pledged to Make Tour

The Retail Merchants of the Hope Chamber of Commerce met at their weekly breakfast yesterday morning with some 25 business men and women present, the largest crowd to date.

Chairman Syvelle Burke presided and the report on the Goodwill Tour advertising the Third District Livestock Show was made by Herbert Burns, chairman of the tour committee. Committee members reported that some 40 people have already agreed to go and drive their cars in the caravan. The goal of at least 50 cars in the caravan seems almost in reach and any one who can possibly make the tour is urged to be present at the coliseum Wednesday morning at 7:30 a.m.

Some of the details for the Stock Show street parade scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Wednesday afternoon, September 24, were discussed. Parade chairman Frank Douglas was not present but sent the list of the appointment committees to be read and everyone present indicated their whole-hearted support.

Mr. Burke then introduced Mr. Bob Shivers, manager of the Third District Livestock Show, who outlined in general the program of activities scheduled for the Livestock Show. Mr. Shivers said that the gate admission will be 15 and 30 cents but there will be several free attractions inside the show grounds such as the Curtiss Candy Company Six Pony Hitch, and the Arkansas State Game and Fish Commission display.

State GOP Duel for Power Out in Open

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A duel for power in Arkansas' Republican Party smoldering undercover since the pre-national convention battle for the GOP presidential nomination, flamed into the open yesterday.

Two old line leaders of the state party, Wallace Townsend and Osro Cobb, bluntly warned a newcomer to the hierarchy, Gubernatorial Candidate Jeff Speck, to stay in line with the regular organization.

Speck promptly replied that Townsend and Cobb were trying to "repudiate" him and charged that they didn't want the Republicans to carry Arkansas in November.

The feud between the Old Guard and supporters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had been reported by newspapers as simmering below the surface of party organization since Ike won the presidential nomination from Sen. Robert A. Taft.

Arkansas party leaders, led by National Committeeman Townsend, went down the line for Taft before the national convention and succeeded in holding Arkansas in the Ohio senator's camp. Cobb supported Gen. Douglas MacArthur, another favorite of the Old Guard.

Speck was one of Eisenhower's first supporters in Arkansas and helped lead an unsuccessful fight to give Arkansas' votes to Ike in the convention.

And it was Speck, an East Arkansas cotton planter making his second bid for the governor's chair, who fanned the fire of party discontent into open strife.

At a meeting of the American Legion here Saturday, Speck admitted that he has little chance to break Arkansas tradition and defeat Democrat Francis Cherry. But, he added:

"If Eisenhower is elected, we're

GOP to Make T-H Law More Unfair – Truman

NEW YORK (AP) — President Truman told the American Federation of Labor today that plans are afoot to "make the Taft-Hartley law even more oppressive and unfair" to labor if the Republicans win in November.

In a message to the AFL's convention, the President said that "special interests are already grinding their axes for a fresh attack on labor in the event of a Republican victory."

He said he had "seen indication" that such "plans are afoot in Wall Street."

The message was aread at a session at which W. Averell Harriman, Mutual Security Administrator, was introduced as "the next secretary of state" by AFL President William Green.

Harriman, who at the Democratic convention in Chicago threw his delegate strength to Adlai Stevenson to help give him the nomination, has often been mentioned as a prospect for such an appointment if the Democrats win.

The AFL plans to endorse a presidential candidate. This morning, a lengthy resolution to give the endorsement to Stevenson was introduced into a committee on resolutions.

The three-page Truman message reviewed his seven-year administration in regard to labor, and said:

"We have suffered certain losses, but by and large, we have beaten back the main attacks and we have made real progress. I do not know what things will be like in the future, but I am sure that they will be determined largely by the result of the election this year."

"There is little doubt in my mind that a definite plot was hatched at the close of the war," he said, "to smash, or at least cripple our trade union movement in a period of post-war reaction.

Russia Keeps Navy Base, China Railway

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced today that it is handing back control of Manchuria's vital Changchun Railway to Communist China this year but that Russia will continue to use the Manchurian naval base of Port Arthur — 100 miles west of Korea — until Japan signs a peace treaty with the Communists.

The new agreement, announced here by the Soviet news agency Tass, came at the conclusion of top-level Soviet-Chinese talks which have been going on here since Aug. 17.

The Tass announcement included three important points:

1. The new agreement on Port Arthur, which was occupied by Soviet forces at the end of World War II. Under the 30-year Russian-Chinese treaty of friendship signed in Moscow on Feb. 14, 1950, the Soviets agreed to get out of Port Arthur by the end of 1952. In a note published today Red China's sPremier and Foreign Minister Chou En-lai asked the Soviets to stay because in the absence of the Japanese peace treaty with the Communist Powers, "conditions have arisen dangerous for peace and favorable for a reiteration of Japanese aggression."

2. A communique said that "important political and economic questions concerning the relations" between the two countries were discussed. Details were not given. Under the 1950 pact, Russia granted China 300 million dollars in credits toward the purchase of materials and equipment from the Soviet Union. Western observers had suggested that China probably was asking for additional aid because of her expenses in the Korean War.

Furlough Granted to Slayer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov. Sid McMath today granted a 90-day furlough to Josh Creamer, 64, who was sentenced to 15 years in prison for second degree murder in Phillips County.

Creamer, according to a doctor's statement in the pardon board's report, was suffering a number of ailments and needed medical attention which could not be given at the state penitentiary.

APPEALS CASE

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Oak Ridge Minerals Inc., today appealed to the Arkansas Supreme Court from judgment of $12,951 awarded against it in Benton Chancery Court in favor of H. R. McKnight. The lower court held that McKnight was entitled to the money for services performed for the company.

Local Watermelons Amaze Citizens of Michigan

From the Detroit Times comes two clippings mailed in by Mrs. Ruby Dodge, formerly of Hope, about Hempstead Watermelons.

One pictures two youths smacking their lips over a huge melon—that weighed 100 pounds and 12 ounces and had been shipped from Hope to Muskegon, Mich.

The other:

"Robert Rich was working at his desk at Barry Steel Co., this a.m. when in rolled an express company hand truck. Aboard was a 132-pound package for Bob from a pal in Hope, Ark. It was a watermelon, the biggest melon Bob had ever seen in his life. The thing weighed 123 pounds and was almost 7 feet around.

"Everybody just stood around and looked at the thing. Bob called his home and his wife was aghast and his 4-year-old daughter was enchanted, said she wished a lot of boys and girls could eat it.

"That gave Bob an idea. He called back the express company and is shipping the giant on to Children's Hospital.

Ching Resigns, Cole to Take Over Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cyrus S. Ching is resigning as director of the Federal Mediation Service, effective Sept. 30. He will be succeeded by David L. Cole, 50, a Patterson, N. J., lawyer.

President Truman announced the change yesterday in releasing a "Dear Cy" letter accepting Ching's resignation. Ching, 76, has been director of the mediation and conciliation service since 1947. He told the President "the time has come when I must of necessity give some consideration and attention to my personal affairs."

Cole has served on special federal boards dealing with union-management relations on several occasions. He is a former chairman of the New Jersey State Board of Mediation.

Truman also announced the appointment of Charles C. Killingsworth of Michigan to be a public member and vice chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board.

750 Involved; All Installations Are Destroyed

WAKE ISLAND, (UP) — Emergency rescue planes stood by today for a mass evacuation of this tiny mid-Pacific island after it was "leveled" by a violent 138-mile-an-hour typhoon.

Mountainous seas, fed by the destructive storm which struck without warning yesterday, washed over the whole island.

The Navy said 90 per cent of the island's facilities were destroyed, "several" persons were injured and all communications from Wake were distrupted for eight hours.

Virtually every building on the island was reported wiped out and costly commercial air line and military installations were uprooted by gales and torrents of rain.

Most of Wake was still under water 17 hours after the typhoon struck. The island's 750 inhabitants huddled for shelter in trenches and foxholes used by the Japanese in World War II.

The island residents, most of them employes of American air line firms and service personnel also were forced to seek refuge in grounded planes.

A Pan American World Airways official radioed that all of the line's facilities on the island were "destroyed."

"All personnel must be evacuated," he said.

Commercial companies and military rescue groups readied planes at Honolulu, Tokyo, and Kwajalein island to fly emergency flights to Wake.

Airport runways on the island were so severely damaged in the violent storm that the evacuation planes were ordered not to attempt the trip until after sunrise.

Daylight was expected on Guam at about 11:40 a. m. PDT (2:40 p. m. EDT).

Reports indicated workers on the island had used a previously-devised typhoon disaster plan and thereby had kept the casualty toll small.

The Navy said the storm had passed on to the northeast of Wake but strong winds were still sweeping the island.

The clipper's crew reported [illegible]

Mundt Visions Big Saving on Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican victory, says Sen. Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, would bring a 20-billion-dollar cut in the national budget based on economies in military and foreign aid spending as well as in the domestic field.

Mundt, co-chairman of the Republican Speakers Bureau, opposed his Democratic party counterpart, Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma, in an NBC radio-television debate last night.

Speaking on "American Forum of the Air," Mundt cited statements by Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, GOP presidential nominee, that Republicans would cut 20 billions off the budget, now about 85 billions.

"We are going to do that," Mundt said, "in the first place by reducing sharply our military expenditures through substituting efficiency for waste. . . .

"In the second place, by substituting for a policy of containment of communism abroad a positive, forward-moving program. . . designed to get our friends to help themselves rather than trying to put the burdens of 44 foreign countries on the taxpayers' shoulders in America. . . .

Monroney said he doubted Eisenhower's "attitude on cutting down the military will correspondend with Sen. Mundt's branch of the Republican party's ideas of what can be done.

Cherry to Give Women Voice in Party

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Judge Francis Cherry wants to give Arkansas women a large voice in Democratic party affairs.

The Democratic gubernatorial nominee said Saturday that he would propose a change in rules to the state convention next week to allow equal representation to women on the state committee.

In other weekend actions, Cherry

1. Named Jonesboro Attorney W. B. Howard as tempoary chairman and keynote speaker for the state convention; chose Earl Williams of Fayetteville for temporary secretary; selected Jack Daily of Ft. Smith for permanent chairman, and Mack West of Paragould for permanent secretary.

2. Announced that Dr. Granville Davis, president of Little Rock Junior College, will make the welcoming address at the convention.

3. Said he would announce the first of his prospective appointees, five members of the Highway Commission, around Oct. 15.

4. Said Rep. Carroll Hollensworth of Bradley County was "acceptable" to him as speaker of the House in the 1953 General Assembly.

The Democratic State Committee, except for its three officers, is composed of a man and woman from each congressional district, plus one member from each judicial district. The officers, including one woman the vice chairman, are chosen from the state at large.

Cherry said he would propose that two members be named from each judicial district and require that one be a woman. This would increase the committee's membership from 32 to 50.

Cherry said he had not made a choice for the vice chairman, which by party rules must be a woman. He previously said he wanted Leffel Gentry of Little Rock, his campaign manager, for chairman, and a Little Rock court reporter, William R. Bill Bowen, for secretary.

Cherry declined to name any of his prospective appointees and would say only that he would name the five highway commissioners including one woman, before Oct. 15.

Hollensworth, a veteran member of the legislature, has claimed enough pledges to assure his election as speaker.

"I said before the election that I would work with anybody the House elected," commented Cherry "understand that Mr. Hollensworth has enough pledges to get the job if he wants it. That is agreeable to me. Certainly, he is acceptable."

By FRANK O'BRIEN

WASHINGTON (AP)—Starting now you are free to buy a new house on whatever terms you can arrange, without any government supervision or regulation.

The Federal Reserve Board cut home buyers and purchasers of commercial property loose yesterday when it suspended Regulation X. That is the government order that since October, 1950, had set official limits on the amount of credit lenders could give in home and commercial sales.

Regulation X applied only to new buildings.

Simultaneously the Housing and Home Finance Agency (HHFA) announced it was loosening its regulations governing credit in home sales where government loans or guarantees are a part of the transaction.

These moves followed notice by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to the Federal Reserve Board and the HHFA yesterday that housing construction during June, July and August indicated that not more than 1,200,000 units would be started during the year.

Under amendments to the 1952 Defense Produection Act, Regulation X had to be lifted if housing starts during three consecutive months, adjusted on a seasonal basis, pointed to fewer than 1,200,000 new homes or apartments in a year's building.

The Federal Reserve Board suspended Regulation X without comment.

But Housing Administrator Raymond M. Foley made it clear in a statement that he was not happy to open the credit dikes on government-backed housing. He suggested that Regulation X might have to be reimposed later on.

In the amendments which provided for suspension of Regulation X, Congress also provided that if during any three months housing starts went above 1,200,000 on an annual basis the government could put the regulation back into force. This, however, is not mandatory.

Regulation X, which went out last midnight required a down payment of at least 5 per cent on houses selling for $7,000 or less.

It imposed ever-higher down payment requirements as the sale price of the house went up, reaching 40 pr cent on houses selling for $25,000 or more.

In commercial building, Regulation X imposed a 50 per cent down payment requirement no matter what the cost of the strucure.

As a guarantee that the down-payment requirements would not be sidetracked, Regulation X forbade second mortgages.

Lewis Shaping Up Strike of Coal Miners

WASHINGTON (AP) — John L. Lewis appeared today to be shaping up an early strike of about 300,000 Eastern soft coal miners in a divide-and-conquer strategy against coal producers ....

But the United Mine Workers chief said a walkout isn't likely to produce a national emergency among coal users.

Breaking his silence on a month of private negotiations, Lewis sternly reported to newsmen yesterday he has reached a "most disturbing" impasse with Northern soft coal operators, with only four more days to go before their present contract expires Saturday.

Similarly, Lewis said, "no conclusions" have been reached in frequent talks with Southern soft coal producers, whose contract expires Sept. 30.

Lewis plainly implied both groups of mines would be shut down as their contracts run out. Traditionally, the miners don't work without a contract.

Together, the two groups turn out about 70 per cent of the nation's coal — or seven million tons a week. About 200,000 miners work in the Northern group, 100,000 in the Southern.

More Than Forty Cars Pledged to Make Tour

The Retail Merchants of the Hope Chamber of Commerce met at their weekly breakfast yesterday morning with some 25 business men and women present, the largest crowd to date.

Chairman Syvelle Burke presided and the report on the Goodwill Tour advertising the Third District Livestock Show was made by Herbert Burns, chairman of the tour committee. Committee members reported that some 40 people have already agreed to go and drive their cars in the caravan. The goal of at least 50 cars in the caravan seems almost in reach and any one who can possibly make the tour is urged to be present at the coliseum Wednesday morning at 7:30 a.m.

Some of the details for the Stock Show street parade scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Wednesday afternoon, September 24, were discussed. Parade chairman Frank Douglas was not present but sent the list of the appointment committees to be read and everyone present indicated their whole-hearted support.

Mr. Burke then introduced Mr. Bob Shivers, manager of the Third District Livestock Show, who outlined in general the program of activities scheduled for the Livestock Show. Mr. Shivers said that the gate admission will be 15 and 30 cents but there will be several free attractions inside the show grounds such as the Curtiss Candy Company Six Pony Hitch, and the Arkansas State Game and Fish Commission display.

State GOP Duel for Power Out in Open

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A duel for power in Arkansas' Republican Party smoldering undercover since the pre-national convention battle for the GOP presidential nomination, flamed into the open yesterday.

Two old line leaders of the state party, Wallace Townsend and Osro Cobb, bluntly warned a newcomer to the hierarchy, Gubernatorial Candidate Jeff Speck, to stay in line with the regular organization.

Speck promptly replied that Townsend and Cobb were trying to "repudiate" him and charged that they didn't want the Republicans to carry Arkansas in November.

The feud between the Old Guard and supporters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had been reported by newspapers as simmering below the surface of party organization since Ike won the presidential nomination from Sen. Robert A. Taft.

Arkansas party leaders, led by National Committeeman Townsend, went down the line for Taft before the national convention and succeeded in holding Arkansas in the Ohio senator's camp. Cobb supported' Gen. Douglas MacArthur, another favorite of the Old Guard.

Speck was one of Eisenhower's first supporters in Arkansas and helped lead an unsuccessful fight to give Arkansas' votes to Ike in the convention.

And it was Speck, an East Arkansas cotton planter making his second bid for the governor's chair, who fanned the fire of party discontent into open strife.

At a meeting of the American Legion here Saturday, Speck admitted that he has little chance to break Arkansas tradition and defeat Democrat Francis Cherry. But, he added:

"If Eisenhower is elected, we're

Marine Flyers Die as Planes Hit Mountain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps announced today that six fighter pilots flew into a cloud shrouded hillside in Korea last Thursday and were killed.

An announcement said the pilots, flying Panther jets, were returning from a combat mission in bad weather and were trying to approach a strange landing field.

No further details were given.

On return flights from combat missions, pilots frequently fly in follow the leader order. This may have been the case with the six.

GOP to Make T-H Law More Unfair – Truman

NEW YORK (AP)— President Truman told the American Federation of Labor today that plans are afoot to "make the Taft-Hartley law even more oppressive and unfair" to labor if the Republicans win in November.

In a message to the AFL's convention, the President said that "special interests are already grinding their axes for a fresh attack on labor in the event of a Republican victory."

He said he had "seen indication" that such "plans are afoot in Wall Street."

The message was aread at a session at which W. Averell Harriman, Mutual Security Administrator, was introduced as "the next secretary of state" by AFL President William Green.

Harriman, who at the Democratic convention in Chicago threw his delegate strength to Adlai Stevenson to help give him the nomination, has often been mentioned as a prospect for such an appointment if the Democrats win.

The AFL plans to endorse a presidential candidate. This morning, a lengthy resolution to give the endorsement to Stevenson was introduced into a committee on resolutions.

The three-page Truman message reviewed his seven-year administration in regard to labor, and said:

"We have suffered certain losses, but by and large, we have beaten back the main attacks and we have made real progress. I do not know what things will be like in the future, but I am sure that they will be determined largely by the result of the election this year."

"There is little doubt in my mind that a definite plot was hatched at the close of the war," he said, "to smash, or at least cripple our trade union movement in a period of post-war reaction.

Russia Keeps Navy Base, China Railway

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced today that it is handing back control of Manchuria's vital Changchun Railway to Communist China this year but that Russia will continue to use the Manchurian naval base of Port Arthur — 190 miles west of Korea —until Japan signs a peace treaty with the Communists.

The new agreement, announced here by the Soviet news agency Tass, came at the conclusion of top-level Soviet-Chinese talks which have been going on here since Aug. 17.

The Tass announcement included three important points:

1. The new agreement on Port Arthur, which was occupied by Soviet forces at the end of World War II. Under the 30-year Russian-Chinese treaty of friendship signed in Moscow on Feb. 14, 1950, the Soviets agreed to get out of Port Arthur by the end of 1952. In a note published today Red China's 'sPremier and Foreign Minister Chou En-lai asked the Soviets to stay because in the absence of the Japanese peace treaty with the Communist Powers, "conditions have arisen dangerous for peace and favorable for a reiteration of Japanese aggression."

2. A communique said that "important political and economic questions concerning the relations" between the two countries were discussed. Details were not given. Under the 1950 pact, Russia granted China 300 million dollars in credits toward the purchase of materials and equipment from the Soviet Union. Western observers had suggested that China probably was asking for additional aid because of her expenses in the Korean War.

Furlough Granted to Slayer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov. Sid McMath today granted a 90-day furlough to Josh Creamer, 64, who was sentenced to 15 years in prison for second degree murder in Phillips County.

Creamer, according to a doctor's statement in the pardon board's report, was suffering a number of ailments and needed medical attention which could not be given at the state penitentiary.

APPEALS CASE

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Oak Ridge Minerals Inc., today appealed to the Arkansas Supreme Court from judgment of $12,951 awarded against it in Benton Chancery Court in favor of H. R. McKnight

The lower court held that McKnight was entitled to the money for services performed for the company.

Local Watermelons Amaze Citizens of Michigan

From the Detroit Times comes two clippings mailed in by Mrs. Ruby Dodge, formerly of Hope, about Hempstead Watermelons.

One pictures two youths smacking their lips over a huge melon—that weighed 100 ponuds and 12 ounces and had been shipped from Hope to Muskegon, Mich.

The other:

"Robert Rich was working at his desk at Barry Steel Co., this a.m. when in rolled an express company hand truck. Aboard was a 132-pound package for Bob from a pal in Hope, Ark. It was a watermelon, the biggest melon Bob had ever seen in his life. The thing weighed 123 pounds and was almost 7 feet around.

"Everybody just stood around and looked at the thing. Bob called his home and his wife was aghast and his 4-year-old daughter was enchanted, said she wished a lot of boys and girls could eat it.

"That gave Bob an idea. He called back the express company and is shipping the giant on to Children's Hospital.

Ching Resigns, Cole to Take Over Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cyrus S. Ching is resigning as director of the Federal Mediation Service, effective Sept. 30. He will be succeeded by David L. Cole, 50, a Patterson, N. J., lawyer.

President Truman announced the change yesterday in releasing a "Dear Cy" letter accepting Ching's resignation. Ching, 76, has been director of the mediation and conciliation service since 1947. He told the President "the time has come when I must of necessity give some consideration and attention to my personal affairs."

Cole has served on special federal boards dealing with union-management relations on several occasions. He is a former chairman of the New Jersey State Board of Mediation.

Truman also announced the appointment of Charles C. Killingsworth of Michigan to be a public member and vice chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board.

Planes Set for Mass Evacuation of Typhoon Wrecked Wake Island

750 Involved; All Installations Are Destroyed

WAKE ISLAND, (UP) — Emergency rescue planes stood by today for a mass evacuation of this tiny mid-Pacific island after it was "leveled" by a violent 138-mile-an-hour typhoon.

Mountainous seas, fed by the destructive storm which struck without warning yesterday, washed over the whole island.

The Navy said 90 per cent of the island's facilities were destroyed, "several" persons were injured and all communications from Wake were distrupted for eight hours.

Virtually every building on the island was reported wiped out and costly commercial air line and military installations were uprooted by gales and torrents of rain.

Most of Wake was still under water 17 hours after the typhoon struck. The island's 750 inhabitants huddled for shelter in trenches and foxholes used by the Japanese in World War II.

The island residents, most of them employes of American air line firms and service personnel, also were forced to seek refuge in grounded planes.

A Pan American World Airways official radioed that "all of the line's facilities on the island were "destroyed."

"All personnel must be evacuated," he said.

Commercial companies and military rescue groups readied planes at Honolulu, Tokyo, and Kwajalein island to fly emergency flights to Wake.

Airport runways on the island were so severely damaged in the violent storm that the evacuation planes were ordered not to attempt the trip until after sunrise.

Daylight was expected on Guam at about 11:40 a. m. PDT (2:40 p. m. EDT).

Reports indicated workers on the island had used a previously-devised typhoon disaster plan and thereby had kept the casualty toll small.

The Navy said the storm had passed on to the northeast of Wake but strong winds were still sweeping the island.

Pan American officials said one of the line's clippers, identified as an airlift plane, had made intermittent radio contact with Andersen Air Force Base here.

The clipper's crew reportedly

Governor Will Address Democrats

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Judge Francis Cherry yesterday invited outgoing Gov. Sid McMath to speak at the opening session of the Democratic State Convention beginning here Friday.

McMath, who lost his bid for nomination to a third term to Cherry, promptly accepted.

Leffel Gentry, campaign manager for Cherry in the summer primaries and the gubernatorial nominee's choice for chairman of the state committee, said yesterday afternoon that McMath had been invited to speak.

Earlier yesterday, McMath told a news conference that he had not been asked to address the convention, a traditional chore for outgoing governors.

However, McMath returned only yesterday from a vacation in Canada and Minnesota, and Gentry explained that he had not been able to reach the governor previously.

Cherry emphasized that no [illegible] against McMath had been intended. He said McMath would have as much time as himself to address the delegates, and could speak on "any subject he wants."

Mundt Visions Big Saving on Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican victory, says Sen. Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, would bring a 20-billion-dollar cut in the national budget based on economies in military and foreign aid spending as well as in the domestic field.

Mundt, co-chairman of the Republican Speakers Bureau, opposed his Democratic party counterpart, Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma, in an NBC radio-television debate last night.

Speaking on "American Forum of the Air," Mundt cited statements by Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, GOP presidential nominee, that Republicans would cut 20 billions off the budget, now about 85 billions.

"We are going to do that," Mundt said, "in the first place by reducing sharply our military expenditures through substituting efficiency for waste. . . .

"In the second place, by substituting for a policy of containment of communism abroad a positive, forward-moving program. . . designed to get our friends to help themselves rather than trying to put the burdens of 44 foreign countries on the taxpayers' shoulders in America. . . .

"We are going to do it on the domestic front by cutting corruption out of government."

Monroney said he doubted Eisenhower's "attitude on cutting down the military will correspondend with Sen. Mundt's branch of the Republican party's ideas of what can be done.

Cherry to Give Women Voice in Party

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Judge Francis Cherry wants to give Arkansas women a large voice in Democratic party affairs.

The Democratic gubernatorial nominee said Saturday that he would propose a change in rules to the state convention next week to allow equal representation to women on the state committee.

In other weekend actions, Cherry

1. Named Jonesboro Attorney W. B. Howard as tempoary chairman and keynote speaker for the state convention; chose Earl Williams of Fayetteville for temporary secretary; selected Jack Daily of Ft. Smith for permanent chairman, and Mack West of Paragould for permanent secretary.

2. Announced that Dr. Granville Davis, president of Little Rock junior College, will make the welcoming address at the convention.

3. Said he would announce the first of his prospective appointees, five members of the Highway Commission, around Oct. 15.

4. Said Rep. Carroll Hollensworth of Bradley County was "acceptable" to him as speaker of the House in the 1953 General Assembly.

The Democratic State Committee, except for its three officers, is composed of a man and woman from each congressional district, plus one member from each judicial district. The officers, including one woman the vice chairman, are chosen from the state at large.

Cherry said he would propose that two members be named from each judicial district and require that one be a woman. This would increase the committee's membership from 32 to 50.

Cherry said he had not made a choice for the vice chairman, which by party rules must be a woman. He previously said he wanted Leffel Gentry of Little Rock, his campaign manager, for chairman, and a Little Rock court reporter, William R. Bill Bowen, for secretary.

Cherry declined to name any of [illegible] and would say only that he would name the five highway commissioners including one woman, before Oct. 15.

Hollensworth, a veteran member of the legislature, has claimed enough pledges to assure his election as speaker.

"I said before the election that I would work with anybody the House elected," commented Cherry "understand that Mr. Hollensworth has enough pledges to get the job if he wants it. That is agreeable to me. Certainly, he is acceptable."

Planes Set for Mass Evacuation of Typhoon Wrecked Wake Island

750 Involved; All Installations Are Destroyed

WAKE ISLAND, (UP) — Emergency rescue planes stood by today for a mass evacuation of this tiny mid-Pacific island after it was "leveled" by a violent 138-mile-an-hour typhoon.

Mountainous seas, fed by the destructive storm which struck without warning yesterday, washed over the whole island.

The Navy said 90 per cent of the island's facilities were destroyed, "several" persons were injured and all communications from Wake were disrupted for eight hours.

Virtually every building on the island was reported wiped out and costly commercial air line and military installations were uprooted by gales and torrents of rain.

Most of Wake was still under water 17 hours after the typhoon struck. The island's 750 inhabitants huddled for shelter in trenches and foxholes used by the Japanese in World War II.

The island residents, most of them employes of American air line firms and service personnel, also were forced to seek refuge in grounded planes.

A Pan American World Airways official radioed that "all of the line's facilities on the island were "destroyed."

"All personnel must be evacuated," he said.

Commercial companies and military rescue groups readied planes at Honolulu, Tokyo, and Kwajalein island to fly emergency flights to Wake.

Airport runways on the island were so severely damaged in the violent storm that the evacuation planes were ordered not to attempt the trip until after sunrise.

Daylight was expected on Guam at about 11:40 a. m. PDT (2:40 p. m. EDT).

Reports indicated workers on the island had used a previously-devised typhoon disaster plan and thereby had kept the casualty toll small.

The Navy said the storm had passed on to the northeast of Wake but strong winds were still sweeping the island.

Pan American officials said one of the line's clippers, identified as an airlift plane, had made intermittent radio contact with Andersen Air Force Base here.

The clipper's crew reportedly

By FRANK O'BRIEN

WASHINGTON (AP)—Starting now you are free to buy a new house on whatever terms you can arrange, without any government supervision or regulation.

The Federal Reserve Board cut home buyers and purchasers of commercial property loose yesterday when it suspended Regulation X. That is the government order that since October, 1950, had set official limits on the amount of credit lenders could give in home and commercial sales.

Regulation X applied only to new buildings.

Simultaneously the Housing and Home Finance Agency (HHFA) announced it was loosening its regulations governing credit in home sales where government loans or guarantees are a part of the transaction.

These moves followed notice by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to the Federal Reserve Board and the HHFA yesterday that housing construction during June, July and August indicated that not more than 1,200,000 units would be started during the year.

Under amendments to the 1952 Defense Produdction Act, Regulation X had to be lifted if housing starts during three consecutive months, adjusted on a seasonal basis, pointed to fewer than 1,200,000 new homes or apartments in a year's building.

The Federal Reserve Board suspended Regulation X without comment.

But Housing Administrator Raymond M. Foley made it clear in a statement that he was not happy to open the credit dikes on government-backed housing. He suggested that Regulation X might have to be reimposed later on.

In the amendments which provided for suspension of Regulation X, Congress also provided that if during any three months housing starts went above 1,200,000 on an annual basis the government could put the regulation back into force. This, however, is not mandatory.

Regulation X, which went out last midnight required a down payment of at least 5 per cent on houses selling for $7,000 or less.

It imposed ever-higher down payment requirements as the sale price of the house went up, reaching 40 pr cent on houses selling for $25,000 or more.

In commercial building, Regulation X imposed a 50 per cent down payment requirement no matter what the cost of the strucure.

As a guarantee that the down-payment requirements would not be sidetracked, Regulation X forbade second mortgages.

Lewis Shaping Up Strike of Coal Miners

WASHINGTON (AP) — John L. Lewis appeared today to be shaping up an early strike of about 300,000 Eastern soft coal miners in a divide-and-conquer strategy against coal producers ....

But the United Mine Workers chief said a walkout isn't likely to produce a national emergency among coal users.

Breaking his silence on a month of private negotiations, Lewis sternly reported to newsmen yesterday he has reached a "most disturbing" impasse with Northern soft coal operators, with only four more days to go before their present contract expires Saturday.

Similarly, Lewis said, "no conclusions" have been reached in frequent talks with Southern soft coal producers, whose contract expires Sept. 30.

Lewis plainly implied both groups of mines would be shut down as their contracts run out. Traditionally, the miners don't work without a contract.

Together, the two groups turn out about 70 per cent of the nation's coal — or seven million tons a week. About 200,000 miners work in the Northern group, 100,000 in the Southern.

More Than Forty Cars Pledged to Make Tour

The Retail Merchants of the Hope Chamber of Commerce met at their weekly breakfast yesterday morning with some 25 business men and women present, the largest crowd to date.

Chairman Syvelle Burke presided and the report on the Goodwill Tour advertising the Third District Livestick Show was made by Herbert Burns, chairman of the tour committee. Committee members reported that some 40 people have already agreed to go and drive their cars in the caravan. The goal of at least 50 cars in the caravan seems almost in reach and any one who can possibly make the tour is urged to be present at the coliseum Wednesday morning at 7:30 a.m.

Some of the details for the Stock Show street parade scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Wednesday afternoon, September 24, were discussed. Parade chairman Frank Douglas was not present but sent the list of the appointment committees to be read and everyone present indicated their whole-hearted support.

Mr. Burke then introduced Mr. Bob Shivers, manager of the Third District Livestock Show, who outlined in general the program of activities scheduled for the Livestock Show. Mr. Shivers said that the gate admission will be 15 and 30 cents but there will be several free attractions inside the show grounds such as the Curtiss Candy Company Six Pony Hitch, and the Arkansas State Game and Fish Commission display.

State GOP Duel for Power Out in Open

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A duel for power in Arkansas' Republican Party smoldering undercover since the pre-national convention battle for the GOP presidential nomination, flamed into the open yesterday.

Two old line leaders of the state party, Wallace Townsend and Osro Cobb, bluntly warned a newcomer to the hierarchy, Gubernatorial Candidate Jeff Speck, to stay in line with the regular organization.

Speck promptly replied that Townsend and Cobb were trying to "repudiate" him and charged that they didn't want the Republicans to carry Arkansas in November.

The feud between the Old Guard and supporters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had been reported by newspapers as simmering below the surface of party organization since Ike won the presidential nomination from Sen. Robert A. Taft.

Arkansas party leaders, led by National Committeeman Townsend, went down the line for Taft before the national convention and succeeded in holding Arkansas in the Ohio senator's camp. Cobb supported Gen. Douglas MacArthur, another favorite of the Old Guard.

Speck was one of Eisenhower's first supporters in Arkansas and helped lead an unsuccessful fight to give Arkansas' votes to Ike in the convention.

And it was Speck, an East Arkansas cotton planter making his second bid for the governor's chair, who fanned the fire of party discontent into open strife.

At a meeting of the American Legion here Saturday, Speck admitted that he has little chance to break Arkansas tradition and defeat Democrat Francis Cherry. But, he added:

"If Eisenhower is elected, we're

Marine Flyers Die as Planes Hit Mountain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps announced today that six fighter pilots flew into a cloud shrouded hillside in Korea last Thursday and were killed.

GOP to Make T-H Law More Unfair - Truman

NEW YORK (AP)— President Truman told the American Federation of Labor today that plans are afoot to "make the Taft-Hartley law even more oppressive and unfair" to labor if the Republicans win in November.

In a message to the AFL's convention, the President said that "special interests are already grinding their axes for a fresh attack on labor in the event of a Republican victory."

He said he had "seen indication" that such "plans are afoot in Wall Street."

The message was aread at a session at which W. Averell Harriman, Mutual Security Administrator, was introduced as "the next secretary of state" by AFL President William Green.

Harriman, who at the Democratic convention in Chicago threw his delegate strength to Adlai Stevenson to help give him the nomination, has often been mentioned as a prospect for such an appointment if the Democrats win.

The AFL plans to endorse a presidential candidate. This morning, a lengthy resolution to give the endorsement to Stevenson was introduced into a committee on resolutions.

The three-page Truman message reviewed his seven-year administration in regard to labor, and said:

"We have suffered certain losses, but by and large, we have beaten back the main attacks and we have made real progress. I do not know what things will be like in the future, but I am sure that they will be determined largely by the result of the election this year."

"There is little doubt in my mind that a definite plot was hatched at the close of the war," he said, "to smash, or at least cripple our trade union movement in a period of post-war reaction.

Russia Keeps Navy Base, China Railway

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced today that it is handing back control of Manchuria's vital Changchun Railway to Communist China this year but that Russia will continue to use the Manchurian naval base of Port Arthur — 190 miles west of Korea —until Japan signs a peace treaty with the Communists.

The new agreement, announced here by the Soviet news agency Tass, came at the conclusion of top-level Soviet-Chinese talks which have been going on here since Aug. 17.

The Tass announcement included three important points:

1. The new agreement on Port Arthur, which was occupied by Soviet forces at the end of World War II. Under the 30-year Russian-Chinese treaty of friendship signed in Moscow on Feb. 14, 1950, the Soviets agreed to get out of Port Arthur by the end of 1952. In a note published today Red China's 'sPremier and Foreign Minister Chou En-lai asked the Soviets to stay because in the absence of the Japanese peace treaty with the Communist Powers, "conditions have arisen dangerous for peace and favorable for a reiteration of Japanese aggression."

2. A communique said that "important political and economic questions concerning the relations" between the two countries were discussed. Details were not given. Under the 1950 pact, Russia granted China 300 million dollars in credits toward the purchase of materials and equipment from the Soviet Union. Western observers had suggested that China probably was asking for additional aid because of her expenses in the Korean War.

Local Watermelons Amaze Citizens of Michigan

From the Detroit Times comes two clippings mailed in by Mrs. Ruby Dodge, formerly of Hope, about Hempstead Watermelons.

One pictures two youths smacking their lips over a huge melon—that weighed 100 ponuds and 12 ounces and had been shipped from Hope to Muskegon, Mich.

The other:

"Robert Rich was working at his desk at Barry Steel Co., this a.m. when in rolled an express company hand truck. Aboard was a 132-pound package for Bob from a pal in Hope, Ark. It was a watermelon, the biggest melon Bob had ever seen in his life. The thing weighed 123 pounds and was almost 7 feet around.

"Everybody just stood around and looked at the thing. Bob called his home and his wife was aghast and his 4-year-old daughter was enchanted, said she wished a lot of boys and girls could eat it.

"That gave Bob an idea. He called back the express company and is shipping the giant on to Children's Hospital.

Ching Resigns, Cole to Take Over Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cyrus S. Ching is resigning as director of the Federal Mediation Service, effective Sept. 30. He will be succeeded by David L. Cole, 50, a Patterson, N. J., lawyer.

President Truman announced the change yesterday in releasing a "Dear Cy" letter accepting Ching's resignation. Ching, 76, has been director of the mediation and conciliation service since 1947. He told the President "the time has come when I must of necessity give some consideration and attention to my personal affairs."

Cole has served on special federal boards dealing with union-management relations on several occasions. He is a former chairman of the New Jersey State Board of Mediation.

Truman also announced the appointment of Charles C. Killingsworth of Michigan to be a public member and vice chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board.

Mundt Visions Big Saving on Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican victory, says Sen. Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, would bring a 20-billion-dollar cut in the national budget based on economies in military and foreign aid spending as well as in the domestic field.

Mundt, co-chairman of the Republican Speakers Bureau, opposed his Democratic party counterpart, Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma, in an NBC radio-television debate last night.

Speaking on "American Forum of the Air," Mundt cited statements by Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, GOP presidential nominee, that Republicans would cut 20 billions off the budget, now about 85 billions.

"We are going to do that," Mundt said, "in the first place by reducing sharply our military expenditures through substituting efficiency for waste. . . .

"In the second place, by substituting for a policy of containment of communism abroad a positive, forward-moving program. . . designed to get our friends to help themselves rather than trying to put the burdens of 44 foreign countries on the taxpayers' shoulders in America. . . .

"We are going to do it on the domestic front by cutting corruption out of government."

Monroney said he doubted Eisenhower's "attitude on cutting down the military will correspondend with Sen. Mundt's branch of the Republican party's ideas of what can be done.

Cherry to Give Women Voice in Party

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Judge Francis Cherry wants to give Arkansas women a large voice in Democratic party affairs.

The Democratic gubernatorial nominee said Saturday that he would propose a change in rules to the state convention next week to allow equal representation to women on the state committee.

In other weekend actions, Cherry

1. Named Jonesboro Attorney W. B. Howard as tempoary chairman and keynote speaker for the state convention; chose Earl Williams of Fayetteville for temporary secretary; selected Jack Daily of Ft. Smith for permanent chairman, and Mack West of Paragould for permanent secretary.

2. Announced that Dr. Granville Davis, president of Little Rock Junior College, will make the welcoming address at the convention.

3. Said he would announce the first of his prospective appointees, five members of the Highway Commission, around Oct. 15.

4. Said Rep. Carroll Hollensworth of Bradley County was "acceptable" to him as speaker of the House in the 1953 General Assembly.

The Democratic State Committee, except for its three officers, is composed of a man and woman from each congressional district, plus one member from each judicial district. The officers, including one woman the vice chairman, are chosen from the state at large.

Cherry said he would propose that two members be named from each judicial district and require that one be a woman. This would increase the committee's membership from 32 to 50.

Cherry said he had not made a choice for the vice chairman, which by party rules must be a woman. He previously said he wanted Leffel Gentry of Little Rock, his campaign manager, for chairman, and a Little Rock court reporter, William R. Bill Bowen, for secretary.

Cherry declined to name any of [illegible] would say only that he would name the five highway commissioners including one woman, before Oct. 15.

Hollensworth, a veteran member of the legislature, has claimed enough pledges to assure his election as speaker.

"I said before the election that I would work with anybody the House elected," commented Cherry "understand that Mr. Hollensworth has enough pledges to get the job if he wants it. That is agreeable to me. Certainly, he is acceptable."

Planes Set for Mass Evacuation of Typhoon Wrecked Wake Island

750 Involved; All Installations Are Destroyed

WAKE ISLAND, (UP) — Emergency rescue planes stood by today for a mass evacuation of this tiny mid-Pacific island after it was "leveled" by a violent 138-mile-an-hour typhoon.

Mountainous seas, fed by the destructive storm which struck without warning yesterday, washed over the whole island.

The Navy said 90 per cent of the island's facilities were destroyed, "several" persons were injured and all communications from Wake were distrupted for eight hours.

Virtually every building on the island was reported wiped out and costly commercial air line and military installations were uprooted by gales and torrents of rain.

Most of Wake was still under water 17 hours after the typhoon struck. The island's 750 inhabitants huddled for shelter in trenches and foxholes used by the Japanese in World War II.

The island residents, most of them employes of American air line firms and service personnel also were forced to seek refuge in grounded planes.

A Pan American World Airways official radioed that all of the line's facilities on the island were "destroyed."

"All personnel must be evacuated," he said.

Commercial companies and military rescue groups readied planes at Honolulu, Tokyo, and Kwajalein island to fly emergency flights to Wake.

Airport runways on the island were so severely damaged in the violent storm that the evacuation planes were ordered not to attempt the trip until after sunrise.

Daylight was expected on Guam at about 11:40 a. m. PDT (2:40 p. m. EDT).

Reports indicated workers on the island had used a previously-devised typhoon disaster plan and thereby had kept the casualty toll small.

The Navy said the storm had passed on to the northeast of Wake but strong winds were still sweeping the island.

Pan American officials said one of the line's clippers, identified as an airlift plane, had made intermittent radio contact with Andersen Air Force Base here.

The clipper's crew reportedly

By FRANK O'BRIEN

WASHINGTON (AP)—Starting now you are free to buy a new house on whatever terms you can arrange, without any government supervision or regulation.

The Federal Reserve Board cut home buyers and purchasers of commercial property loose yesterday when it suspended Regulation X. That is the government order that since October, 1950, had set official limits on the amount of credit lenders could give in home and commercial sales.

Regulation X applied only to new buildings.

Simultaneously the Housing and Home Finance Agency (HHFA) announced it was loosening its regulations governing credit in home sales where government loans or guarantees are a part of the transaction.

These moves followed notice by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to the Federal Reserve Board and the HHFA yesterday that housing construction during June, July and August indicated that not more than 1,200,000 units would be started during the year.

Under amendments to the 1952 Defense Prodeuction Act, Regulation X had to be lifted if housing starts during three consecutive months, adjusted on a seasonal basis, pointed to fewer than 1,200,000 new homes or apartments in a year's building.

The Federal Reserve Board suspended Regulation X without comment.

But Housing Administrator Raymond M. Foley made it clear in a statement that he was not happy to open the credit dikes on government-backed housing. He suggested that Regulation X might have to be reimposed later on.

In the amendments which provided for suspension of Regulation X, Congress also provided that if during any three months housing starts went above 1,200,000 on an annual basis the government could put the regulation back into force. This, however, is not mandatory.

Regulation X, which went out last midnight required a down payment of at least 5 per cent on houses selling for $7,000 or less.

It imposed ever-higher down payment requirements as the sale price of the house went up, reaching 40 pr cent on houses selling for $25,000 or more.

In commercial building, Regulation X imposed a 50 per cent down payment requirement no matter what the cost of the strucure.

As a guarantee that the down-payment requirements would not be sidetracked, Regulation X forbade second mortgages.

More Than Forty Cars Pledged to Make Tour

The Retail Merchants of the Hope Chamber of Commerce met at their weekly breakfast yesterday morning with some 25 business men and women present, the largest crowd to date.

Chairman Syvelle Burke presided and the report on the Goodwill Tour advertising the Third District Livestick Show was made by Herbert Burns, chairman of the tour committee. Committee members reported that some 40 people have already agreed to go and drive their cars in the caravan. The goal of at least 50 cars in the caravan seems almost in reach and any one who can possibly make the tour is urged to be present at the coliseum Wednesday morning at 7:30 a.m.

Some of the details for the Stock Show street parade scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Wednesday afternoon, September 24, were discussed. Parade chairman Frank Douglas was not present but sent the list of the appointment committees to be read and everyone present indicated their whole-hearted support.

Mr. Burke then introduced Mr. Bob Shivers, manager of the Third District Livestock Show, who outlined in general the program of activities scheduled for the Livestock Show. Mr. Shivers said that the gate admission will be 15 and 30 cents but there will be several free attractions inside the show grounds such as the Curtiss Candy Company Six Pony Hitch, and the Arkansas State Game and Fish Commission display.

GOP to Make T-H Law More Unfair – Truman

NEW YORK (AP)— President Truman told the American Federation of Labor today that plans are afoot to "make the Taft-Hartley law even more oppressive and unfair" to labor if the Republicans win in November.

In a message to the AFL's convention, the President said that "special interests are already grinding their axes for a fresh attack on labor in the event of a Republican victory."

He said he had "seen indication" that such "plans are afoot in Wall Street."

The message was aread at a session at which W. Averell Harriman, Mutual Security Administrator, was introduced as "the next secretary of state" by AFL President William Green.

Harriman, who at the Democratic convention in Chicago threw his delegate strength to Adlai Stevenson to help give him the nomination, has often been mentioned as a prospect for such an appointment if the Democrats win.

The AFL plans to endorse a presidential candidate. This morning, a lengthy resolution to give the endorsement to Stevenson was introduced into a committee on resolutions.

The three-page Truman message reviewed his seven-year administration in regard to labor, and said:

"We have suffered certain losses, but by and large, we have beaten back the main attacks and we have made real progress. I do not know what things will be like in the future, but I am sure that they will be determined largely by the result of the election this year."

"There is little doubt in my mind that a definite plot was hatched at the close of the war," he said, "to smash, or at least cripple our trade union movement in a period of post-war reaction.

Local Watermelons Amaze Citizens of Michigan

From the Detroit Times comes two clippings mailed in by Mrs. Ruby Dodge, formerly of Hope, about Hempstead Watermelons.

One pictures two youths smacking their lips over a huge melon—that weighed 100 ponuds and 12 ounces and had been shipped from Hope to Muskegon, Mich.

The other:

"Robert Rich was working at his desk at Barry Steel Co., this a.m. when in rolled an express company hand truck. Aboard was a 132-pound package for Bob from a pal in Hope, Ark. It was a watermelon, the biggest melon Bob had ever seen in his life. The thing weighed 123 pounds and was almost 7 feet around.

"Everybody just stood around and looked at the thing. Bob called his home and his wife was aghast and his 4-year-old daughter was enchanted, said she wished a lot of boys and girls could eat it.

"That gave Bob an idea. He called back the express company and is shipping the giant on to Children's Hospital.

Ching Resigns, Cole to Take Over Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cyrus S. Ching is resigning as director of the Federal Mediation Service, effective Sept. 30. He will be succeeded by David L. Cole, 50, a Patterson, N. J., lawyer.

President Truman announced the change yesterday in releasing a "Dear Cy" letter accepting Ching's resignation. Ching, 76, has been director of the mediation and conciliation service since 1947. He told the President "the time has come when I must of necessity give some consideration and attention to my personal affairs."

Cole has served on special federal boards dealing with union-management relations on several occasions. He is a former chairman of the New Jersey State Board of Mediation.

Truman also announced the appointment of Charles C. Killingsworth of Michigan to be a public member and vice chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board.

Governor Will Address Democrats

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Judge Francis Cherry yesterday invited outgoing Gov. Sid McMath to speak at the opening session of the Democratic State Convention beginning here Friday.

McMath, who lost his bid for nomination to a third term to Cherry, promptly accepted.

Leffel Gentry, campaign manager for Cherry in the summer primaries and the gubenatorial nominee's choice for chairman of the state committee, said yesterday afternoon that McMath had been invited to speak.

Earlier yesterday, McMath told a news conference that he had not been asked to address the convention, a traditional chore for outgoing governors.

However, McMath returned only yesterday from a vacation in Canada and Minnesota, and Cherry explained that he had not been able to reach the governor previously.

Cherry emphasized that no slight against McMath had been intended. He said McMath would have as much time as himself to address the delegates and could speak on "any subject he wants

State GOP Duel for Power Out in Open

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A duel for power in Arkansas' Republican Party smoldering undercover since the pre-national convention battle for the GOP presidential nomination, flamed into the open yesterday.

Two old line leaders of the state party, Wallace Townsend and Osro Cobb, bluntly warned a newcomer to the hierarchy, Gubernatorial Candidate Jeff Speck, to stay in line with the regular organization.

Speck promptly replied that Townsend and Cobb were trying to "repudiate" him and charged that they didn't want the Republicans to carry Arkansas in November.

The feud between the Old Guard and supporters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had been reported by newspapers as simmering below the surface of party organization since Ike won the presidential nomination from Sen. Robert A. Taft.

Arkansas party leaders, led by National Committeeman Townsend, went down the line for Taft before the national convention and succeeded in holding Arkansas in the Ohio senator's camp. Cobb supported Gen. Douglas MacArthur, another favorite of the Old Guard.

Speck was one of Eisenhower's first supporters in Arkansas and helped lead an unsuccessful fight to give Arkansas' votes to Ike in the convention.

And it was Speck, an East Arkansas cotton planter making his second bid for the governor's chair, who fanned the fire of party discontent into open strife.

At a meeting of the American Legion here Saturday, Speck admitted that he has little chance to break Arkansas tradition and defeat Democrat Francis Cherry. But, he added:

"If Eisenhower is elected, we're

Lewis Shaping Up Strike of Coal Miners

WASHINGTON (AP) — John L. Lewis appeared today to be shaping up an early strike of about 300,000 Eastern soft coal miners in a divide-and-conquer strategy against coal producers ....

But the United Mine Workers chief said a walkout isn't likely to produce a national emergency among coal users.

Breaking his silence on a month of private negotiations, Lewis sternly reported to newsmen yesterday he has reached a "most disturbing" impasse with Northern soft coal operators, with only four more days to go before their present contract expires Saturday.

Similarly, Lewis said, "no conclusions" have been reached in frequent talks with Southern soft coal producers, whose contract expires Sept. 30.

Lewis plainly implied both groups of mines would be shut down as their contracts run out. Traditionally, the miners don't work without a contract.

Together, the two groups turn out about 70 per cent of the nation's coal — or seven million tons a week. About 200,000 miners work in the Northern group, 100,000 in the Southern.

Marine Flyers Die as Planes Hit Mountain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps announced today that six fighter pilots flew into a cloud shrouded hillside in Korea last Thursday and were killed.

An announcement said the pilots, flying Panther jets, were returning from a combat mission in bad weather and were trying to approach a strange landing field.

No further details were given.

On return flights from combat missions, pilots frequently fly in follow the leader order. This may have been the case with the six.

Russia Keeps Navy Base, China Railway

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced today that it is handing back control of Manchuria's vital Changchun Railway to Communist China this year but that Russia will continue to use the Manchurian naval base of Port Arthur — 190 miles west of Korea —until Japan signs a peace treaty with the Communists.

The new agreement, announced here by the Soviet news agency Tass, came at the conclusion of top-level Soviet-Chinese talks which have been going on here since Aug. 17.

The Tass announcement included three important points:

1. The new agreement on Port Arthur, which was occupied by Soviet forces at the end of World War II. Under the 30-year Russian-Chinese treaty of friendship signed in Moscow on Feb. 14, 1950, the Soviets agreed to get out of Port Arthur by the end of 1952. In a note published today Red China's 'sPremier and Foreign Minister Chou En-lai asked the Soviets to stay because in the absence of the Japanese peace treaty with the Communist Powers, "conditions have arisen dangerous for peace and favorable for a reiteration of Japanese aggression."

2. A communique said that "important political and economic questions concerning the relations" between the two countries were discussed. Details were not given. Under the 1950 pact, Russia granted China 300 million dollars in credits toward the purchase of materials and equipment from the Soviet Union. Western observers had suggested that China probably was asking for additional aid because of her expenses in the Korean War.

Truman Appeals for Blood Donations

In a prepared speech to the American Hospital Association, the President asserted:

"The suppy of blood needed for our troops in Korea, for the patients in your hospitals here at home, and for civil defense reserves is dangerously low. I appeal again to every American to give blood if he can."

Editors Say West Leans Toward Ike

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP)—The Mountain and Western states, almost as [illegible] Democratic as the South in presidential elections over the last [illegible] years, now are regarded by editors and correspondents as leaning [illegible] but still a 1952 toss-up.

[illegible] Press survey, [illegible] on individual county estimates by editors and political [illegible] each state, indicates [illegible] opinion is that only [illegible] states could be considered reasonably safe for the [illegible] if the election were [illegible] time. The Democrats captured 1? of the 11 in 1948.

If present trends hold good through Nov. 4 —and many of the [illegible] still must be kept on the [illegible] list —the newspaper men say the 79 electoral votes of the Mountain and Western states would line up this way behind the presidential nominees:

The Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower: California 32, Oregon 6, [illegible] 5, Idaho 4, Utah 4, [illegible], Montana 4, Nevada [illegible] 3. Total 60.

[illegible] Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson: Arizona 4.

Uncertain: Colorado 6.

[illegible] surveys of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware, released yesterday, indicate that editors and political writers hold a composite belief that if the people were voting today the 108 electoral ballots of those five states would go to Eisenhower by a narrow margin.

The Eastern votes, plus 60 from the West, would give the GOP nominee 174 of the 266 needed to [illegible] victory.

But in the West, as in the East, [illegible] slight shifting of the political [illegible] could blow almost any [illegible] in an entirely different direction by the time Nov. 4 rolls around.

The views of editors and correspondents in the Mountain and Western region add up to an opinion that most of the states are so close at this point as to be very much in doubt.

Editors report a widespread feeling among the people that it's time for a change. They speak also of "too much Trumanism," dissatisfaction with inflation, high taxes, foreign policy, war in Korea, corruption and Communism in government." To a much easier degree than in the Middle Atlantic states is there mention of Eisenhower's personal popularity as a campaign factor.

The composite view of 32 editors and writers who took soundings in Oregon was that Eisenhower would carry the state without much trouble, whereas Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York won it from President Truman in 1948 by less than 18,000 votes out of a total of more than 500,000 cast.

But that was before Stevenson brought his campaign into the state.

A Republican editor had said that in his county Stevenson's vote would "jump 20 per cent or more" if the Democratic nominee made even as much as one whistle stop there.

Editors and a Portland polling organization agreed that Stevenson did make gains as a result of invading Oregon last week. But these might be offset if Eisenhower shows up in Oregon on a personal appearance tour.

In Oregon, and in all other states, current political sentiment was tapped county by county with the cooperation of Associated Press member newspapers and radio stations and the help of other newspapers and local correspondents.

County estimates were combined into state estimates, with weight given to the voting power of the various counties.

The survey offers these views of political conditions in the Mountain and Western states as of now:

California —

Eisenhower would win by a slim margin in the opinion of California editors, if the polls were open today. But the margin is so slender that the state is considered doubtful.

President Truman captured it four years ago, but by about 18,000 votes out of a total of 3,800,000.

Oregon —

The only Western state to go Republican in 1948 is considered by Oregon editors as likely to be a repeater in 1952.

Those taking part in the survey provided estimates for 25 of 36 counties which will cast 90 per cent of the estimated vote.

Washington —

New and independent voters may determine the winner in a race in which the consensus of Washington newspapers indicates Eisenhower now is leading by a whisker.

Of more than 30 daily and weekly newspapers that co-operated in the survey, 18 are supporting Eisenhower and none has come out for Stevenson.

This is your newspaper. Write to it. Letters criticizing the editorial policy or commenting upon facts in the news columns, are equally welcome. Every writer must sign his name and address but publication of name may be withheld if requested.

Dear Editor:

"Usually when we write a fire prevention storie for the public we continually plead for and advise that people exercise every possible precaution in preventing fires on the farm, pasture, meadows and in the forest. But in an answer to our several stories in the local papers seeking cooperation we feel this story should be a 'Thank You' note for the complete cooperation we have been receiving from the public in an effort to keep fires to a minimum.

"In all my 18 years in fire control work we have never received better cooperation from the public and as a result this section of the state to date hasn't suffered too heavily from fires. Therefore, we take this opportunity to Thank each and everyone for their splendid cooperation.

Cherry Opens Little Rock Office

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Democratic Gubernatorial Nominee Francis Cherry yesterday opened an office here and his campaign manager said it would be financed by contributions.

Leffel Gentry, who managed Cherry's successful campaign for the nomination over Gov. McMath, said it would cost an estimated $12,500 to operate the office until January.

"We have no campaign deficit and we have no debts," said Gentry. "We are telling each person who offers money that we have paid off our financial obligations to the campaign. We tell them we must operate on office until Mr. Cherry takes office in January and that if they want to contibute for that purpose the funds will be accepted."

Gentry said that when $12,500 was collected, "we will cease accepting contributions."

going to have a state governor — that's Mr. Cherry — and we're going to have a federal governor— that's me."

He pointed out that the Arkansas Old Guard had opposed Eisenhower, and said he would be the Republican boss of the state should the general win.

"When they, the Democrats, want anything from the federal government, they're going to have to come to me," boasted Speck.

Townsend and Cobb, in a statement, took a dim view of Speck's remarks, and warned that Speck "deserves substantial influence in our party affairs only so long as he is willing to channel his efforts through regular Republican organization."

Townsend and Cobb branded Speck's implication that Eisenhower would not do business with party officers in Arkansas as "wholly unfounded."

"From personal conversations Gen. Eisenhower and from his many public pronouncements, we know that he will not by-pass the state organization, the National Committee, or our delegation in congress in dealing with matters affecting this state," the two leaders said.

Reached last night at his home in Frenchmans Bayou, Speck centered his fire on Cobb.

"The action of Osro Cobb in trying to repudiate me in his news release is typical of 25 years of his leadership in keeping the Republican party a closed corporation in Arkansas," said Speck.

"I am sincerely convinced that he would not like to see Gen. Eisenhower carry Arkansas in the general election.

"If Eisenhower carries the state, as I believe he will, in spite of Osro Cobb, it will put the finishing blow to the closed corporation and put the Republican party in the hands of people who are in favor of 2-party politics."

Speck also said that he felt he was as much a part of the GOP organization as anyone else, and added that he was "the only man who got anything unanimously from the state convention."

Apparently, he was referring to [illegible]

U. S. Seeks Egyption in Cotton Deal

By JAMES F. DONOVAN

WASHINGTON, (UP) — The Justice Department's anti corruption drive developed an international angle today.

Department officials said they plan to ask the Egyptian government to send here for trial the cotton dealer who has been indicted with former Agriculture Department official Clovis D. Walker on charges of conspiring to defraud the United States.

They conceded, however, that extradition agreements between Egypt and this country may not apply to outfy Mansour of the Alexandria cotton firm of R. and E. Hurl & Co. They said Mansour is now presumed to be in Egypt.

If the Egyptian cannot be brought to trial, Walker, who resigned under fire last May from his job as head of the Agriculture Department's cotton branch, will stand trial alone. If convicted, he would be liable to a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

A federal grand jury returned the indictment against Walker and Mansour yesterday after an investigation under the supervision of Vincent P. Russo and William Gallagher, special assistants to Attorney General James P. McGranery.

The jury charged that Walker and Mansour had an illegal agreement whereby Walker leaked highly-secret information about government purchases of Egyptian cotton to Mansour, giving him an advantage over other dealers.

The jury named Dyke Cullum, Washington commodity broker, as a co-conspirator who participated in the agreement. The jury did not indict Cullum, but said he sometimes relayed the secret data from Walker to Mansour.

Much of the story already has been aired before the Senate Agriculture Committee by agriculture department investigators.

One investigator, Harold Mesibov, told the committee that Mansour sold about $37,000,000 worth of cotton to the agriculture department in 1951 and that his firm made a huge profit on the sales.

At a hearing last May, Walker conceded that he and Mansour were "good friends" and "traded" gifts. He denied giving Mansour advance information that would enable his firm to profit unduly.

Shortly after his appearance, the 60-year-old, Oklahoman resigned from the Agriculture Department. In his letter of resignation, he denied he was "guilty of any willful wrongdoing" but conceded there might be evidence to "indicate some indiscretion."

Russo, who has directed the Justice Department's investigation of the case, told newsmen he had read in a trade journal that Mansour said in Egypt sometime ago that he also wanted to deny there had been any wrong-doing by either himself or Walker.

Russo said the article mentioned that Mansour had broken his leg, preventing him from returning to the United States to vindicate himself and defend Walker. If Mansour is still anxious to defend himself in court, Russo said, this may be one way around any legal difficulties.

Stevenson Pictures Ike as Taft Victim

By MERRIMAN SMITH

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UP) —Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson today assembled for eastern consumption a political road show portraying Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-O) as the villain of the election campaign and Dwight D. Eisenhower as Taft's "surrender" victim.

As Taft starts stumping for Eisenhower, the GOP presidential nominee, Stevenson apparently intended to shift more of his campaign fire to the Ohioan than at Eisenhower himself.

Members of Stevenson's staff said the governor, who on Thursday will open a speaking tour into Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Virginia and Maryland, would step up his campaign to convince the electorate that Taft had "taken over" the Eisenhower campaign and turned the former general's "great crusade" into a "great surrender".

Stevenson cleared his schedule as much as possible of routine and engagements today to complete the speeches he will use in the East against his GOP opposition.

His strategy was based on the theory held by the Stevenson camp that Taft, for Democratic campaign purposes, at any rate, was as good a target as Eisenhower, and possibly somewhat better.

Consequently, the Illinois governor will continue to push his belief that, particularly in the field of foreign policy, Eisenhower was compelled to abandon some of his own ideas to those of Taft in order to win the senator's active campaign support.

Stevenson told a news conference yesterday:

"It now appears brutally clear that Senator Taft has taken over. This puts an entirely new aspect on the campaign and the election. I suspect many people like myself will be genuinely alarmed by the reduction of their differences on foreign policy to 'differences of degree.'"

Pension Program Up in Massachusetts

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts holds its primary election today with the interest of the voters stirred by a legislative battle over a rich pension program the legislators voted themselves last July and repealed earlier today.

There are few contests for the top nominations in both contests but widespread interest in the legislators' action is expected to draw out the biggest vote since the 1948 presidential election.

There are 2,480,000 voters in Massachusetts. Followers of state politics say today's turnout may exceed the 33 per cent who voted two years ago and may even approach the 47 per cent turnout of 1948.

Sen. Henry Cabo Lodge, Republican, has no competition in his bid for renomination. Neither has his Democratic opponent, U. S. Rep. John F. Kennedy.

Gov. Paul A. Dever (D), seeking a third term, also is unopposed as is his GOP opponent, U. S. Rep. Christian A. Herter.

There are Democratic contests in eight of the 14 congressional districts and Republican contests in four.

Polls close at 7 p. m. EST at the latest.

Rails Try Out Small TV Sets

CHICAGO (AP)— Pintsized television went railroading today to show how it might save wear and tear on both rolling stock and personnel.

The new uses of television were under exploration here in tests conducted this afternoon by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the RCA Victor Division of Radio Corporation of America.

Placed into service were three small Vidicon industrial TV systems which are supposed to permit men in mixed locations to do jobs which normally would require extra movement of both men and freight cars.

The new wrinkle has the checker must walk among trains and over tracks to list car numbers on an incoming train to assign the cars to other trains headed for various sections of the country.

Mrs. McIntosh is the daughter of Mary Hockett McWilliams and the late Edwin McWilliams and is the great granddaughter of J. W. McWilliams of Shover Springs. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. McIntosh.

Identity of Indian Maid Is Sought

FT. WORTH Tex. (AP) — Kim, the self-designated Indian girl who was found Friday in woods near Ft. Worth, may be a youngster who disappeared two months ago from a girls camp in Connecticut.

Both Connecticut state police and the father of Connie Smith, who left the camp last July 16, were checking into the possibility late last night. She is the granddaughter of Nils H. Smith, a former governor of Wyoming.

Connie is only 10, but is well developed for her age and in other physical respects bears a resemblance to the girl who was found here.

Peter Smith, father of Connie, called the Ft. Worth Star-Telegram by telephone late last night from his ranch at Newcastle, Wyo., seeking information about the case. Told about Kim's appearance, he said the resemblance was striking and he planned to check into the matter today.

Kim, who said she was a member of an Iroquois Indian tribe living on a St. Regis River island between the United States and Canada, was at home last night on the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Bowen, near Antelope, Tex.

Their 1,200 acre ranch has no telephone, and Kim was unavailable for comment. Smith will try to make contact with the Bowens today.

Smith said that Connie had had an injury, and that she may be suffering from amnesia.

Tito Would Delay Trieste Decision

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Premier Marshal Tito says Italy and Yugoslavia should put aside their bitter dispute over Trieste until they can approach the question "with more sense."

"Let's co-operate on other questions which are of extreme importance such as assurance against aggression, economic exchanges and the preservation of the peace of the world," Tito said.

He spoke yesterday before an estimated crowd of 250,000 persons who had converged by truck and train on the little Slovene town of Delnjske Toplice to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the formation of a wartime partisan unit there.

The unyielding claims of both Italy and Yugoslavia to the free territory of Trieste, at the head of the Adriatic, have worried the Western Allies trying to promote co-operation between countries opposed to Soviet aggression.

Tito suggested that, pending a later approach to the Trieste question, Italy and Yugoslavia set up a joint administration for the territory. The disputed buffer region between the two nations now is divided into two zones, one administered by Yugoslavia and the other by Britain and the United States with Italian assistance.

New Russian Ambassador

Zarubin is expected to pay a formal call on Secretary of State Acheson in the next few days, before presenting his credentials to President Truman at the White House.

Morse Hints Big Split With Ike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Wayne Morse began drafting a speech today for the American Federation of Labor National Convention which may point up a major difference between him and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The Oregon Republican told newsmen he would not complete the text of his address until after he read Eisenhower's speech before the AFL Convention in New York tomorrow. Morse's talk is set for Thursday.

Morse, who describes himself as a constitutional liberal and frequently is in the opposite camp from many of his Republican Senate colleagues, was an early booster of Eisenhower for the GOP presidential nomination.

But he has announced he is highly dissatisfied with the turn the general's campaign has taken recently, particularly with the hearty reception given to Sen. Robert A Taft of Ohio.

Morse says that as matters now stand he will vote for Eisenhower and believes the GOP nominee will win the election, but that he plans no active campaign for him.

Morse lists the labor-management issue as one on which he has sharp differences with the Eisenhower camp. And he pats Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson on the back for his stand on this same question.

Morse favors a drastic rewriting of the Taft-Hartley Act. Stevenson has come out for Taft-Hartley repeal followed by a fresh start on a labor-management relations law a position Morse said was "sound."

Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor and an old friend of Morse, came here from Eisenhower headquarters in New York after Morse had indicated Saturday his coolness toward the GOP nominee.

After his talk with Stassen, Morse said his decision not to campaign actively this fall remained unchanged. The same went, he said, for his refusal to sit on the platform with Eisenhower at the AFL Convention.

Negro Singer Is Attacked

FT. LEE, N. J. (AP)—Pearl Bailey, Negro singing comedienne, was beaten early Monday by an unidentified man as she was leaving Bill Miller's Riviera, a swank night spot here.

Nathan Allyn, acting Bergen County detective chief, quoted the entertainer as saying that the man approached her in the lobby of the night club, cursed at her, grabbed her by the throat and beat her.

Miss Bailey broke away but her assailant chased her to behind the club's stage where he kicked her and knocked her down.

Others who were leaving the night spot came to her aid, but the man who beat Miss Bailey got away, Allyn said.

Her manager and attorney, Chauncey Olman, said Miss Bailey received possible concussion, bruises and cuts and was under medical care at her home.

Expectant Mother Loses Fight to Polio

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Mrs. Vincent E. Skillman Jr. lived through a rigorous 200-mile trip to a hospital here last night despite a faltering motor on the portable iron lung in which she was encased.

The 23-year old expectant mother and wife of a University of Arkansas student from Memphis died hours later at St. Vincent's Infirmary here from infantile paralysis.

Fayetteville Fire Department Fireman Merlin Bayer handpumped the portable respirator after it had failed during the trip by ambulance.

Death came to the woman after she was placed in a tank-type respirator at the hospital. Doctors had been unable to check her illness.

Mrs. Skillman was transferred fom the Washington County Hospital in Fayetteville to the Little Rock hospital when doctors learned the needed the tank-type respirator.

State Moves Out of AIC Conference

JONESBORO — Dr. Carl Reng, president of Arkansas State College, says the school is "not a member of the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference in football" and may not compete in the conference basketball race.

A second top State official — who declined use of his name, said yesterday that the school had not paid its dues and was not complying with new conference regulations against subsidization of athletes.

"We are not members of the AIC in football," commented Reng.

Asked if State would be a member in basketball, he replied:

"We haven't decided definitely about that yet, but I think not.

"If you can't compete for a championship, I can't see any point in belonging to a conference."

The president added that "we are looking forward to belonging to some conference" but at the present State will remain an independent.

State has been a member of the AIC since 1946 but has never scheduled the required number of conference football games to qualify for the title.

Michigan Officer Seeke Slayer

FT. SMITH (AP) — A U. S. commissioner yesterday recommended that a 21-year-old escaped convict be returned to Michigan to face charges of murder in the pistol slaying of two men.

U. S. Commissioner Walter Gutensohn recommended to Federal Judge John E. Miller that Harold Maurice Hummel Jr., be extradited. Hummel, an escapee from a Michigan prison, is being held here on a federal charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

The young fugitive was captured by Sheriff Bob Pritchard at nearby Ozark, Ark., last Thursday.

Federal authorities have indicated that they will turn Hummel over to Michigan police for prosecution on the murder charge even if the federal government takes him to that state.

But two Michigan officers want immediate custody of Hummel. After the hearing before Gutensohn, Detective Lt. Valoris Lee Scott of Hazel Park, Mich., and Michigan State Police Lt. Jack Pletzk left for Little Rock to ask Gov. McMath to approve extradition of Hummel.

Hummel is charged with slaying Vido and Joseph Vinokrouw at Hazel Park last month. At yesterday's hearing, he denied any knowledge of the killings.

DOROTHY DIX

Engaged to Alcoholic

Dear Miss Dix: A very dear girl friend of mine is going with a boy, and planning to marry him next June. He drinks to excess and she knows it, but she claims he will stop once they are married. He has broken many a date with her because he was too drunk to come over. Of course, she is convinced that she does not need help, but I am equally convinced that she does.

ANNE R.

Answer: And your conviction is so right, Anne! Your friend is headed for certain unhappiness unless she comes to her senses. So many girls have been taken in by the meaningless promise of reform after marriage, and, so many, who are even more foolish, believe that marriage will automatically make a man of a spineless creature.

If the following statement were believed by every prospective bride unhappy marriage would become a rarity: No man who doesn't love a girl enough to try to overcome his basic bad habits before marriage will not change later. The nuptial ceremony contains no magic words to create character where none exists.

He Must Reform First

Some faults may be hidden from a fiancee, but an alcoholic cannot conceal his weakness. It is very possible that the faith and devotion of a worthy girl can reform him—but the reform must come before she marries him; it will never come later.

If your friend has a strong will of her own — as she seems to have — it should be directed toward making a man of her fiance now. If he honestly loves her and wants to be a good husband, he will find a strong ally in Alcoholics Anonymous, one of the most marvelous organizations ever founded for the rehabilitation of man. The Salvation Army also performs a wonderful service along the same line. However, all the help in the world will be of no use to a man who is not willing to help himself.

Your are probably powerless to extend much assistance to your friend; paradoxically, people who need help most are often those who will listen least.

If you could bring your friend into a home that is being wrecked through alcoholism, her eyes might open. Somewhere in your circle of acquaintances you may know some such home; have your friend talk to the wife and she'll get a fine idea of the life in store for herself.

Whatever she elects to do, stick by her for, I assure you, as the wife of a heavy drinker, she will need every friend she has.

Dear Miss Dix: I have been working in a shop during the summer. Working with me is a 24-year old college man who is also here for the summer. He has asked me to go out with him but I hesitate because I am six years younger than he.

ELISE G. H.

Answer: The difference in your ages isn't enough to interfere with friendship, but you must face the fact that when the boy leaves the shop and returns to school, other interests will occupy his mind and time. Don't become too serious over him.

Dear Miss Dix: We are two young teen-agers, each with two boy friends. We can't make up our minds which we like better. Our parents say we are too young to be thinking of one boy only, but the problem is when we go with one boy the other gets mad.

K and L

Answer: Since you are definitely too young to be going steady, let the boys know that this is your attitude, and that your parents uphold it. If one boy is annoyed because you go with another, let the irritated one go.

Editors Say West Leans Toward Ike

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP)—The Mountain and Western states, almost as solidly Democratic as the South in presidential elections over the last [illegible], now are regarded by editors and correspondents as leaning [illegible] but still a 1952 toss-up.

[illegible] Press survey, [illegible] individual county estimates [illegible] editors and political [illegible] state, indicates [illegible] opinion is that only [illegible] states could be considered reasonably safe for the [illegible] if the election were [illegible] this time. The Democrats captured [illegible] of the 11 in 1948.

If present trends hold good through Nov. 4 —and many of the [illegible] still must be kept on the doubtful list—the newspaper men say the 79 electoral votes of the Mountain and Western states would line up this way behind the presidential nominees:

The Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower: California 32, Oregon 6, [illegible], Idaho 4, Utah 4, [illegible], Montana 4, Nevada [illegible]. Total 69.

[illegible] Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson: Arizona 4.

Undecided: Colorado 6.

A survey of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware, released yesterday, indicates that editors and political writers hold a composite belief that if the people were voting today the 106 electoral ballots of those five states would go to Eisenhower by a narrow margin.

The Eastern votes, plus 69 from the West, would give the GOP nominee 174 of the 266 needed to clinch a victory.

But in the West, as in the East, even a slight shifting of the political winds could blow almost any state in an entirely different direction by the time Nov. 4 rolls around.

The views of editors and correspondents in the Mountain and West [illegible] region add up to an opinion that most of the states are so close at this point as to be very much in doubt.

Editors report a widespread feeling among the people that it's time for a change. They speak also of "too much Trumanism" [illegible] with inflation, high taxes, foreign policy, war in Korea [illegible] and Communism in government." To a much easier degree than in the Middle Atlantic states is there mention of Eisenhower's personal popularity as a campaign factor.

The composite view of 32 editors and writers who took soundings in Oregon was that Eisenhower would carry the state without much trouble, whereas Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York won it from President Truman in 1948 by less than 18,000 votes out of a total of more than 500,000 cast.

But that was before Stevenson brought his campaign into the state.

A Republican editor had said that in his county Stevenson's vote would "jump 20 per cent or more" if the Democratic nominee made even as much as one whistle stop there.

Editors and a Portland polling organization agreed that Stevenson did make gains as a result of invading Oregon last week. But those might be offset if Eisenhower shows up in Oregon on a personal appearance tour.

In Oregon, and in all other states, current political sentiment was tapped county by county with the cooperation of Associated Press member newspapers and radio stations and the help of other newspapers and local correspondents.

County estimates were combined into state estimates, with weight given to the voting power of the various counties.

The survey offers these views of political conditions in the Mountain and Western states as of now:

California —

Eisenhower would win by a slim margin in the opinion of California editors, if the polls were open today. But the margin is so slender that the state is considered doubtful.

President Truman captured it four years ago, but by about 18,000 votes out of a total of 3,800,000.

Oregon —

The only Western state to go Republican in 1948 is considered by Oregon editors as likely to be a repeater in 1952.

Those taking part in the survey provided estimates for 25 of 36 counties which will cast 90 per cent of the estimated vote.

Washington —

New and independent voters may determine the winner in a race in which the consensus of Washington newspapers indicates Eisenhower now is leading by a whisker.

Of more than 30 daily and weekly newspapers that co-operated in the survey, 18 are supporting Eisenhower and none has come out for Stevenson.

Letters to the Editor

This is your newspaper. Write to it. Letters criticizing the editorial policy of commenting upon facts in the news columns, are equally welcome. Every writer must sign his name and address but publication of name may be withheld if requested.

Dear Editor:

"Usually when we write a fire prevention storie for the public we continually plead for and advise that people exercise every possible precaution in preventing fires on the farm, pasture, meadows and in the forest. But in an answer to our several stories in the local papers seeking cooperation we feel this story should be a 'Thank You' note for the complete cooperation we have been receiving from the public in an effort to keep fires to a minimum.

"In all my 18 years in fire control work we have never received better cooperation from the public and as a result this section of the state to date hasn't suffered too heavily from fires. Therefore, we take this opportunity to Thank each and everyone for their splendid cooperation.

Cherry Opens Little Rock Office

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Democratic Gubernatorial Nominee Francis Cherry yesterday opened an office here and his campaign manager said it would be financed by contributions.

Leffel Gentry, who managed Cherry's successful campaign for the nomination over Gov. McMath, said it would cost an estimated $12,500 to operate the office until January.

"We have no campaign deficit and we have no debts," said Gentry. "We are telling each person who offers money that we have paid off our financial obligations to the campaign. We tell them we must operate on office until Mr. Cherry takes office in January and that if they want to contibute for that purpose the funds will be accepted."

Gentry said that when $12,500 was collected, "we will cease accepting contributions."

going to have a state governor — that's Mr. Cherry — and we're going to have a federal governor—that's me."

He pointed out that the Arkansas Old Guard had opposed Eisenhower, and said he would be the Republican boss of the state should the general win.

"When they, the Democrats, want anything from the federal government, they're going to have to come to me," boasted Speck.

Townsend and Cobb, in a statement, took a dim view of Speck's remarks, and warned that Speck "deserves substantial influence in our party affairs only so long as he is willing to channel his efforts through regular Republican organization."

Townsend and Cobb branded Speck's implication that Eisenhower would not do business with party officers in Arkansas as "wholly unfounded."

"From personal conversations Gen. Eisenhower and from his many public pronouncements, we know that he will not by-pass the state organization, the National Committee, or our delegation in congress in dealing with matters affecting this state," the two leaders said.

"The action of Osro Cobb in trying to repudiate me in his news release is typical of 25 years of his leadership in keeping the Republican party a closed corporation in Arkansas," said Speck.

"I am sincerely convinced that he would not like to see Gen. Eisenhower carry Arkansas in the general election.

"If Eisenhower carries the state, as I believe he will, in spite of Osro Cobb, it will put the finishing blow to the closed corporation and put the Republican party in the hands of people who are in favor of 2-party politics."

Speck also said that he felt he was as much a part of the GOP organization as anyone else, and added that he was "the only man who got anything unanimously from the state convention."

U. S. Seeks Egyption in Cotton Deal

By JAMES F. DONOVAN

WASHINGTON, (UP) — The Justice Department's anti corruption drive developed an international angle today.

Department officials said they plan to ask the Egyptian government to send here for trial the cotton dealer who has been indicted with former Agriculture Department official Clovis D. Walker on charges of conspiring to defraud the United States.

They conceded, however, that extradition agreements between Egypt and this country may not apply to outfy Mansour of the Alexandria cotton firm of R. and E. Hurl & Co. They said Mansour is now presumed to be in Egypt.

If the Egyptian cannot be brought to trial, Walker, who resigned under fire last May from his job as head of the Agriculture Department's cotton branch, will stand trial alone. If convicted, he would be liable to a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

A federal grand jury returned the indictment against Walker and Mansour yesterday after an investigation under the supervision of Vincent P. Russo and William Gallagher, special assistants to Attorney General James P. McGranery.

The jury charged that Walker and Mansour had an illegal agreement whereby Walker leaked highly-secret information about government purchases of Egyptian cotton to Mansour, giving him an advantage over other dealers.

The jury named Dyke Cullum, Washington commodity broker, as a co-conspirator who participated in the agreement. The jury did not indict Cullum, but said he sometimes relayed the secret data from Walker to Mansour.

Much of the story already has been aired before the Senate Agriculture Committee by agriculture department investigators.

One investigator, Harold Mesibov, told the committee that Mansour sold about $37,000,000 worth of cotton to the agriculture department in 1951 and that his firm made a huge profit on the sales.

At a hearing last May, Walker conceded that he and Mansour were "good friends" and "traded" gifts. He denied giving Mansour advance information that would enable his firm to profit unduly

Shortly after his appearance, the 60-year-old Oklahoman resigned from the Agriculture Department. In his letter of resignation, he denied he was "guilty of any willful wrongdoing" but conceded there might be evidence to "indicate some indiscretion."

Russo, who has directed the Justice Department's investigation of the case, told newsmen he had read in a trade journal that Mansour said in Egypt sometime ago that he also wanted to deny there had been any wrong-doing by either himself or Walker.

Russo said the article mentioned that Mansour had broken his leg, preventing him from returning to the United States to vindicate himself and defend Walker. If Mansour is still anxious to defend himself in court, Russo said, this may be one way around any legal difficulties.

Stevenson Pictures Ike as Taft Victim

By MERRIMAN SMITH

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UP) —Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson today assembled for eastern consumption a political road show portraying Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-O) as the villain of the election campaign and Dwight D. Eisenhower as Taft's "surrender" victim.

As Taft starts stumping for Eisenhower, the GOP presidential nominee, Stevenson apparently intended to shift more of his campaign fire to the Ohioan than at Eisenhower himself.

Members of Stevenson's staff said the governor, who on Thursday will open a speaking tour into Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Virginia and Maryland, would step up his campaign to convince the electorate that Taft had "taken over" the Eisenhower campaign and turned the former general's "great crusade" into a "great surrender".

Stevenson cleared his schedule as much as possible of routine and engagements today to complete the speeches he will use in the East against his GOP opposition.

His strategy was based on the theory held by the Stevenson camp that Taft, for Democratic campaign purposes, at any rate, was as good a target as Eisenhower, and possibly somewhat better.

Consequently, the Illinois governor will continue to push his belief that, particularly in the field of foreign policy, Eisenhower was compelled to abandon some of his own ideas to those of Taft in order to win the senator's active campaign support.

Stevenson told a news conference yesterday:

"It now appears brutally clear that Senator Taft has taken over. This puts an entirely new aspect on the campaign and the election. I suspect many people like myself will be genuinely alarmed by the reduction of their differences on foreign policy to 'differences of degree.'"

Pension Program Up in Massachusetts

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts holds its primary election today with the interest of the voters stirred by a legislative battle over a rich pension program the legislators voted themselves last July and repealed earlier today.

There are few contests for the top nominations in both contests but widespread interest in the legislators' action is expected to draw out the biggest vote since the 1948 presidential election.

There are 2,480,000 voters in Massachusetts. Followers of state politics say today's turnout may exceed the 33 per cent who voted two years ago and may even approach the 47 per cent turnout of 1948.

Sen. Henry Cabo Lodge, Republican, has no competition in his bid for renomination. Neither has his Democratic opponent, U. S. Rep. John F. Kennedy.

Gov. Paul A. Dever (D), seeking a third term, also is unopposed as is his GOP opponent, U. S. Rep. Christian A. Herter.

There are Democratic contests in eight of the 14 congressional districts and Republican contests in four.

Polls close at 7 p. m. EST at the latest.

Rails Try Out Small TV Sets

CHICAGO (AP)— Pintsized television went railroading today to show how it might save wear and tear on both rolling stock and personnel.

The new uses of television were under exploration here in tests conducted this afternoon by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the RCA Victor Division of Radio Corporation of America.

Placed into service were three small Vidicon industrial TV systems which are supposed to permit men in mixed locations to do jobs which normally would require extra movement of both men and freight cars.

The new wrinkle has the checker must walk among trains and over tracks to list car numbers on an incoming train to assign the cars to other trains headed for various sections of the country.

McIntosh — McWilliams Wedding Announced

Miss Fern Dell McWilliams of Casmalia, Calif., became the bride of Howard Fields McIntosh of Santa Maria, Calif., in a double ring ceremony performed by the Reverend William A. Larson, pastor of the Grace Baptist Church, in the Nazarene Church of Santa Maria July 6.

Mrs. McIntosh is the daughter of Mary Hockett McWilliams and the late Edwin McWilliams and is the great granddaughter of J. W. McWilliams of Shover Springs. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. McIntosh.

Miss Wanda McWilliams, sister of the bride and maid of honor, chose a gown of light green nylon tulle and matching cap. She carried a nosegay of pink carnations.

Harold Hartly of Santa Maria served Mr. McIntosh as best man. Ushers were Ed, Jr., and Jack Fields of Los Alamos, cousins of the groom.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh are graduates of Union High School of Santa Maria. The couple is at home at 217 C. West Park St. Santa Maria, where the groom is employed.

Identity of Indian Maid Is Sought

FT. WORTH Tex. (AP) — Kim, the self-designated Indian girl who was found Friday in woods near Ft. Worth, may be a youngster who disappeared two months ago from a girls camp in Connecticut.

Both Connecticut state police and the father of Connie Smith, who left the camp last July 16, were checking into the possibility late last night. She is the granddaughter of Nils H. Smith, a former governor of Wyoming.

Connie is only 10, but is well developed for her age and in other physical respects bears a resemblance to the girl who was found here.

Peter Smith, father of Connie, called the Ft. Worth Star-Telegram by telephone late last night from his ranch at Newcastle, Wyo., seeking information about the case. Told about Kim's appearance, he said the resemblance was striking and he planned to check into the matter today.

Kim, who said she was a member of an Iroquois Indian tribe living on a St. Regis River island between the United States and Canada, was at home last night on the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Bowen, near Antelope, Tex.

Their 1,200 acre ranch has no telephone, and Kim was unavailable for comment. Smith will try to make contact with the Bowens today.

Smith said that Connie had had an injury, and that she may be suffering from amnesia.

Tito Would Delay Trieste Decision

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Premier Marshal Tito says Italy and Yugoslavia should put aside their bitter dispute over Trieste until they can approach the question "with more sense."

"Let's co operate on other questions which are of extreme importance such as assurance against aggression, economic exchanges and the preservation of the peace of the world," Tito said.

He spoke yesterday before an estimated crowd of 250,000 persons who had converged by truck and train on the little Slovene town of Delnjske Toplice to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the formation of a wartime partisan unit there.

The unyielding claims of both Italy and Yugoslavia to the free territory of Trieste, at the head of the Adriatic, have worried the Western Allies trying to promote co-operation between countries opposed to Soviet aggression.

Tito suggested that, pending a later approach to the Trieste question, Italy and Yugoslavia set up a joint administration for the territory. The disputed buffer region between the two nations now is divided into two zones, one administered by Yugoslavia and the other by Britain and the United States with Italian assistance.

Morse Hints Big Split With Ike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Wayne Morse began drafting a speech today for the American Federation of Labor National Convention which may point up a major difference between him and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The Oregon Republican told newsmen he would not complete the text of his address until after he read Eisenhower's speech before the AFL Convention in New York tomorrow. Morse's talk is set for Thursday.

Morse, who describes himself as a constitutional liberal and frequently is in the opposite camp from many of his Republican Senate colleagues, was an early booster of Eisenhower for the GOP presidential nomination.

But he has announced he is highly dissatisfied with the turn the general's campaign has taken recently, particularly with the hearty reception given to Sen. Robert A Taft of Ohio.

Morse says that as matters now stand he will vote for Eisenhower and believes the GOP nominee will win the election, but that he plans no active campaign for him.

Morse lists the labor-management issue as one on which he has sharp differences with the Eisenhower camp. And he pats Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson on the back for his stand on this same question.

Morse favors a drastic rewriting of the Taft-Hartley Act. Stevenson has come out for Taft-Hartley repeal followed by a fresh start on a labor-management relations law a position Morse said was "sound."

Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor and an old friend of Morse, came here from Eisenhower headquarters in New York after Morse had indicated Saturday his coolness toward the GOP nominee.

After his talk with Stassen, Morse said his decision not to campaign actively this fall remained unchanged. The same went, he said, for his refusal to sit on the platform with Eisenhower at the AFL Convention.

Negro Singer Is Attacked

FT. LEE, N. J. (AP)—Pearl Bailey, Negro singing comedienne, was beaten early Monday by an unidentified man as she was leaving Bill Miller's Riviera, a swank night spot here.

Nathan Allyn, acting Bergen County detective chief, quoted the entertainer as saying that the man approached her in the lobby of the night club, cursed at her, grabbed her by the throat and beat her.

Miss Bailey broke away but her assailant chased her to behind the club's stage where he kicked her and knocked her down.

Others who were leaving the night spot came to her aid, but the man who beat Miss Bailey got away, Allyn said.

Her manager and attorney, Chauncey Olman, said Miss Bailey received possible concussion, bruises and cuts and was under medical care at her home.

Expectant Mother Loses Fight to Polio

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Mrs. Vincent E. Skillman Jr. lived through a rigorous 200-mile trip to a hospital here last night despite a faltering motor on the portable iron lung in which she was encased.

The 23-year old expectant mother and wife of a University of Arkansas student from Memphis died hours later at St. Vincent's Infirmary here from infantile paralysis.

Fayetteville Fire Department Fireman Merlin Bayer hand-pumped the portable respirator after it had failed during the trip by ambulance.

Death came to the woman after she was placed in a tank-type respirator at the hospital. Doctors had been unable to check her illness.

Mrs. Skillman was transferred from the Washington County Hospital in Fayetteville to the Little Rock hospital when doctors [illegible]

State Moves Out of AIC Conference

JONESBORO — Dr. Carl Reng, president of Arkansas State College, says the school is "not a member of the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference in football" and may not compete in the conference basketball race.

A second top State official — who declined use of his name, said yesterday that the school had not paid its dues and was not complying with new conference regulations against subsidization of athletes.

"We are not members of the AIC in football," commented Reng.

Asked if State would be a member in basketball, he replied:

"We haven't decided definitely about that yet, but I think not.

"If you can't compete for a championship, I can't see any point in belonging to a conference."

The president added that "we are looking forward to belonging to some conference" but at the present State will remain an independent.

State has been a member of the AIC since 1946 but has never scheduled the required number of conference football games to qualify for the title.

Michigan Officer Seeke Slayer

FT. SMITH (AP) — A U. S. commissioner yesterday recommended that a 21-year-old escaped convict be returned to Michigan to face charges of murder in the pistol slaying of two men.

U. S. Commissioner Walter Gutensohn recommended to Federal Judge John E. Miller that Harold Maurice Hummel Jr., be extradited. Hummel, an escapee from a Michigan prison, is being held here on a federal charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

The young fugitive was captured by Sheriff Bob Pritchard at nearby Ozark, Ark., last Thursday.

Federal authorities have indicated that they will turn Hummel over to Michigan police for prosecution on the murder charge even if the federal government takes him to that state.

But two Michigan officers want immediate custody of Hummel. After the hearing before Gutensohn, Detective Lt. Valoris Lee Scott of Hazel Park, Mich., and Michigan State Police Lt. Jack Pletzk left for Little Rock to ask Gov. McMath to approve extradition of Hummel.

Hummel is charged with slaying Vido and Joseph Vinokrouw at Hazel Park last month. At yesterday's hearing, he denied any knowledge of the killings.

DOROTHY DIX

Engaged to Alcoholic

Dear Miss Dix: A very dear girl friend of mine is going with a boy, and planning to marry him next June. He drinks to excess and she knows it, but she claims he will stop once they are married. He has broken many a date with her because he was too drunk to come over. Of course, she is convinced that she does not need help, but I am equally convinced that she does.

ANNE R.

Answer: And your conviction is so right, Anne! Your friend is headed for certain unhappiness unless she comes to her senses. So many girls have been taken in by the meaningless promise of reform after marriage, and, so many, who are even more foolish, believe that marriage will automatically make a man of a spineless creature.

If the following statement were believed by every prospective bride unhappy marriage would become a rarity; No man who doesn't love a girl enough to try to overcome his basic bad habits before marriage will not change later. The nuptial ceremony contains no magic words to create character where none exists.

He Must Reform First

Some faults may be hidden from a fiancee, but an alcoholic cannot conceal his weakness. It is very possible that the faith and devotion of a worthy girl can reform him—but the reform must come before she marries him; it will never come later.

If your friend has a strong will of her own — as she seems to have — it should be directed toward making a man of her fiance now. If he honestly loves her and wants to be a good husband, he will find a strong ally in Alcoholics Anonymous, one of the most marvelous organizations ever founded for the rehabilitation of man. The Salvation Army also performs a wonderful service along the same line. However, all the help in the world will be of no use to a man who is not willing to help himself.

Your are probably powerless to extend much assistance to your friend; paradoxically, people who need help most are often those who will listen least.

If you could bring your friend into a home that is being wrecked through alcoholism, her eyes might open. Somewhere in your circle of acquaintances you may know some such home; have your friend talk to the wife and she'll get a fine idea of the life in store for herself.

Whatever she elects to do, stick by her for, I assure you, as the wife of a heavy drinker, she will need every friend she has.

Dear Miss Dix: I have been working in a shop during the summer. Working with me is a 24-year old college man who is also here for the summer. He has asked me to go out with him but I hesitate because I am six years younger than he.

ELISE G. H.

Answer: The difference in your ages isn't enough to interfere with friendship, but you must face the fact that when the boy leaves the shop and returns to school, other interests will occupy his mind and time. Don't become too serious over him.

Dear Miss Dix: We are two young teen-agers, each with two boy friends. We can't make up our minds which we like better. Our parents say we are too young to be thinking of one boy only, but the problem is when we go with one boy the other gets mad.

K and L

Answer: Since you are definitely too young to be going steady, let the boys know that this is your attitude, and that your parents uphold it. If one boy is annoyed because you go with another, let the irritated one go.

Editors Say West Leans Toward Ike

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP)—The Mountain and Western states, almost as [illegible] Democratic as the South in presidential elections over the last 20 years, now are regarded by editors and correspondents as leaning Republican but still a 1952 toss-up.

[illegible] Press survey, based on individual county estimates by editors and political writers in each state, indicates the [illegible] opinion is that only [illegible] of the 11 states could be considered reasonably safe for the [illegible] if the election were held at this time. The Democrats captured 10 of the 11 in 1948.

If present trends hold good through Nov. 4 —and many of the states still must be kept on the doubtful list —the newspaper men say the 79 electoral votes of the Mountain and Western states would line up this way behind the presidential nominees:

For Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower: California 32, Oregon 6, [illegible] Idaho 4, Utah 4, [illegible] Montana 4, Nevada [illegible] Total 69.

For Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson: [illegible] 4.

Undecided: Colorado 6.

AP surveys of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware, released yesterday, indicate that editors and political writers hold a composite belief that if the people were voting today the 105 electoral ballots of those five states would go to Eisenhower by a narrow margin.

The Eastern votes, plus 69 from the West, would give the GOP nominee 174 of the 266 needed to clinch a victory.

But in the West, as in the East, [illegible] slight shifting of the political winds could blow almost any state in an entirely different direction by the time Nov. 4 rolls around.

The views of editors and correspondents in the Mountain and Western region add up to an opinion that most of the states are so close at this point as to be very much in doubt.

Editors report a widespread feeling among the people that it's time for a change. They speak also of "too much Trumanism" [illegible] with inflation, high taxes, foreign policy, war in Korea [illegible] and Communism in government." To a much easier degree than in the Middle Atlantic states is there mention of Eisenhower's personal popularity as a campaign factor.

The composite view of 32 editors and writers who took soundings in Oregon was that Eisenhower would carry the state without much trouble, whereas Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York won it from President Truman in 1948 by less than 18,000 votes out of a total of more than 500,000 cast.

But that was before Stevenson brought his campaign into the state.

A Republican editor had said that in his county Stevenson's vote would "jump 20 per cent or more" if the Democratic nominee made even as much as one whistle stop there.

Editors and a Portland polling organization agreed that Stevenson did make gains as a result of invading Oregon last week. But those might be offset if Eisenhower shows up in Oregon on a personal appearance tour.

In Oregon, and in all other states, current political sentiment was tapped county by county with the cooperation of Associated Press member newspapers and radio stations and the help of other newspapers and local correspondents.

County estimates were combined into state estimates, with weight given to the voting power of the various counties.

The survey offers these views of political conditions in the Mountain and Western states as of now:

California —

Eisenhower would win by a slim margin in the opinion of California editors, if the polls were open today. But the margin is so slender that the state is considered doubtful.

President Truman captured it four years ago, but by about 18,000 votes out of a total of 3,800,000.

Oregon —

The only Western state to go Republican in 1948 is considered by Oregon editors as likely to be a repeater in 1952.

Those taking part in the survey provided estimates for 25 of 36 counties which will cast 90 per cent of the estimated vote.

Washington —

New and independent voters may determine the winner in a race in which the consensus of Washington newspapers indicates Eisenhower now is leading by a whisker.

Of more than 30 daily and weekly newspapers that co-operated in the survey, 18 are supporting Eisenhower and none has come out for Stevenson.

Letters to the Editor

This is your newspaper. Write to it. Letters criticizing the editorial policy or commenting upon facts in the news columns, are equally welcome. Every writer must sign his name and address but publication of name may be withheld if requested.

Dear Editor:

"Usually when we write a fire prevention storie for the public we continually plead for and advise that people exercise every possible precaution in preventing fires on the farm, pasture, meadows and in the forest. But in an answer to our several stories in the local papers seeking cooperation we feel this story should be a 'Thank You' note for the complete cooperation we have been receiving from the public in an effort to keep fires to a minimum.

"In all my 18 years in fire control work we have never received better cooperation from the public and as a result this section of the state to date hasn't suffered too heavily from fires. Therefore, we take this opportunity to 'Thank each and everyone for their splendid cooperation.

Cherry Opens Little Rock Office

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Democratic Gubernatorial Nominee Francis Cherry yesterday opened an office here and his campaign manager said it would be financed by contributions.

Leffel Gentry, who managed Cherry's successful campaign for the nomination over Gov. McMath, said it would cost an estimated $12,500 to operate the office until January.

"We have no campaign deficit and we have no debts," said Gentry. "We are telling each person who offers money that we have paid off our financial obligations to the campaign. We tell them we must operate on office until Mr. Cherry takes office in January and that if they want to contibute for that purpose the funds will be accepted."

Gentry said that when $12,500 was collected, "we will cease accepting contributions."

going to have a state governor — that's Mr. Cherry — and we're going to have a federal governor— that's me."

He pointed out that the Arkansas Old Guard had opposed Eisenhower, and said he would be the Republican boss of the state should the general win.

"When they, the Democrats, want anything from the federal government, they're going to have to come to me," boasted Speck.

Townsend and Cobb, in a statement, took a dim view of Speck's remarks, and warned that Speck "deserves substantial influence in our party affairs only so long as he is willing to channel his efforts through regular Republican organization."

Townsend and Cobb branded Speck's implication that Eisenhower would not do business with party officers in Arkansas as "wholly unfounded."

"From personal conversations Gen. Eisenhower and from his many public pronouncements, we know that he will not by-pass the state organization, the National Committee, or our delegation in congress in dealing with matters affecting this state," the two leaders said.

"The action of Osro Cobb in trying to repudiate me in his news release is typical of 25 years of his leadership in keeping the Republican party a closed corporation in Arkansas," said Speck.

"I am sincerely convinced that he would not like to see Gen. Eisenhower carry Arkansas in the general election.

"If Eisenhower carries the state, as I believe he will, in spite of Osro Cobb, it will put the finishing blow to the closed corporation and put the Republican party in the hands of people who are in favor of 2-party politics."

Speck also said that he felt he was as much a part of the GOP organization as anyone else, and added that he was "the only man who got anything unanimously from the state convention."

Apparently, he was referring to [illegible]

U. S. Seeks Egyption in Cotton Deal

By JAMES F. DONOVAN

WASHINGTON, (UP) — The Justice Department's anti corruption drive developed an international angle today.

Department officials said they plan to ask the Egyptian government to send here for trial the cotton dealer who has been indicted with former Agriculture Department official Clovis D. Walker on charges of conspiring to defraud the United States.

They conceded, however, that extradition agreements between Egypt and this country may not apply to outfy Mansour of the Alexandria cotton firm of R. and E. Hurl & Co. They said Mansour is now presumed to be in Egypt.

If the Egyptian cannot be brought to trial, Walker, who resigned under fire last May from his job as head of the Agriculture Department's cotton branch, will stand trial alone. If convicted, he would be liable to a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

A federal grand jury returned the indictment against Walker and Mansour yesterday after an investigation under the supervision of Vincent P. Russo and William Gallagher, special assistants to Attorney General James P. McGranery.

The jury charged that Walker and Mansour had an illegal agreement whereby Walker leaked highly-secret information about government purchases of Egyptian cotton to Mansour, giving him an advantage over other dealers.

The jury named Dyke Cullum, Washington commodity broker, as a co-conspirator who participated in the agreement. The jury did not indict Cullum, but said he sometimes relayed the secret data from Walker to Mansour.

Much of the story already has been aired before the Senate Agriculture Committee by agriculture department investigators.

One investigator, Harold Mesibov, told the committee that Mansour sold about $37,000,000 worth of cotton to the agriculture department in 1951 and that his firm made a huge profit on the sales.

At a hearing last May, Walker conceded that he and Mansour were "good friends" and "traded" gifts. He denied giving Mansour advance information that would enable his firm to profit unduly.

Shortly after his appearance, the 60-year-old Oklahoman resigned from the Agriculture Department. In his letter of resignation, he denied he was "guilty of any willful wrongdoing" but conceded there might be evidence to "indicate some indiscretion."

Russo, who has directed the Justice Department's investigation of the case, told newsmen he had read in a trade journal that Mansour said in Egypt sometime ago that he also wanted to deny there had been any wrong-doing by either himself or Walker.

Russo said the article mentioned that Mansour had broken his leg, preventing him from returning to the United States to vindicate himself and defend Walker. If Mansour is still anxious to defend himself in court, Russo said, this may be one way around any legal difficulties.

Stevenson Pictures Ike as Taft Victim

By MERRIMAN SMITH

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UP) —Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson today assembled for eastern consumption a political road show portraying Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-O) as the villain of the election campaign and Dwight D. Eisenhower as Taft's "surrender" victim.

As Taft starts stumping for Eisenhower, the GOP presidential nominee, Stevenson apparently intended to shift more of his campaign fire to the Ohioan than at Eisenhower himself.

Members of Stevenson's staff said the governor, who on Thursday will open a speaking tour into Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Virginia and Maryland, would step up his campaign to convince the electorate that Taft had "taken over" the Eisenhower campaign and turned the former general's "great crusade" into a "great surrender".

Stevenson cleared his schedule as much as possible of routine and engagements today to complete the speeches he will use in the East against his GOP opposition.

His strategy was based on the theory held by the Stevenson camp that Taft, for Democratic campaign purposes, at any rate, was as good a target as Eisenhower, and possibly somewhat better.

Consequently, the Illinois governor will continue to push his belief that, particularly in the field of foreign policy, Eisenhower was compelled to abandon some of his own ideas to those of Taft in order to win the senator's active campaign support.

Stevenson told a news conference yesterday:

"It now appears brutally clear that Senator Taft has taken over. This puts an entirely new aspect on the campaign and the election. I suspect many people like myself will be genuinely alarmed by the reduction of their differences on foreign policy to 'differences of degree.'"

Pension Program Up in Massachusetts

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts holds its primary election today with the interest of the voters stirred by a legislative battle over a rich pension program the legislators voted themselves last July and repealed earlier today.

There are few contests for the top nominations in both contests but widespread interest in the legislators' action is expected to draw out the biggest vote since the 1948 presidential election.

There are 2,480,000 voters in Massachusetts. Followers of state politics say today's turnout may exceed the 33 per cent who voted two years ago and may even approach the 47 per cent turnout of 1948.

Sen. Henry Cabo Lodge, Republican, has no competition in his bid for renomination. Neither has his Democratic opponent, U. S. Rep. John F. Kennedy.

Gov. Paul A. Dever (D), seeking a third term, also is unopposed as is his GOP opponent, U. S. Rep. Christian A. Herter.

There are Democratic contests in eight of the 14 congressional districts and Republican contests in four.

Polls close at 7 p. m. EST at the latest.

Rails Try Out Small TV Sets

CHICAGO (AP)— Pintsized television went railroading today to show how it might save wear and tear on both rolling stock and personnel.

The new uses of television were under exploration here in tests conducted this afternoon by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the RCA Victor Division of Radio Corporation of America.

Placed into service were three small Vidicon industrial TV systems which are supposed to permit men in mixed locations to do jobs which normally would require extra movement of both men and freight cars.

The new wrinkle has the checker must walk among trains and over tracks to list car numbers on an incoming train to assign the cars to other trains headed for various sections of the country.

McIntosh — McWilliams Wedding Announced

Miss Fern Dell McWilliams of Casmalia, Calif., became the bride of Howard Fields McIntosh of Santa Maria, Calif., in a double ring ceremony performed by the Reverend William A. Larson, pastor of the Grace Baptist Church, in the Nazarene Church of Santa Maria July 6.

Mrs. McIntosh is the daughter of Mary Hockett McWilliams and the late Edwin McWilliams and is the great granddaughter of J. W. McWilliams of Shover Springs. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. McIntosh.

Miss Wanda McWilliams, sister of the bride and maid of honor, chose a gown of light green nylon tulle and matching cap. She carried a nosegay of pink carnations.

Harold Hartly of Santa Maria served Mr. McIntosh as best man. Ushers were Ed, Jr., and Jack Fields of Los Alamos, cousins of the groom.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh are graduates of Union High School of Santa Maria. The couple is at home at 217 C. West Park St. Santa Maria, where the groom is employed.

Identity of Indian Maid Is Sought

FT. WORTH Tex. (AP) — Kim, the self-designated Indian girl who was found Friday in woods near Ft. Worth, may be a youngster who disappeared two months ago from a girls camp in Connecticut.

Both Connecticut state police and the father of Connie Smith, who left the camp last July 16, were checking into the possibility late last night. She is the granddaughter of Nils H. Smith, a former governor of Wyoming.

Connie is only 10, but is well developed for her age and in other physical respects bears a resemblance to the girl who was found here.

Peter Smith, father of Connie, called the Ft. Worth Star-Telegram by telephone late last night from his ranch at Neecastle, Wyo., seeking information about the case. Told about Kim's appearance, he said the resemblance was striking and he planned to check into the matter today.

Kim, who said she was a member of an Iroquois Indian tribe living on a St. Regis River island between the United States and Canada, was at home last night on the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Bowen, near Antelope, Tex.

Their 1,200 acre ranch has no telephone, and Kim was unavailable for comment. Smith will try to make contact with the Bowens today.

Smith said that Connie had had an injury, and that she may be suffering from amnesia.

Tito Would Delay Trieste Decision

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Premier Marshal Tito says Italy and Yugoslavia should put aside their bitter dispute over Trieste until they can approach the question "with more sense."

"Let's co-operate on other questions which are of extreme importance such as assurance against aggression, economic exchanges and the preservation of the peace of the world," Tito said.

He spoke yesterday before an estimated crowd of 250,000 persons who had converged by truck and train on the little Slovene town of Delnjske Toplice to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the formation of a wartime partisan unit there.

The unyielding claims of both Italy and Yugoslavia to the free territory of Trieste, at the head of the Adriatic, have worried the Western Allies trying to promote co-operation between countries opposed to Soviet aggression.

Tito suggested that, pending a later approach to the Trieste question, Italy and Yugoslavia set up a joint administration for the territory. The disputed buffer region between the two nations now is divided into two zones, one administered by Yugoslavia and the other by Britain and the United States with Italian assistance.

Morse Hints Big Split With Ike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Wayne Morse began drafting a speech today for the American Federation of Labor National Convention which may point up a major difference between him and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The Oregon Republican told newsmen he would not complete the text of his address until after he read Eisenhower's speech before the AFL Convention in New York tomorrow. Morse's talk is set for Thursday.

Morse, who describes himself as a constitutional liberal and frequently is in the opposite camp from many of his Republican Senate colleagues, was an early booster of Eisenhower for the GOP presidential nomination.

But he has announced he is highly dissatisfied with the turn the general's campaign has taken recently, particularly with the hearty reception given to Sen. Robert A Taft of Ohio.

Morse says that as matters now stand he will vote for Eisenhower and believes the GOP nominee will win the election, but that he plans no active campaign for him.

Morse lists the labor-management issue as one on which he has sharp differences with the Eisenhower camp. And he pats Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson on the back for his stand on this same question.

Morse favors a drastic rewriting of the Taft-Hartley Act. Stevenson has come out for Taft-Hartley repeal followed by a fresh start on a labor-management relations law a position Morse said was "sound."

Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor and an old friend of Morse, came here from Eisenhower headquarters in New York after Morse had indicated Saturday his coolness toward the GOP nominee.

After his talk with Stassen, Morse said his decision not to campaign actively this fall remained unchanged. The same went, he said, for his refusal to sit on the platform with Eisenhower at the AFL Convention.

Negro Singer Is Attacked

FT. LEE, N. J. (AP)—Pearl Bailey, Negro singing comedienne, was beaten early Monday by an unidentified man as she was leaving Bill Miller's Riviera, a swank night spot here.

Nathan Allyn, acting Bergen County detective chief, quoted the entertainer as saying that the man approached her in the lobby of the night club, cursed at her, grabbed her by the throat and beat her.

Miss Bailey broke away but her assailant chased her to behind the club's stage where he kicked her and knocked her down.

Others who were leaving the night spot came to her aid, but the man who beat Miss Bailey got away, Allyn said.

Her manager and attorney, Chauncey Olman, said Miss Bailey received possible concussion, bruises and cuts and was under medical care at her home.

Expectant Mother Loses Fight to Polio

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Mrs. Vincent E. Skillman Jr. lived through a rigorous 200-mile trip to a hospital here last night despite a faltering motor on the portable iron lung in which she was encased.

The 23-year old expectant mother and wife of a University of Arkansas student from Memphis died hours later at St. Vincent's Infirmary here from infantile paralysis.

Fayetteville Fire Department Fireman Merlin Bayer hand-pumped the portable respirator after it had failed during the trip by ambulance.

Death came to the woman after she was placed in a tank-type respirator at the hospital. Doctors had been unable to check her illness.

Mrs. Skillman was transferred fom the Washington County Hospital in Fayetteville to the Little Rock hospital [illegible]

State Moves Out of AIC Conference

JONESBORO — Dr. Carl Reng, president of Arkansas State College, says the school is "not a member of the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference in football" and may not compete in the conference basketball race.

A second top State official — who declined use of his name, said yesterday that the school had not paid its dues and was not complying with new conference regulations against subsidization of athletes.

"We are not members of the AIC in football," commented Reng.

Asked if State would be a member in basketball, he replied:

"We haven't decided definitely about that yet, but I think not.

"If you can't compete for a championship, I can't see any point in belonging to a conference."

The president added that "we are looking forward to belonging to some conference" but at the present State will remain an independent.

State has been a member of the AIC since 1946 but has never scheduled the required number of conference football games to qualify for the title.

Michigan Officer Seeke Slayer

FT. SMITH (AP) — A U. S. commissioner yesterday recommended that a 21-year-old escaped convict be returned to Michigan to face charges of murder in the pistol slaying of two men.

U. S. Commissioner Walter Gutensohn recommended to Federal Judge John E. Miller that Harold Maurice Hummel Jr., be extradited. Hummel, an escapee from a Michigan prison, is being held here on a federal charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

The young fugitive was captured by Sheriff Bob Pritchard at nearby Ozark, Ark., last Thursday.

Federal authorities have indicated that they will turn Hummel over to Michigan police for prosecution on the murder charge even if the federal government takes him to that state.

But two Michigan officers want immediate custody of Hummel. After the hearing before Gutensohn, Detective Lt. Valoris Lee Scott of Hazel Park, Mich., and Michigan State Police Lt. Jack Pletzk left for Little Rock to ask Gov. McMath to approve extradition of Hummel.

Hummel is charged with slaying Vido and Joseph Vinokrouw at Hazel Park last month. At yesterday's hearing, he denied any knowledge of the killings.

DOROTHY DIX

Engaged to Alcoholic

Dear Miss Dix: A very dear girl friend of mine is going with a boy, and planning to marry him next June. He drinks to excess and she knows it, but she claims he will stop once they are married. He has broken many a date with her because he was too drunk to come over. Of course, she is convinced that she does not need help, but I am equally convinced that she does.

ANNE R.

Answer: And your conviction is so right, Anne! Your friend is headed for certain unhappiness unless she comes to her senses. So many girls have been taken in by the meaningless promise of reform after marriage, and, so many, who are even more foolish, believe that marriage will automatically make a man of a spineless creature.

If the following statement were believed by every prospective bride unhappy marriage would become a rarity; No man who doesn't love a girl enough to try to overcome his basic bad habits before marriage will not change later. The nuptial ceremony contains no magic words to create character where none exists.

He Must Reform First

Some faults may be hidden from a fiancee, but an alcoholic cannot conceal his weakness. It is very possible that the faith and devotion of a worthy girl can reform him— but the reform must come before she marries him; it will never come later.

If your friend has a strong will of her own — as she seems to have — it should be directed toward making a man of her fiance now. If he honestly loves her and wants to be a good husband, he will find a strong ally in Alcoholics Anonymous, one of the most marvelous organizations ever founded for the rehabilitation of man. The Salvation Army also performs a wonderful service along the same line. However, all the help in the world will be of no use to a man who is not willing to help himself.

Your are probably powerless to extend much assistance to your friend; paradoxically, people who need help most are often those who will listen least.

If you could bring your friend into a home that is being wrecked through alcoholism, her eyes might open. Somewhere in your circle of acquaintances you may know some such home; have your friend talk to the wife and she'll get a fine idea of the life in store for herself.

Whatever she elects to do, stick by her for, I assure you, as the wife of a heavy drinker, she will need every friend she has.

Dear Miss Dix: I have been working in a shop during the summer. Working with me is a 24-year old college man who is also here for the summer. He has asked me to go out with him but I hesitate because I am six years younger than he.

ELISE G. H.

Answer: The difference in your ages isn't enough to interfere with friendship, but you must face the fact that when the boy leaves the shop and returns to school, other interests will occupy his mind and time. Don't become too serious over him.

Dear Miss Dix: We are two young teen-agers, each with two boy friends. We can't make up our minds which we like better. Our parents say we are too young to be thinking of one boy only, but the problem is when we go with one boy the other gets mad.

K and L

Answer: Since you are definitely too young to be going steady, let the boys know that this is your attitude, and that your parents uphold it. If one boy is annoyed because you go with another, let the irritated one go.

Editors Say West Leans Toward Ike

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP)—The Mountain and Western states, almost as [illegible] Democratic as the South in [illegible] elections over the last [illegible], now are regarded by editors and correspondents as leaning [illegible] but still a 1952 toss-up.

[illegible] Press survey, [illegible] individual county estimates [illegible] editors and political [illegible] state, indicates [illegible] opinion is that only [illegible] states could be considered reasonably safe for the [illegible] if the election were [illegible] time. The Democrats [illegible] of the 11 in 1948.

If present trends hold good through Nov. 4 —and many of the [illegible] still must be kept on the [illegible] list—the newspaper men [illegible] the 70 electoral votes of the Mountain and Western states would line up this way behind the presidential nominees:

The Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower: California 32, Oregon 6, [illegible] 4, Idaho 4, Utah 4, [illegible] 3, Montana 4, Nevada [illegible]. Total 60.

[illegible] Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson: Arizona 4.

Undecided: Colorado 6.

A survey of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware, released yesterday, indicated that editors and political writers hold a composite belief that if the people were voting today, the 106 electoral ballots of those five states would go to Eisenhower by a narrow margin.

The Eastern votes, plus 60 from the West, would give the GOP nominee 174 of the 266 needed to [illegible] a victory.

But in the West, as in the East, even a slight shifting of the political winds could blow almost any state in an entirely different direction by the time Nov. 4 rolls around.

The views of editors and correspondents in the Mountain and West [illegible] add up to an opinion that most of the states are so close at this point as to be very much in doubt.

Editors report a widespread feeling among the people that it's time for a change. They speak also of "too much Trumanism" [illegible] with inflation, high taxes, foreign policy, war in Korea, corruption and Communism in government." To a much easier degree than in the Middle Atlantic states is there mention of Eisenhower's personal popularity as a campaign factor.

The composite view of 32 editors and writers who took soundings in Oregon was that Eisenhower would carry the state without much trouble, whereas Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York won it from President Truman in 1948 by less than 18,000 votes out of a total of more than 500,000 cast.

But that was before Stevenson brought his campaign into the state.

A Republican editor had said that in his county Stevenson's vote would "jump 20 per cent or more" if the Democratic nominee made even as much as one whistle stop there.

Editors and a Portland polling organization agreed that Stevenson did make gains as a result of invading Oregon last week. But those might be offset if Eisenhower shows up in Oregon on a personal appearance tour.

In Oregon, and in all other states, current political sentiment was tapped county by county with the cooperation of Associated Press member newspapers and radio stations and the help of other newspapers and local correspondents.

County estimates were combined into state estimates, with weight given to the voting power of the various counties.

The survey offers these views of political conditions in the Mountain and Western states as of now:

California —

Eisenhower would win by a slim margin in the opinion of California editors, if the polls were open today. But the margin is so slender that the state is considered doubtful.

President Truman captured it four years ago, but by about 18,000 votes out of a total of 3,800,000.

Oregon —

The only Western state to go Republican in 1948 is considered by Oregon editors as likely to be a repeater in 1952.

Those taking part in the survey provided estimates for 25 of 30 counties which will cast 90 per cent of the estimated vote.

Washington —

New and independent voters may determine the winner in a race in which the consensus of Washington newspapers indicates Eisenhower now is leading by a whisker.

Of more than 30 daily and weekly newspapers that co-operated in the survey, 18 are supporting Eisenhower and none has come out for Stevenson.

Letters to the Editor

This is your newspaper. Write to it. Letters criticizing the editorial policy of commenting upon facts in the news columns, are equally welcome. Every writer must sign his name and address but publication of name may be withheld if requested.

Dear Editor:

"Usually when we write a fire prevention storie for the public we continually plead for and advise that people exercise every possible precaution in preventing fires on the farm, pasture, meadows and in the forest. But in an answer to our several stories in the local papers seeking cooperation we feel this story should be a 'Thank You' note for the complete cooperation we have been receiving from the public in an effort to keep fires to a minimum.

"In all my 18 years in fire control work we have never received better cooperation from the public and as a result this section of the state to date hasn't suffered too heavily from fires. Therefore, we take this opportunity to Thank each and everyone for their splendid cooperation.

Cherry Opens Little Rock Office

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Democratic Gubernatorial Nominee Francis Cherry yesterday opened an office here and his campaign manager said it would be financed by contributions.

Leffel Gentry, who managed Cherry's successful campaign for the nomination over Gov. McMath, said it would cost an estimated $12,500 to operate the office until January.

"We have no campaign deficit and we have no debts," said Gentry. "We are telling each person who offers money that we have paid off our financial obligations to the campaign. We tell them we must operate on office until Mr. Cherry takes office in January and that if they want to contibute for that purpose the funds will be accepted."

Gentry said that when $12,500 was collected, "we will cease accepting contributions."

going to have a state governor — that's Mr. Cherry — and we're going to have a federal governor— that's me."

He pointed out that the Arkansas Old Guard had opposed Eisenhower, and said he would be the Republican boss of the state should the general win.

"When they, the Democrats, want anything from the federal government, they're going to have to come to me," boasted Speck.

Townsend and Cobb, in a statement, took a dim view of Speck's remarks, and warned that Speck "deserves substantial influence in our party affairs only so long as he is willing to channel his efforts through regular Republican organization."

Townsend and Cobb branded Speck's implication that Eisenhower would not do business with party officers in Arkansas as "wholly unfounded."

"From personal conversations Gen. Eisenhower and from his many public pronouncements, we know that he will not by-pass the state organization, the National Committee, or our delegation in congress in dealing with matters affecting this state," the two leaders said.

"The action of Osro Cobb in trying to repudiate me in his news release is typical of 25 years of his leadership in keeping the Republican party a closed corporation in Arkansas," said Speck.

"I am sincerely convinced that he would not like to see Gen. Eisenhower carry Arkansas in the general election.

"If Eisenhower carries the state, as I believe he will, in spite of Osro Cobb, it will put the finishing blow to the closed corporation and put the Republican party in the hands of people who are in favor of 2-party politics."

Speck also said that he felt he was as much a part of the GOP organization as anyone else, and added that he was "the only man who got anything unanimously from the state convention."

U. S. Seeks Egyption in Cotton Deal

By JAMES F. DONOVAN

WASHINGTON, (UP) — The Justice Department's anti corruption drive developed an international angle today.

Department officials said they plan to ask the Egyptian government to send here for trial the cotton dealer who has been indicted with former Agriculture Department official Clovis D. Walker on charges of conspiring to defraud the United States.

They conceded, however, that extradition agreements between Egypt and this country may not apply to outfy Mansour of the Alexandria cotton firm of R. and E. Hurl & Co. They said Mansour is now presumed to be in Egypt.

If the Egyptian cannot be brought to trial. Walker, who resigned under fire last May from his job as head of the Agriculture Department's cotton branch, will stand trial alone. If convicted, he would be liable to a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

A federal grand jury returned the indictment against Walker and Mansour yesterday after an investigation under the supervision of Vincent P. Russo and William Gallagher, special assistants to Attorney General James P. McGranery.

The jury charged that Walker and Mansour had an illegal agreement whereby Walker leaked highly-secret information about government purchases of Egyptian cotton to Mansour, giving him an advantage over other dealers.

The jury named Dyke Cullum, Washington commodity broker, as a co-conspirator who participated in the agreement. The jury did not indict Cullum, but said he sometimes relayed the secret data from Walker to Mansour.

Much of the story already has been aired before the Senate Agriculture Committee by agriculture department invstigators.

One investigator, Harold Mesibov, told the committee that Mansour sold about $37,000,000 worth of cotton to the agriculture department in 1951 and that his firm made a huge profit on the sales.

At a hearing last May, Walker conceded that he and Mansour were "good friends" and "traded" gifts. He denied giving Mansour advance information that would enable his firm to profit unduly

Shortly after his appearance, the 60-year-old, Oklahoman resigned from the Agriculture Department. In his letter of resignation, he denied he was "guilty of any willful wrongdoing" but conceded there might be evidence to "indicate some indiscretion."

Russo, who has directed the Justice Department's investigation of the case, told newsmen he had read in a trade journal that Mansour said in Egypt sometime ago that he also wanted to deny there had been any wrong-doing by either himself or Walker.

Russo said the article mentioned that Mansour had broken his leg, preventing him from returning to the United States to vindicate himself and defend Walker. If Mansour is still anxious to defend himself in court, Russo said, this may be one way around any legal difficulties.

Stevenson Pictures Ike as Taft Victim

By MERRIMAN SMITH

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UP) —Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson today assembled for eastern consumption a political road show portraying Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-O) as the villain of the election campaign and Dwight D. Eisenhower as Taft's "surrender" victim.

As Taft starts stumping for Eisenhower, the GOP presidential nominee, Stevenson apparently intended to shift more of his campaign fire to the Ohioan than at Eisenhower himself.

Members of Stevenson's staff said the governor, who on Thursday will open a speaking tour into Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Virginia and Maryland, would step up his campaign to convince the electorate that Taft had "taken over" the Eisenhower campaign and turned the former general's "great crusade" into a "great surrender".

Stevenson cleared his schedule as much as possible of routine and engagements today to complete the speeches he will use in the East against his GOP opposition.

His strategy was based on the theory held by the Stevenson camp that Taft, for Democratic campaign purposes, at any rate, was as good a target as Eisenhower, and possibly somewhat better.

Consequently, the Illinois governor will continue to push his belief that, particularly in the field of foreign policy, Eisenhower was compelled to abandon some of his own ideas to those of Taft in order to win the senator's active campaign support.

Stevenson told a news conference yesterday:

"It now appears brutally clear that Senator Taft has taken over. This puts an entirely new aspect on the campaign and the election. I suspect many people like myself will be genuinely alarmed by the reduction of their differences on foreign policy to 'differences of degree.'"

Pension Program Up in Massachusetts

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts holds its primary election today with the interest of the voters stirred by a legislative battle over a rich pension program the legislators voted themselves last July and repealed earlier today.

There are few contests for the top nominations in both contests but widespread interest in the legislators' action is expected to draw out the biggest vote since the 1948 presidential election.

There are 2,480,000 voters in Massachusetts. Followers of state politics say today's turnout may exceed the 33 per cent who voted two years ago and may even approach the 47 per cent turnout of 1948.

Sen. Henry Cabo Lodge, Republican, has no competition in his bid for renomination. Neither has his Democratic opponent, U. S. Rep. John F. Kennedy.

Gov. Paul A. Dever (D), seeking a third term, also is unopposed as is his GOP opponent, U. S. Rep. Christian A. Herter.

There are Democratic contests in eight of the 14 congressional districts and Republican contests in four.

Polls close at 7 p. m. EST at the latest.

Rails Try Out Small TV Sets

CHICAGO (AP)— Pintsized television went railroading today to show how it might save wear and tear on both rolling stock and personnel.

The new uses of television were under exploration here in tests conducted this afternoon by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the RCA Victor Division of Radio Corporation of America.

Placed into service were three small Vidicon industrial TV systems which are supposed to permit men in mixed locations to do jobs which normally would require extra movement of both men and freight cars.

The new wrinkle has the checker must walk among trains and over tracks to list car numbers on an incoming train to assign the cars to other trains headed for various sections of the country.

Identity of Indian Maid Is Sought

FT. WORTH Tex. (AP) — Kim, the self-designated Indian girl who was found Friday in woods near Ft. Worth, may be a youngster who disappeared two months ago from a girls camp in Connecticut.

Both Connecticut state police and the father of Connie Smith, who left the camp last July 16, were checking into the possibility late last night. She is the granddaughter of Nils H. Smith, a former governor of Wyoming.

Connie is only 10, but is well developed for her age and in other physical respects bears a resemblance to the girl who was found here.

Peter Smith, father of Connie, called the Ft. Worth Star-Telegram by telephone late last night from his ranch at Neecastle, Wyo., seeking information about the case. Told about Kim's appearance, he said the resemblance was striking and he planned to check into the matter today.

Kim, who said she was a member of an Iroquois Indian tribe living on a St. Regis River island between the United States and Canada, was at home last night on the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Bowen, near Antelope, Tex.

Their 1,200 acre ranch has no telephone, and Kim was unavailable for comment. Smith will try to make contact with the Bowens today.

Smith said that Connie had had an injury, and that she may be suffering from amnesia.

Tito Would Delay Trieste Decision

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Premier Marshal Tito says Italy and Yugoslavia should put aside their bitter dispute over Trieste until they can approach the question "with more sense."

"Let's co operate on other questions which are of extreme importance such as assurance against aggression, economic exchanges and the preservation of the peace of the world," Tito said.

He spoke yesterday before an estimated crowd of 250,000 persons who had converged by truck and train on the little Slovene town of Dolnjske Toplice to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the formation of a wartime partisan unit there.

The unyielding claims of both Italy and Yugoslavia to the free territory of Trieste, at the head of the Adriatic, have worried the Western Allies trying to promote co-operation between countries opposed to Soviet aggression.

Tito suggested that, pending a later approach to the Trieste question, Italy and Yugoslavia set up a joint administration for the territory. The disputed buffer region between the two nations now is divided into two zones, one administered by Yugoslavia and the other by Britain and the United States with Italian assistance.

New Russian Ambassador

Zarubin is expected to pay a formal call on Secretary of State Acheson in the next few days, before presenting his credentials to President Truman at the White House.

Morse Hints Big Split With Ike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Wayne Morse began drafting a speech today for the American Federation of Labor National Convention which may point up a major difference between him and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The Oregon Republican told newsmen he would not complete the text of his address until after he read Eisenhower's speech before the AFL Convention in New York tomorrow. Morse's talk is set for Thursday.

Morse, who describes himself as a constitutional liberal and frequently is in the opposite camp from many of his Republican Senate colleagues, was an early booster of Eisenhower for the GOP presidential nomination.

But he has announced he is highly dissatisfied with the turn the general's campaign has taken recently, particularly with the hearty reception given to Sen. Robert A Taft of Ohio.

Morse says that as matters now stand he will vote for Eisenhower and believes the GOP nominee will win the election, but that he plans no active campaign for him.

Morse lists the labor-management issue as one on which he has sharp differences with the Eisenhower camp. And he pats Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson on the back for his stand on this same question.

Morse favors a drastic rewriting of the Taft-Hartley Act. Stevenson has come out for Taft-Hartley repeal followed by a fresh start on a labor-management relations law a position Morse said was "sound."

Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor and an old friend of Morse, came here from Eisenhower headquarters in New York after Morse had indicated Saturday his coolness toward the GOP nominee.

After his talk with Stassen, Morse said his decision not to campaign actively this fall remained unchanged. The same went, he said, for his refusal to sit on the platform with Eisenhower at the AFL Convention.

Negro Singer Is Attacked

FT. LEE, N. J. (AP)—Pearl Bailey, Negro singing comedienne, was beaten early Monday by an unidentified man as she was leaving Bill Miller's Riviera, a swank night spot here.

Nathan Allyn, acting Bergen County detective chief, quoted the entertainer as saying that the man approached her in the lobby of the night club, cursed at her, grabbed her by the throat and beat her.

Miss Bailey broke away but her assailant chased her to behind the club's stage where he kicked her and knocked her down.

Others who were leaving the night spot came to her aid, but the man who beat Miss Bailey got away, Allyn said.

Her manager and attorney, Chauncey Olman, said Miss Bailey received possible concussion, bruises and cuts and was under medical care at her home.

Expectant Mother Loses Fight to Polio

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Mrs. Vincent E. Skillman Jr. lived through a rigorous 200-mile trip to a hospital here last night despite a faltering motor on the portable iron lung in which she was encased.

The 23-year old expectant mother and wife of a University of Arkansas student from Memphis died hours later at St. Vincent's Infirmary here from infantile paralysis.

Fayetteville Fire Department Fireman Merlin Bayer handpumped the portable respirator after it had failed during the trip by ambulance.

Death came to the woman after she was placed in a tank-type respirator at the hospital. Doctors had been unable to check her illness.

Mrs. Skillman was transferred fom the Washington County Hospital in Fayetteville to the Little Rock [illegible] hospital [illegible] doctors learned she needed the tank-type respirator.

State Moves Out of AIC Conference

JONESBORO — Dr. Carl Reng, president of Arkansas State College, says the school is "not a member of the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference in football" and may not compete in the conference basketball race.

A second top State official — who declined use of his name, said yesterday that the school had not paid its dues and was not complying with new conference regulations against subsidization of athletes.

"We are not members of the AIC in football," commented Reng.

Asked if State would be a member in basketball, he replied:

"We haven't decided definitely about that yet, but I think not.

"If you can't compete for a championship, I can't see any point in belonging to a conference."

The president added that "we are looking forward to belonging to some conference" but at the present State will remain an independent.

State has been a member of the AIC since 1946 but has never scheduled the required number of conference football games to qualify for the title.

Michigan Officer Seeke Slayer

FT. SMITH (AP) — A U. S. commissioner yesterday recommended that a 21-year-old escaped convict be returned to Michigan to face charges of murder in the pistol slaying of two men.

U. S. Commissioner Walter Gutensohn recommended to Federal Judge John E. Miller that Harold Maurice Hummel Jr., be extradited. Hummel, an escapee from a Michigan prison, is being held here on a federal charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

The young fugitive was captured by Sheriff Bob Pritchard at nearby Ozark, Ark., last Thursday.

Federal authorities have indicated that they will turn Hummel over to Michigan police for prosecution on the murder charge even if the federal government takes him to that state.

But two Michigan officers want immediate custody of Hummel. After the hearing before Gutensohn, Detective Lt. Valoris Lee Scott of Hazel Park, Mich., and Michigan State Police Lt. Jack Pletzk left for Little Rock to ask Gov. McMath to approve extradition of Hummel.

Hummel is charged with slaying Vido and Joseph Vinokrouw at Hazel Park last month. At yesterday's hearing, he denied any knowledge of the killings.

DOROTHY DIX

Engaged to Alcoholic

Dear Miss Dix: A very dear girl friend of mine is going with a boy, and planning to marry him next June. He drinks to excess and she knows it, but she claims he will stop once they are married. He has broken many a date with her because he was too drunk to come over. Of course, she is convinced that she does not need help, but I am equally convinced that she Goes.

ANNE R.

Answer: And your conviction is so right, Anne! Your friend is headed for certain unhappiness unless she comes to her senses. So many girls have been taken in by the meaningless promise of reform after marriage, and, so many, who are even more foolish, believe that marriage will automatically make a man of a spineless creature.

If the following statement were believed by every prospective bride unhappy marriage would become a rarity: No man who doesn't love a girl enough to try to overcome his basic bad habits before marriage will not change later. The nuptial ceremony contains no magic words to create character where none exists.

He Must Reform First

Some faults may be hidden from a fiancee, but an alcoholic cannot conceal his weakness. It is very possible that the faith and devotion of a worthy girl can reform him—but the reform must come before she marries him; it will never come later.

If your friend has a strong will of her own — as she seems to have — it should be directed toward making a man of her fiance now. If he honestly loves her and wants to be a good husband, he will find a strong ally in Alcoholics Anonymous, one of the most marvelous organizations ever founded for the rehabilitation of man. The Salvation Army also performs a wonderful service along the same line. However, all the help in the world will be of no use to a man who is not willing to help himself.

Your are probably powerless to extend much assistance to your friend; paradoxically, people who need help most are often those who will listen least.

If you could bring your friend into a home that is being wrecked through alcoholism, her eyes might open. Somewhere in your circle of acquaintances you may know some such home; have your friend talk to the wife and she'll get a fine idea of the life in store for herself.

Whatever she elects to do, stick by her for, I assure you, as the wife of a heavy drinker, she will need every friend she has.

Dear Miss Dix: I have been working in a shop during the summer. Working with me is a 24-year old college man who is also here for the summer. He has asked me to go out with him but I hesitate because I am six years younger than he.

ELISE G. H.

Answer: The difference in your ages isn't enough to interfere with friendship, but you must face the fact that when the boy leaves the shop and returns to school, other interests will occupy his mind and time. Don't become too serious over him.

Dear Miss Dix: We are two young teen-agers, each with two boy friends. We can't make up our minds which we like better. Our parents say we are too young to be thinking of one boy only, but the problem is when we go with one boy the other gets mad.

K and L

Answer: Since you are definitely too young to be going steady, let the boys know that this is your attitude, and that your parents uphold it. If one boy is annoyed because you go with another, let the irritated one go.

Editors Say West Leans Toward Ike

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP)—The Mountain and Western states, almost as solidly Democratic as the South in presidential elections over the last [illegible] years, now are regarded by editors and correspondents as leaning [illegible] but still a 1952 toss-up. [illegible] Press survey, [illegible] individual county estimates [illegible] editors and political [illegible] each state, indicates [illegible] opinion is that only [illegible] states could be considered reasonably safe for the [illegible] the election were [illegible] time. The Democrats [illegible] 10 of the 11 in 1948.

If present trends hold good through Nov. 4 —and many of the states still must be kept on the doubtful list— the newspaper men [illegible] the 79 electoral votes of the Mountain and Western states would line up this way behind the presidential nominees:

Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower: California 32, Oregon 6, [illegible], Idaho 4, Utah 4, [illegible], Montana 4, Nevada [illegible]. Total 69.

[illegible] Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson: Arizona 4.

Undecided: Colorado 6.

[illegible] surveys of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware, released yesterday, indicate that editors and political writers hold a composite belief that if the people were voting today the 106 electoral ballots of those five states would go to Eisenhower by a narrow margin.

The Eastern votes, plus 69 from the West, would give the GOP nominee 174 of the 266 needed to [illegible] victory.

But in the West, as in the East, [illegible] slight shifting of the political winds could blow almost any state in an entirely different direction by the time Nov. 4 rolls around.

The views of editors and correspondents in the Mountain and West [illegible] add up to an opinion that most of the states are so close at this point as to be very much in doubt.

Editors report a widespread feeling among the people that it's time for a change. They speak also of "too much Trumanism" [illegible] with inflation, high [illegible], foreign policy, war in Korea, [illegible] and Communism in government." To a much easier degree than in the Middle Atlantic states is there mention of Eisenhower's personal popularity as a campaign factor.

The composite view of 32 editors and writers who took soundings in Oregon was that Eisenhower would carry the state without much trouble, whereas Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York won it from President Truman in 1748 by less than 18,000 votes out of a total of more than 500,000 cast.

But that was before Stevenson brought his campaign into the state.

A Republican editor had said that in his county Stevenson's vote would "jump 20 per cent or more" if the Democratic nominee made even as much as one whistle stop there.

Editors and a Portland polling organization agreed that Stevenson did make gains as a result of invading Oregon last week. But those might be offset if Eisenhower shows up in Oregon on a personal appearance tour.

In Oregon, and in all other states, current political sentiment was tapped county by county with the cooperation of Associated Press member newspapers and radio stations and the help of other newspapers and local correspondents.

County estimates were combined into state estimates, with weight given to the voting power of the various counties.

The survey offers these views of political conditions in the Mountain and Western states as of now:

California —

Eisenhower would win by a slim margin in the opinion of California editors, if the polls were open today. But the margin is so slender that the state is considered doubtful.

President Truman captured it four years ago, but by about 18,000 votes out of a total of 3,800,000.

Oregon —

The only Western state to go Republican in 1948 is considered by Oregon editors as likely to be a repeater in 1952.

Those taking part in the survey provided estimates for 25 of 30 counties which will cast 90 per cent of the estimated vote.

Washington —

New and independent voters may determine the winner in a race in which the consensus of Washington newspapers indicates Eisenhower now is leading by a whisker.

Of more than 30 daily and weekly newspapers that co-operated in the survey, 18 are supporting Eisenhower and none has come out for Stevenson.

Letters to the Editor

This is your newspaper. Write to it. Letters criticizing the editorial policy or commenting upon facts in the news columns, are equally welcome. Every writer must sign his name and address but publication of name may be withheld if requested.

Dear Editor:

"Usually when we write a fire prevention storie for the public we continually plead for and advise that people exercise every possible precaution in preventing fires on the farm, pasture, meadows and in the forest. But in an answer to our several stories in the local papers seeking cooperation we feel this story should be a 'Thank You' note for the complete cooperation we have been receiving from the public in an effort to keep fires to a minimum.

"In all my 18 years in fire control work we have never received better cooperation from the public and as a result this section of the state to date hasn't suffered too heavily from fires. Therefore, we take this opportunity to Thank each and everyone for their splendid cooperation.

Cherry Opens Little Rock Office

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Democratic Gubernatorial Nominee Francis Cherry yesterday opened an office here and his campaign manager said it would be financed by contributions.

Leffel Gentry, who managed Cherry's successful campaign for the nomination over Gov. McMath, said it would cost an estimated $12,500 to operate the office until January.

"We have no campaign deficit and we have no debts," said Gentry. "We are telling each person who offers money that we have paid off our financial obligations to the campaign. We tell them we must operate on office until Mr. Cherry takes office in January and that if they want to contibute for that purpose the funds will be accepted."

Gentry said that when $12,500 was collected, "we will cease accepting contributions."

going to have a state governor — that's Mr. Cherry — and we're going to have a federal governor—that's me."

He pointed out that the Arkansas Old Guard had opposed Eisenhower, and said he would be the Republican boss of the state should the general win.

"When they, the Democrats, want anything from the federal government, they're going to have to come to me," boasted Speck.

Townsend and Cobb, in a statement, took a dim view of Speck's remarks, and warned that Speck "deserves substantial influence in our party affairs only so long as he is willing to channel his efforts through regular Republican organization."

Townsend and Cobb branded Speck's implication that Eisenhower would not do business with party officers in Arkansas as "wholly unfounded."

"From personal conversations Gen. Eisenhower and from his many public pronouncements, we know that he will not by-pass the state organization, the National Committee, or our delegation in congress in dealing with matters affecting this state," the two leaders said.

"The action of Osro Cobb in trying to repudiate me in his news release is typical of 25 years of his leadership in keeping the Republican party a closed corporation in Arkansas," said Speck.

"I am sincerely convinced that he would not like to see Gen. Eisenhower carry Arkansas in the general election.

"If Eisenhower carries the state, as I believe he will, in spite of Osro Cobb, it will put the finishing blow to the closed corporation and put the Republican party in the hands of people who are in favor of 2-party politics."

Speck also said that he felt he was as much a part of the GOP organization as anyone else, and added that he was "the only man who got anything unanimously from the state convention."

Apparently, he was referring to [illegible]

U. S. Seeks Egyption in Cotton Deal

By JAMES F. DONOVAN

WASHINGTON, (UP) — The Justice Department's anti corruption drive developed an international angle today.

Department officials said they plan to ask the Egyptian government to send here for trial the cotton dealer who has been indicted with former Agriculture Department official Clovis D. Walker on charges of conspiring to defraud the United States.

They conceded, however, that extradition agreements between Egypt and this country may not apply to outfy Mansour of the Alexandria cotton firm of H. and E. Hurl & Co. They said Mansour is now presumed to be in Egypt.

If the Egyptian cannot be brought to trial, Walker, who resigned under fire last May from his job as head of the Agriculture Department's cotton branch, will stand trial alone. If convicted, he would be liable to a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

A federal grand jury returned the indictment against Walker and Mansour yesterday after an investigation under the supervision of Vincent P. Russo and William Gallagher, special assistants to Attorney General James P. McGranery.

The jury charged that Walker and Mansour had an illegal agreement whereby Walker leaked highly-secret information about government purchases of Egyptian cotton to Mansour, giving him an advantage over other dealers.

The jury named Dyke Cullum, Washington commodity broker, as a co-conspirator who participated in the agreement. The jury did not indict Cullum, but said he sometimes relayed the secret data from Walker to Mansour.

Much of the story already has been aired before the Senate Agriculture Committee by agriculture department investgators.

One investigator, Harold Mesibov, told the committee that Mansour sold about $37,000,000 worth of cotton to the agriculture department in 1951 and that his firm made a huge profit on the sales.

At a hearing last May, Walker conceded that he and Mansour were "good friends" and "traded" gifts. He denied giving Mansour advance information that would enable his firm to profit unduly.

Shortly after his appearance, the 60-year-old Oklahoman resigned from the Agriculture Department. In his letter of resignation, he denied he was "guilty of any willful wrongdoing" but conceded there might be evidence to "indicate some indiscretion."

Russo, who has directed the Justice Department's investigation of the case, told newsmen he had read in a trade journal that Mansour said in Egypt sometime ago that he also wanted to deny there had been any wrong-doing by either himself or Walker.

Russo said the article mentioned that Mansour had broken his leg, preventing him from returning to the United States to vindicate himself and defend Walker. If Mansour is still anxious to defend himself in court, Russo said, this may be one way around any legal difficulties.

Stevenson Pictures Ike as Taft Victim

By MERRIMAN SMITH

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UP) —Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson today assembled for eastern consumption a political road show portraying Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-O) as the villain of the election campaign and Dwight D. Eisenhower as Taft's "surrender" victim.

As Taft starts stumping for Eisenhower, the GOP presidential nominee, Stevenson apparently intended to shift more of his campaign fire to the Ohioan than at Eisenhower himself.

Members of Stevenson's staff said the governor, who on Thursday will open a speaking tour into Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Virginia and Maryland, would step up his campaign to convince the electorate that Taft had "taken over" the Eisenhower campaign and turned the former general's "great crusade" into a "great surrender".

Stevenson cleared his schedule as much as possible of routine and engagements today to complete the speeches he will use in the East against his GOP opposition.

His strategy was based on the theory held by the Stevenson camp that Taft, for Democratic campaign purposes, at any rate, was as good a target as Eisenhower, and possibly somewhat better.

Consequently, the Illinois governor will continue to push his belief that, particularly in the field of foreign policy, Eisenhower was compelled to abandon some of his own ideas to those of Taft in order to win the senator's active campaign support.

Stevenson told a news conference yesterday:

"It now appears brutally clear that Senator Taft has taken over. This puts an entirely new aspect on the campaign and the election. I suspect many people like myself will be genuinely alarmed by the reduction of their differences on foreign policy to 'differences of degree.'"

Pension Program Up in Massachusetts

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts holds its primary election today with the interest of the voters stirred by a legislative battle over a rich pension program the legislators voted themselves last July and repealed earlier today.

There are few contests for the top nominations in both contests but widespread interest in the legislators' action is expected to draw out the biggest vote since the 1948 presidential election.

There are 2,480,000 voters in Massachusetts. Followers of state politics say today's turnout may exceed the 33 per cent who voted two years ago and may even approach the 47 per cent turnout of 1948.

Sen. Henry Cabo Lodge, Republican, has no competition in his bid for renomination. Neither has his Democratic opponent, U. S. Rep. John F. Kennedy.

Gov. Paul A. Dever (D), seeking a third term, also is unopposed as is his GOP opponent, U. S. Rep. Christian A. Herter.

There are Democratic contests in eight of the 14 congressional districts and Republican contests in four.

Rails Try Out Small TV Sets

CHICAGO (AP)— Pintsized television went railroading today to show how it might save wear and tear on both rolling stock and personnel.

The new uses of television were under exploration here in tests conducted this afternoon by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the RCA Victor Division of Radio Corporation of America.

Placed into service were three small Vidicon industrial TV systems which are supposed to permit men in mixed locations to do jobs which normally would require extra movement of both men and freight cars.

The new wrinkle has the checker must walk among trains and over tracks to list car numbers on an incoming train to assign the cars to other trains headed for various sections of the country.

McIntosh — McWilliams Wedding Announced

Miss Fern Dell McWilliams of Casmalia, Calif., became the bride of Howard Fields McIntosh of Santa Maria, Calif., in a double ring ceremony performed by the Reverend William A. Larson, pastor of the Grace Baptist Church, in the Nazarene Church of Santa Maria July 6.

Mrs. McIntosh is the daughter of Mary Hockett McWilliams and the late Edwin McWilliams and is the great granddaughter of J. W. McWilliams of Shover Springs. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. McIntosh.

Miss Wanda McWilliams, sister of the bride and maid of honor, chose a gown of light green nylon tulle and matching cap. She carried a nosegay of pink carnations.

Harold Hartly of Santa Maria served Mr. McIntosh as best man. Ushers were Ed, Jr., and Jack Fields of Los Alamos, cousins of the groom.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh are graduates of Union High School of Santa Maria. The couple is at home at 217 C. West Park St. Santa Maria, where the groom is employed.

Identity of Indian Maid Is Sought

FT. WORTH Tex. (AP) — Kim, the self-designated Indian girl who was found Friday in woods near Ft. Worth, may be a youngster who disappeared two months ago from a girls camp in Connecticut.

Both Connecticut state police and the father of Connie Smith, who left the camp last July 16, were checking into the possibility late last night. She is the granddaughter of Nils H. Smith, a former governor of Wyoming.

Connie is only 10, but is well developed for her age and in other physical respects bears a resemblance to the girl who was found here.

Peter Smith, father of Connie, called the Ft. Worth Star-Telegram by telephone late last night from his ranch at Neecastle, Wyo., seeking information about the case. Told about Kim's appearance, he said the resemblance was striking and he planned to check into the matter today.

Kim, who said she was a member of an Iroquois Indian tribe living on a St. Regis River island between the United States and Canada, was at home last night on the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Bowen, near Antelope, Tex.

Their 1,200 acre ranch has no telephone, and Kim was unavailable for comment. Smith will try to make contact with the Bowens today.

Smith said that Connie had had an injury, and that she may be suffering from amnesia.

Tito Would Delay Trieste Decision

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Premier Marshal Tito says Italy and Yugoslavia should put aside their bitter dispute over Trieste until they can approach the question "with more sense."

"Let's co operate on other questions which are of extreme importance such as assurance against aggression, economic exchanges and the preservation of the peace of the world," Tito said.

He spoke yesterday before an estimated crowd of 250,000 persons who had converged by truck and train on the little Slovene town of Delnjske Toplice to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the formation of a wartime partisan unit there.

The unyielding claims of both Italy and Yugoslavia to the free territory of Trieste, at the head of the Adriatic, have worried the Western Allies trying to promote co-operation between countries opposed to Soviet aggression.

Tito suggested that, pending a later approach to the Trieste question, Italy and Yugoslavia set up a joint administration for the territory. The disputed buffer region between the two nations now is divided into two zones, one administered by Yugoslavia and the other by Britain and the United States with Italian assistance.

Morse Hints Big Split With Ike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Wayne Morse began drafting a speech today for the American Federation of Labor National Convention which may point up a major difference between him and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The Oregon Republican told newsmen he would not complete the text of his address until after he read Eisenhower's speech before the AFL Convention in New York tomorrow. Morse's talk is set for Thursday.

Morse, who describes himself as a constitutional liberal and frequently is in the opposite camp from many of his Republican Senate colleagues, was an early booster of Eisenhower for the GOP presidential nomination.

But he has announced he is highly dissatisfied with the turn the general's campaign has taken recently, particularly with the hearty reception given to Sen. Robert A Taft of Ohio.

Morse says that as matters now stand he will vote for Eisenhower and believes the GOP nominee will win the election, but that he plans no active campaign for him.

Morse lists the labor-management issue as one on which he has sharp differences with the Eisenhower camp. And he pats Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson on the back for his stand on this same question.

Morse favors a drastic rewriting of the Taft-Hartley Act. Stevenson has come out for Taft-Hartley repeal followed by a fresh start on a labor-management relations law a position Morse said was "sound."

Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor and an old friend of Morse, came here from Eisenhower headquarters in New York after Morse had indicated Saturday his coolness toward the GOP nominee.

After his talk with Stassen, Morse said his decision not to campaign actively this fall remained unchanged. The same went, he said, for his refusal to sit on the platform with Eisenhower at the AFL Convention.

Negro Singer Is Attacked

FT. LEE, N. J. (AP)—Pearl Bailey, Negro singing comedienne, was beaten early Monday by an unidentified man as she was leaving Bill Miller's Riviera, a swank night spot here.

Nathan Allyn, acting Bergen County detective chief, quoted the entertainer as saying that the man approached her in the lobby of the night club, cursed at her, grabbed her by the throat and beat her.

Miss Bailey broke away but her assailant chased her to behind the club's stage where he kicked her and knocked her down.

Others who were leaving the night spot came to her aid, but the man who beat Miss Bailey got away, Allyn said.

Her manager and attorney, Chauncey Olman, said Miss Bailey received possible concussion, bruises and cuts and was under medical care at her home.

Expectant Mother Loses Fight to Polio

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Mrs. Vincent E. Skillman Jr. lived through a rigorous 200-mile trip to a hospital here last night despite a faltering motor on the portable iron lung in which she was encased.

The 23-year old expectant mother and wife of a University of Arkansas student from Memphis died hours later at St. Vincent's Infirmary here from infantile paralysis.

Fayetteville Fire Department Fireman Merlin Bayer hand-pumped the portable respirator after it had failed during the trip by ambulance.

Death came to the woman after she was placed in a tank-type respirator at the hospital. Doctors had been unable to check her illness.

Mrs. Skillman was transferred from the Washington County Hospital in Fayetteville to the Little Rock hospital [illegible]

State Moves Out of AIC Conference

JONESBORO — Dr. Carl Reng, president of Arkansas State College, says the school is "not a member of the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference in football" and may not compete in the conference basketball race.

A second top State official — who declined use of his name, said yesterday that the school had not paid its dues and was not complying with new conference regulations against subsidization of athletes.

"We are not members of the AIC in football," commented Reng. Asked if State would be a member in basketball, he replied:

"We haven't decided definitely about that yet, but I think not.

"If you can't compete for a championship, I can't see any point in belonging to a conference."

The president added that "we are looking forward to belonging to some conference" but at the present State will remain an independent.

State has been a member of the AIC since 1946 but has never scheduled the required number of conference football games to qualify for the title.

Michigan Officer Seeke Slayer

FT. SMITH (AP) — A U. S. commissioner yesterday recommended that a 21-year-old escaped convict be returned to Michigan to face charges of murder in the pistol slaying of two men.

U. S. Commissioner Walter Gutensohn recommended to Federal Judge John E. Miller that Harold Maurice Hummel Jr., be extradited. Hummel, an escapee from a Michigan prison, is being held here on a federal charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

The young fugitive was captured by Sheriff Bob Pritchard at nearby Ozark, Ark., last Thursday.

Federal authorities have indicated that they will turn Hummel over to Michigan police for prosecution on the murder charge even if the federal government takes him to that state.

But two Michigan officers want immediate custody of Hummel. After the hearing before Gutensohn, Detective Lt. Valoris Lee Scott of Hazel Park, Mich., and Michigan State Police Lt. Jack Pletzk left for Little Rock to ask Gov. McMath to approve extradition of Hummel.

Hummel is charged with slaying Vido and Joseph Vinokrouw at Hazel Park last month. At yesterday's hearing, he denied any knowledge of the killings.

DOROTHY DIX

Engaged to Alcoholic

Dear Miss Dix: A very dear girl friend of mine is going with a boy, and planning to marry him next June. He drinks to excess and she knows it, but she claims he will stop once they are married. He has broken many a date with her because he was too drunk to come over. Of course, she is convinced that she does not need help, but I am equally convinced that she does.

ANNE R.

Answer: And your conviction is so right, Anne! Your friend is headed for certain unhappiness unless she comes to her senses. So many girls have been taken in by the meaningless promise of reform after marriage, and, so many, who are even more foolish, believe that marriage will automatically make a man of a spineless creature.

If the following statement were believed by every prospective bride unhappy marriage would become a rarity; No man who doesn't love a girl enough to try to overcome his basic bad habits before marriage will not change later. The nuptial ceremony contains no magic words to create character where none exists.

He Must Reform First

Some faults may be hidden from a fiancee, but an alcoholic cannot conceal his weakness. It is very possible that the faith and devotion of a worthy girl can reform him—but the reform must come before she marries him; it will never come later.

If your friend has a strong will of her own — as she seems to have — it should be directed toward making a man of her fiance now. If he honestly loves her and wants to be a good husband, he will find a strong ally in Alcoholics Anonymous, one of the most marvelous organizations ever founded for the rehabilitation of man. The Salvation Army also performs a wonderful service along the same line. However, all the help in the world will be of no use to a man who is not willing to help himself.

Your are probably powerless to extend much assistance to your friend; paradoxically, people who need help most are often those who will listen least.

If you could bring your friend into a home that is being wrecked through alcoholism, her eyes might open. Somewhere in your circle of acquaintances you may know some such home; have your friend talk to the wife and she'll get a fine idea of the life in store for herself.

Whatever she elects to do, stick by her for, I assure you, as the wife of a heavy drinker, she will need every friend she has.

Dear Miss Dix: I have been working in a shop during the summer. Working with me is a 24-year old college man who is also here for the summer. He has asked me to go out with him but I hesitate because I am six years younger than he.

ELISE G. H.

Answer: The difference in your ages isn't enough to interfere with friendship, but you must face the fact that when the boy leaves the shop and returns to school, other interests will occupy his mind and time. Don't become too serious over him.

Dear Miss Dix: We are two young teen-agers, each with two boy friends. We can't make up our minds which we like better. Our parents say we are too young to be thinking of one boy only, but the problem is when we go with one boy the other gets mad.

K and L

Answer: Since you are definitely too young to be going steady, let the boys know that this is your attitude, and that your parents uphold it. If one boy is annoyed because you go with another, let the irritated one go.

Editors Say West Leans Toward Ike

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP)—The Mountain and Western states, almost as solidly Democratic as the South in presidential elections over the last 20 years, now are regarded by editors and correspondents as leaning [illegible] but still a 1952 toss-up.

An Associated Press survey, based on individual county estimates by editors and political [illegible] in each state, indicates [illegible] opinion is that only [illegible] states could be considered reasonably safe for the [illegible] if the election were held at this time. The Democrats captured 10 of the 11 in 1948.

If present trends hold good through Nov. 4 —and many of the [illegible] still must be kept on the [illegible] list —the newspaper men [illegible] the 79 electoral votes of the Mountain and Western states would line up this way behind the presidential nominees:

The Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower: California 32, Oregon 6, [illegible] 9, Idaho 4, Utah 4, [illegible] 4, Montana 4, Nevada [illegible] 3. Total 69.

[illegible] Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson: [illegible]

Undecided: Colorado 6.

AP surveys of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware, released yesterday, indicate that editors and political writers hold a composite belief that if the people were voting today the 105 electoral ballots of those five states would go to Eisenhower by a narrow margin.

The Eastern votes, plus 69 from the West, would give the GOP nominee 174 of the 266 needed to clinch a victory.

But in the West, as in the East, even a slight shifting of the political winds could blow almost any state in an entirely different direction by the time Nov. 4 rolls around.

The views of editors and correspondents in the Mountain and Western states add up to an opinion that most of the states are so close at this point as to be very much in doubt.

Editors report a widespread feeling among the people that it's time for a change. They speak also of "too much Trumanism" dissatisfaction with inflation, high taxes, foreign policy, war in Korea [illegible] and Communism in government." To a much easier degree than in the Middle Atlantic states is there mention of Eisenhower's personal popularity as a campaign factor.

The composite view of 32 editors and writers who took soundings in Oregon was that Eisenhower would carry the state without much trouble, whereas Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York won it from President Truman in 1748 by less than 18,000 votes out of a total of more than 500,000 cast.

But that was before Stevenson brought his campaign into the state.

A Republican editor had said that in his county Stevenson's vote would "jump 20 per cent or more" if the Democratic nominee made even as much as one whistle stop there.

Editors and a Portland polling organization agreed that Stevenson did make gains as a result of invading Oregon last week. But these might be offset if Eisenhower shows up in Oregon on a personal appearance tour.

In Oregon, and in all other states, current political sentiment was tapped county by county with the cooperation of Associated Press member newspapers and radio stations and the help of other newspapers and local correspondents.

County estimates were combined into state estimates, with weight given to the voting power of the various counties.

The survey offers these views of political conditions in the Mountain and Western states as of now:

California —

Eisenhower would win by a slim margin in the opinion of California editors, if the polls were open today. But the margin is so slender that the state is considered doubtful.

President Truman captured it four years ago, but by about 18,000 votes out of a total of 3,800,000.

Oregon —

The only Western state to go Republican in 1948 is considered by Oregon editors as likely to be a repeater in 1952.

Those taking part in the survey provided estimates for 25 of 30 counties which will cast 90 per cent of the estimated vote.

Washington —

New and independent voters may determine the winner in a race in which the consensus of Washington newspapers indicates Eisenhower now is leading by a whisker.

Of more than 30 daily and weekly newspapers that co-operated in the survey, 18 are supporting Eisenhower and none has come out for Stevenson.

Letters to the Editor

This is your newspaper. Write to it. Letters criticizing the editorial policy of commenting upon facts in the news columns, are equally welcome. Every writer must sign his name and address but publication of name may be withheld if requested.

Dear Editor:

"Usually when we write a fire prevention storie for the public we continually plead for and advise that people exercise every possible precaution in preventing fires on the farm, pasture, meadows and in the forest. But in an answer to our several stories in the local papers seeking cooperation we feel this story should be a 'Thank You' note for the complete cooperation we have been receiving from the public in an effort to keep fires to a minimum.

"In all my 18 years in fire control work we have never received better cooperation from the public and as a result this section of the state to date hasn't suffered too heavily from fires. Therefore, we take this opportunity to 'Thank each and everyone for their splendid cooperation.

Cherry Opens Little Rock Office

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Democratic Gubernatorial Nominee Francis Cherry yesterday opened an office here and his campaign manager said it would be financed by contributions.

Leffel Gentry, who managed Cherry's successful campaign for the nomination over Gov. McMath, said it would cost an estimated $12,500 to operate the office until January.

"We have no campaign deficit and we have no debts," said Gentry. "We are telling each person who offers money that we have paid off our financial obligations to the campaign. We tell them we must operate on office until Mr. Cherry takes office in January and that if they want to contibute for that purpose the funds will be accepted."

Gentry said that when $12,500 was collected, "we will cease accepting contributions."

going to have a state governor — that's Mr. Cherry — and we're going to have a federal governor—that's me."

He pointed out that the Arkansas Old Guard had opposed Eisenhower, and said he would be the Republican boss of the state should the general win.

"When they, the Democrats, want anything from the federal government, they're going to have to come to me," boasted Speck.

Townsend and Cobb, in a statement, took a dim view of Speck's remarks, and warned that Speck "deserves substantial influence in our party affairs only so long as he is willing to channel his efforts through regular Republican organization."

Townsend and Cobb branded Speck's implication that Eisenhower would not do business with party officers in Arkansas as "wholly unfounded."

"From personal conversations Gen. Eisenhower and from his many public pronouncements, we know that he will not by-pass the state organization, the National Committee, or our delegation in congress in dealing with matters affecting this state," the two leaders said.

Reached last night at his home in Frenchmans Bayou, Speck centered his fire on Cobb.

"The action of Osro Cobb in trying to repudiate me in his news release is typical of 25 years of his leadership in keeping the Republican party a closed corporation in Arkansas," said Speck.

"I am sincerely convinced that he would not like to see Gen. Eisenhower carry Arkansas in the general election.

"If Eisenhower carries the state, as I believe he will, in spite of Osro Cobb, it will put the finishing blow to the closed corporation and put the Republican party in the hands of people who are in favor of 2-party politics."

Speck also said that he felt he was as much a part of the GOP organization as anyone else, and added that he was "the only man who got anything unanimously from the state convention."

U. S. Seeks Egyption in Cotton Deal

By JAMES F. DONOVAN

WASHINGTON, (UP) — The Justice Department's anti corruption drive developed an international angle today.

Department officials said they plan to ask the Egyptian government to send here for trial the cotton dealer who has been indicted with former Agriculture Department official Clovis D. Walker on charges of conspiring to defraud the United States.

They conceded, however, that extradition agreements between Egypt and this country may not apply to outfy Mansour of the Alexandria cotton firm of R. and E. Hurl & Co. They said Mansour is now presumed to be in Egypt.

If the Egyptian cannot be brought to trial, Walker, who resigned under fire last May from his job as head of the Agriculture Department's cotton branch, will stand trial alone. If convicted, he would be liable to a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

A federal grand jury returned the indictment against Walker and Mansour yesterday after an investigation under the supervision of Vincent P. Russo and William Gallagher, special assistants to Attorney General James P. McGranery.

The jury charged that Walker and Mansour had an illegal agreement whereby Walker leaked highly-secret information about government purchases of Egyptian cotton to Mansour, giving him an advantage over other dealers.

The jury named Dyke Cullum, Washington commodity broker, as a co-conspirator who participated in the agreement. The jury did not indict Cullum, but said he sometimes relayed the secret data from Walker to Mansour.

Much of the story already has been aired before the Senate Agriculture Committee by agriculture department investigators.

One investigator, Harold Mesibov, told the committee that Mansour sold about $37,000,000 worth of cotton to the agriculture department in 1951 and that his firm made a huge profit on the sales.

At a hearing last May, Walker conceded that he and Mansour were "good friends" and "traded" gifts. He denied giving Mansour advance information that would enable his firm to profit unduly

Shortly after his appearance, the 60-year-old Oklahoman resigned from the Agriculture Department. In his letter of resignation, he denied he was "guilty of any willful wrongdoing" but conceded there might be evidence to "indicate some indiscretion."

Russo, who has directed the Justice Department's investigation of the case, told newsmen he had read in a trade journal that Mansour said in Egypt sometime ago that he also wanted to deny there had been any wrong-doing by either himself or Walker.

Russo said the article mentioned that Mansour had broken his leg, preventing him from returning to the United States to vindicate himself and defend Walker. If Mansour is still anxious to defend himself in court, Russo said, this may be one way around any legal difficulties.

Stevenson Pictures Ike as Taft Victim

By MERRIMAN SMITH

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UP) —Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson today assembled for eastern consumption a political road show portraying Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-O) as the villain of the election campaign and Dwight D. Eisenhower as Taft's "surrender" victim.

As Taft starts stumping for Eisenhower, the GOP presidential nominee, Stevenson apparently intended to shift more of his campaign fire to the Ohioan than at Eisenhower himself.

Members of Stevenson's staff said the governor, who on Thursday will open a speaking tour into Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Virginia and Maryland, would step up his campaign to convince the electorate that Taft had "taken over" the Eisenhower campaign and turned the former general's "great crusade" into a "great surrender".

Stevenson cleared his schedule as much as possible of routine and engagements today to complete the speeches he will use in the East against his GOP opposition.

His strategy was based on the theory held by the Stevenson camp that Taft, for Democratic campaign purposes, at any rate, was as good a target as Eisenhower, and possibly somewhat better.

Consequently, the Illinois governor will continue to push his belief that, particularly in the field of foreign policy, Eisenhower was compelled to abandon some of his own ideas to those of Taft in order to win the senator's active campaign support.

Stevenson told a news conference yesterday:

"It now appears brutally clear that Senator Taft has taken over. This puts an entirely new aspect on the campaign and the election. I suspect many people like myself will be genuinely alarmed by the reduction of their differences on foreign policy to 'differences of degree.'"

Pension Program Up in Massachusetts

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts holds its primary election today with the interest of the voters stirred by a legislative battle over a rich pension program the legislators voted themselves last July and repealed earlier today.

There are few contests for the top nominations in both contests but widespread interest in the legislators' action is expected to draw out the biggest vote since the 1948 presidential election.

There are 2,480,000 voters in Massachusetts. Followers of state politics say today's turnout may exceed the 33 per cent who voted two years ago and may even approach the 47 per cent turnout of 1948.

Sen. Henry Cabo Lodge, Republican, has no competition in his bid for renomination. Neither has his Democratic opponent, U. S. Rep. John F. Kennedy.

Gov. Paul A. Dever (D), seeking a third term, also is unopposed as is his GOP opponent, U. S. Rep. Christian A. Herter.

There are Democratic contests in eight of the 14 congressional districts and Republican contests in four.

Polls close at 7 p. m. EST at the latest.

Rails Try Out Small TV Sets

CHICAGO (AP)— Pintsized television went railroading today to show how it might save wear and tear on both rolling stock and personnel.

The new uses of television were under exploration here in tests conducted this afternoon by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the RCA Victor Division of Radio Corporation of America.

Placed into service were three small Vidicon industrial TV systems which are supposed to permit men in mixed locations to do jobs which normally would require extra movement of both men and freight cars.

The new wrinkle has the checker must walk among trains and over tracks to list car numbers on an incoming train to assign the cars to other trains headed for various sections of the country.

Identity of Indian Maid Is Sought

FT. WORTH Tex. (AP) — Kim, the self-designated Indian girl who was found Friday in woods near Ft. Worth, may be a youngster who disappeared two months ago from a girls camp in Connecticut.

Both Connecticut state police and the father of Connie Smith, who left the camp last July 16, were checking into the possibility late last night. She is the granddaughter of Nils H. Smith, a former governor of Wyoming.

Connie is only 10, but is well developed for her age and in other physical respects bears a resemblance to the girl who was found here.

Peter Smith, father of Connie, called the Ft. Worth Star-Telegram by telephone late last night from his ranch at Neecastle, Wyo., seeking information about the case. Told about Kim's appearance, he said the resemblance was striking and he planned to check into the matter today.

Kim, who said she was a member of an Iroquois Indian tribe living on a St. Regis River island between the United States and Canada, was at home last night on the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Bowen, near Antelope, Tex.

Their 1,200 acre ranch has no telephone, and Kim was unavailable for comment. Smith will try to make contact with the Bowens today.

Smith said that Connie had had an injury, and that she may be suffering from amnesia.

Tito Would Delay Trieste Decision

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Premier Marshal Tito says Italy and Yugoslavia should put aside their bitter dispute over Trieste until they can approach the question "with more sense."

"Let's co operate on other questions which are of extreme importance such as assurance against aggression, economic exchanges and the preservation of the peace of the world," Tito said.

He spoke yesterday before an estimated crowd of 250,000 persons who had converged by truck and train on the little Slovene town of Delnjske Toplice to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the formation of a wartime partisan unit there.

The unyielding claims of both Italy and Yugoslavia to the free territory of Trieste, at the head of the Adriatic, have worried the Western Allies trying to promote co-operation between countries opposed to Soviet aggression.

Tito suggested that, pending a later approach to the Trieste question, Italy and Yugoslavia set up a joint administration for the territory. The disputed buffer region between the two nations now is divided into two zones, one administered by Yugoslavia and the other by Britain and the United States with Italian assistance.

New Russian Ambassador

Zarubin is expected to pay a formal call on Secretary of State Acheson in the next few days, before presenting his credentials to President Truman at the White House.

THE CAPPING'S THE CLIMAX—Nurse Russell L. Swansburg, 24, of Cleveland, Ohio, has braved all the dangers of traditionally feminine classrooms, but he shies at capping efforts made by nurses Veronica Mihelich, left, of Cleveland, and Arlene Goodling, of Erie, Pa. Nurse Swansburg, first male graduate in the history of Western Reserve University's Frances Payne Bolton School of Nursing, plans to return to the classroom to study for his master's degree. He is a native of Little Harbor, Nova Scotia.

Morse Hints Big Split With Ike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Wayne Morse began drafting a speech today for the American Federation of Labor National Convention which may point up a major difference between him and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The Oregon Republican told newsmen he would not complete the text of his address until after he read Eisenhower's speech before the AFL Convention in New York tomorrow. Morse's talk is set for Thursday.

Morse, who describes himself as a constitutional liberal and frequently is in the opposite camp from many of his Republican Senate colleagues, was an early booster of Eisenhower for the GOP presidential nomination.

But he has announced he is highly dissatisfied with the turn the general's campaign has taken recently, particularly with the hearty reception given to Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

Morse says that as matters now stand he will vote for Eisenhower and believes the GOP nominee will win the election, but that he plans no active campaign for him.

Morse lists the labor-management issue as one on which he has sharp differences with the Eisenhower camp. And he puts Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson on the back for his stand on this same question.

Morse favors a drastic rewriting of the Taft-Hartley Act. Stevenson has come out for Taft-Hartley repeal followed by a fresh start on a labor-management relations law a position Morse said was "sound."

Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor and an old friend of Morse, came here from Eisenhower headquarters in New York after Morse had indicated Saturday his coolness toward the GOP nominee.

After his talk with Stassen, Morse said his decision not to campaign actively this fall remained unchanged. The same went, he said, for his refusal to sit on the platform with Eisenhower at the AFL Convention.

Negro Singer Is Attacked

FT. LEE, N. J. (AP)—Pearl Bailey, Negro singing comedienne, was beaten early Monday by an unidentified man as she was leaving Bill Miller's Riviera, a swank night spot here.

Nathan Allyn, acting Bergen County detective chief, quoted the entertainer as saying that the man approached her in the lobby of the night club, cursed at her, grabbed her by the throat and beat her.

Miss Bailey broke away but her assailant chased her to behind the club's stage where he kicked her and knocked her down.

Others who were leaving the night spot came to her aid, but the man who beat Miss Bailey got away, Allyn said.

Her manager and attorney, Chauncey Olman, said Miss Bailey received possible concussion, bruises and cuts and was under medical care at her home.

Expectant Mother Loses Fight to Polio

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Mrs. Vincent E. Skillman Jr. lived through a rigorous 200-mile trip to a hospital here last night despite a faltering motor on the portable iron lung in which she was encased

The 23-year old expectant mother and wife of a University of Arkansas student from Memphis died hours later at St. Vincent's Infirmary here from infantile paralysis.

Fayetteville Fire Department Fireman Merlin Bayer hand-pumped the portable respirator after it had failed during the trip by ambulance.

Death came to the woman after she was placed in a tank-type respirator at the hospital. Doctors had been unable to check her illness.

Mrs. Skillman was transferred from the Washington County Hospital in Fayetteville to the Little Rock [illegible]

State Moves Out of AIC Conference

JONESBORO — Dr. Carl Reng, president of Arkansas State College, says the school is "not a member of the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference in football" and may not compete in the conference basketball race.

A second top State official — who declined use of his name, said yesterday that the school had not paid its dues and was not complying with new conference regulations against subsidization of athletes.

"We are not members of the AIC in football," commented Reng.

Asked if State would be a member in basketball, he replied:

"We haven't decided definitely about that yet, but I think not.

"If you can't compete for a championship, I can't see any point in belonging to a conference."

The president added that "we are looking forward to belonging to some conference" but at the present State will remain an independent.

State has been a member of the AIC since 1946 but has never scheduled the required number of conference football games to qualify for the title.

Michigan Officer Seeks Slayer

FT. SMITH (AP) — A U. S. commissioner yesterday recommended that a 21-year-old escaped convict be returned to Michigan to face charges of murder in the pistol slaying of two men.

U. S. Commissioner Walter Gutensohn recommended to Federal Judge John E. Miller that Harold Maurice Hummel Jr., be extradited. Hummel, an escapee from a Michigan prison, is being held here on a federal charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

The young fugitive was captured by Sheriff Bob Pritchard at nearby Ozark, Ark., last Thursday.

Federal authorities have indicated that they will turn Hummel over to Michigan police for prosecution on the murder charge even if the federal government takes him to that state.

But two Michigan officers want immediate custody of Hummel. After the hearing before Gutensohn, Detective Lt. Valoris Lee Scott of Hazel Park, Mich., and Michigan State Police Lt. Jack Pletzk left for Little Rock to ask Gov. McMath to approve extradition of Hummel.

Hummel is charged with slaying Vido and Joseph Vinokrouw at Hazel Park last month. At yesterday's hearing, he denied any knowledge of the killings.

DOROTHY DIX

Engaged to Alcoholic

Dear Miss Dix: A very dear girl friend of mine is going with a boy, and planning to marry him next June. He drinks to excess and she knows it, but she claims he will stop once they are married. He has broken many a date with her because he was too drunk to come over. Of course, she is convinced that she does not need help, but I am equally convinced that she does.

ANNE R.

Answer: And your conviction is so right, Anne! Your friend is headed for certain unhappiness unless she comes to her senses. So many girls have been taken in by the meaningless promise of reform after marriage, and, so many, who are even more foolish, believe that marriage will automatically make a man of a spineless creature.

If the following statement were believed by every prospective bride unhappy marriage would become a rarity: No man who doesn't love a girl enough to try to overcome his basic bad habits before marriage will not change later. The nuptial ceremony contains no magic words to create character where none exists.

He Must Reform First

Some faults may be hidden from a fiancee, but an alcoholic cannot conceal his weakness. It is very possible that the faith and devotion of a worthy girl can reform him—but the reform must come before she marries him; it will never come later.

If your friend has a strong will of her own — as she seems to have — it should be directed toward making a man of her fiance now. If he honestly loves her and wants to be a good husband, he will find a strong ally in Alcoholics Anonymous, one of the most marvelous organizations ever founded for the rehabilitation of man. The Salvation Army also performs a wonderful service along the same line. However, all the help in the world will be of no use to a man who is not willing to help himself.

Your are probably powerless to extend much assistance to your friend; paradoxically, people who need help most are often those who will listen least.

If you could bring your friend into a home that is being wrecked through alcoholism, her eyes might open. Somewhere in your circle of acquaintances you may know some such home; have your friend talk to the wife and she'll get a fine idea of the life in store for herself.

Whatever she elects to do, stick by her for, I assure you, as the wife of a heavy drinker, she will need every friend she has.

Dear Miss Dix: I have been working in a shop during the summer. Working with me is a 24-year old college man who is also here for the summer. He has asked me to go out with him but I hesitate because I am six years younger than he.

ELISE G. H.

Answer: The difference in your ages isn't enough to interfere with friendship, but you must face the fact that when the boy leaves the shop and returns to school, other interests will occupy his mind and time. Don't become too serious over him.

Dear Miss Dix: We are two young teen-agers, each with two boy friends. We can't make up our minds which we like better' Our parents say we are too young to be thinking of one boy only, but the problem is when we go with one boy the other gets mad.

K and L

Answer: Since you are definitely too young to be going steady, let the boys know that this is your attitude, and that your parents uphold it. If one boy is annoyed because you go with another, let the irritated one go.

Graziano Is Favored Over Davey

CHICAGO (AP) —Roughneck Rocky Graziano and undefeated Chuck Davey, the mercury-footed Michigan State Graduate, are cast in boxing's beauty-and-the-beast episode tomorrow night.

The scheduled 10-round scrap in Chicago Stadium will be televised and broadcast nationally.

Odds favoring the sledge-fisted, mauling Graziano, who rose from New York's slums to gain and lose the middleweight crown in three brutal battles with Tony Zale, have shrunk from 12-5 a week ago to 9-5.

Some ring critics think Rocky has been washed up since those punishing brawls with the former Gary "Man of Steel." But they still respect his toughness and slugging ability. They think Rocky can knock out Davey if he can hit him.

"These little guys are all alike— They run but they can't hide,' Graziano. "I think Joe Louis first said that —but he was sure right."

Davey, one of the finest southpaws in years, realizes he must depend on his speed and cleverness to the limit.

"I don't think Rocky will be able to hit me with any of his wild, roundhouse swings," he said. "I'm in the best shape of my whole life and could go 20 rounds. Rocky will be swinging at the air all night.'

Davey, 26, is unbeaten in 36 pro fights and never has been knocked off his feet. Weighing 149, he will sacrifice about 13 pounds at ring time to his 30-year-old opponent. Graziano figures to weigh in at noon Wednesday at an official 158 then take enough nourishment to get to 162 by night.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) —Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick will not know until he reads this that he nearly got himself thrown bodily out of the Polo Ground by an alert National League umpire one recent afternoon.

It seems the czar was watching a game from a window in President Horace Stoneham's office deep in centerfield, and was employing a pair of king-size field glasses to bring the action closer. Our vigilant umpire, who prefers to remain nameless, caught the glint of the afternoon sun on the lenses and sensed a major sign-stealing plot.

"Throw that guy out of there in a hurry," he yelled to Manager Leo Durocher, adding an ominous "or else."

Leo obligingly took down the dugout phone and held a short and earnest conversation, after which he turned innocently to the arbiter.

"Told 'em what you said," he announced. "That's the commissioner."

It was one time, they say, that Leo had the last word with an umpire.

Down in Havana, where the 13th annual "Amateur World Series" has been in progress between teams from Latin and South America, they at least took a vigorous whack at cutting down the length of games. They've been having the same trouble we have.

The good senors who ran the show simply slapped on a time limit: 2½ hours for afternoon games, two hours, 45 minutes for arclighters, with the provision that the inning in progress when time expired would be completed.

Worked fine, they say, and you should have seen the teams which were behind after the two-hour mark get out there and hustle.

Observing the great success of Hoyt Wilhelm as a reliver for the Giants this year, Carl Hubbell, the old Hall-of-Famer, predicts the woods will be full of young knockleballer flingers for the next few seasons.

CHAPTER TWENTY

AUGUST was an unexpectedly cold month. Vacationists shivered on beaches, piled on extra sweaters and wished for summer cottages with central heating and thermostats.

"Nothing," Rolph Hilliard told Nance, following a week end at his shore place, "is more depressing than sand without sun. I huddled three days over a fireplace."

Nance made a clucking sound of commiseration. Her reactions to the weather, or anything else these days, was halfhearted. She was in New York permanently now, after seeing Eleanor through her breakdown following Jeremy's marriage.

In a way, Eleanor's illness had been a good thing for Nance. It kept her mind and body occupied, and when Eleanor at length was able to be up and about again as usual—although she was noticeably thinner and subdued—Nance found that she herself had recovered from the first shock. And she decided at once that she would not stay in Thurstonia, encountering the inevitable pity of her friends, and forever running into Eve and Jeremy.

Kit had insisted on Nance making her home with her.

"Apartments are still scarce," she'd reasoned. "Besides, if you are going to be in New York, I'd like you with me. So would Eleanor."

Nance agreed. Kit was kind, and it really was not sensible to live alone. Kit vigorously discouraged brooding, and already, in the pattern of days which at first had been her grim routine of eating, sleeping, working, Kit was weaving her bright threads. And Rolph. Rolph was surprisingly sensitive of her moods. Perceptive and responsive, without mollycoddling her hurt pride.

Rolph was a truly nice person, Nance thought, considering him across the table. They often came to this quiet place near the office, for tea. Rolph was from a small town in Kent, England. His voice still had a trace of the broad a's and full, round o's, and his habit for tea at four came, he said, from a long line of tea-drinking ancestors.

Rolph said, refilling her cup, "I'm having the office adjoining mine made over as a studio for you, Nance. There are a couple of new books coming up. You'll get the art contracts."

"There's really no work space for me in Kit's apartment, Rolph. And I don't want to make a nuisance of myself. Kit has her own [illegible] Don't let this [illegible] Nance." [illegible] she said [illegible] to let this spoil my life, either. I have my work."

He nodded.

She continued, "I'm fortunate it's work I like. I can put all myself into it. It's so much more convenient being a jilted artist than a jilted stenographer, isn't it? Nine to five, with nothing but curlicues, and all those empty hours to fill! Artists are like authors—they never really stop working. Even in their sleep. I've often pushed myself awake to catch a dream, to get it on paper before I lost it."

He nodded, then frowned. "That's fine, for now. But drive yourself too hard and you'll go stale. I've seen it happen. Don't shut out your friends, Nance. Every contact is a stimulant, or a sedative. You need both." He grinned suddenly. "I'm not quite sure which category I'm in."

"Both!" She added, "You've been kind, Rolph."

"I'll be around if you need me, Nance."

She knew what he meant. Exactly. She would, just now, have preferred not knowing. Up to now, in her various encounters with Rolph Hilliard, she had sensed vaguely that he was on the verge of being in love with her. He hadn't put anything in words. Jeremy had been a barrier. Jeremy was no longer a barrier, but she wasn't ready for another love, and Rolph knew it. But he offered her his strength to lean upon, and she was grateful. She said gently, "Thank you, Rolph."

The tables around them were filling. Glancing up, Nance saw Steve Raymond and Libby Oliver in the foyer. Rolph saw them in the same instant, and lifting his brows at Nance for acquiescence, he waved them over.

"My lord," Steve said, seating Libby and pulling out a chair next to Nance, "tea!" He ordered martinis for himself and Libby.

But Libby protested, "I think I'll have tea, Steve. You should, too. Unless you want to start the Carlsons' party with a hang-over. Tea," she said firmly to the waiter, "for both of us, please."

Steve scowled, "Mama knows best."

Libby went red. "You are drinking too much, Steve."

"All right, all right."

Nance felt impatient with both of them. Especially Libby. Why, with Steve so churlish, did she tag along?

She questioned Rolph about it, on their way back to the office. They'd left Steve and Libby at the table, still bickering.

"Oh, Steve needs her, after a fashion," Rolph said. "He always has, and Libby knows it. She has [illegible] been a battle royal. But Libby was in Florida, and when she got back, it was too late. Libby's a sample of Hope Lives Eternal."

"It's hard on Libby."

Rolph shrugged. "Funny what people in love will put up with."

"But what is it getting her?"

"Nothing, at the moment. Except one of these days Steve is going to snap out of this and discover he loves Libby."

"Suppose he doesn't?"

"Then Libby will see to it there's not another Eve. It's worth, from Libby's point of view, a few dints in her pride. She really loves the guy."

Nance winced, although she knew Rolph's remark had no personal significance. I walked out on Jeremy, she thought. My darn pride! Only I couldn't have made a door mat of myself, like Libby. And Jeremy isn't Steve. He wouldn't have let me, or anyone else, pull strings. He wanted Eve, he married her, and that's that.

She said, as they walked along the corridor of their office building, "Rolph, I didn't tell you this before. The girl Jeremy married is Eve."

He didn't get it, at first. Then he whistled. Then, abrutly, he frowned. "Why?"

Nance knew what he meant. He hadn't, from the first, thought Eve had just happened to go to Thurstonia. He was seeking, now, the motive for the marriage. Eve's motive. Nance was heartened by his understanding.

He said thoughtfully, "Eve didn't need money, after what she got from Steve."

"Jeremy hasn't that sort of money, anyway. No, it wasn't that. I think I've figured it out. Partly, anyway. She hates Jeremy's father and mother. She hates me. She hated me long before she knew me, because I had everything that had been taken from her. It's the story of a child carrying a grudge, and I know it sounds farfetched." She smiled wryly. "Yet I know I'm right . . . Rolph, it's not only losing Jeremy that hurts. It's losing him to her. I'm not particularly noble, but I think I could stand it if I thought he'd be happy with her. But the things you've told me, and Libby—well, how can he be happy with Eve?"

He said, "Let Jeremy fight his fight, Nance. You fight yours."

She managed a smile. "I expect that's the sensible thing to do."

"You can't be responsible for his trials and errors, Nance."

Not responsible, but you couldn't help being apprehensive. When you saw what Eve had done to Steve Raymond, how could you not worry over what she'd do to Jeremy? Unless Eve really loved him. Nance was trying hard to believe that. [illegible]

Bobcats Work on Defense for DeQueen

Coach Joe Ensminger said today he wasn't disappointed in the showing the Bobcats made in the 26-13 win over Stamps Friday night but there "is need for improvement."

The squad showed plenty of spirit in practice yesterday and settled down to plain old fundamentals— mainly tackling, certainly one of their weak departments against the YellowJackets — but they will work on everything.

And they will need everything when they tangle with the DeQueen Leopards here Friday night. The Leopards, idle last week, were in the stands for a first hand view of how the Hope boys operate.

The Bobcats came out of the game in pretty good shape with only a few bruised shoulders and muscles. Quarterback Tom Ed Hays probably won't see action Friday night as he is nursing a bruised leg which he had before the opening game. Coach Ensminger said Hays would not see action until his leg is completely healed.

The coaches were well pleased with the performance of the backfield and they did show up well. In spots the line looked good but on occasions some of that "green" material really glared.

However, a few more games which will give them much needed experience and the Bobcats are likely to develop into a fairly potent outfit.

Sports in Brief

DETROIT (AP) — Hal Newhouser the Tigers' veteran left hander needs only one more victory to join the exclusivbe 200-win club. Newhouser picked up his 199th triumph in a relief role Monday as the Bengals nipped Washington, 5-4. Bob Feller of Cleveland is the only active major league pitcher to have hit the double century mark. He has 239.

CHICAGO (AP)—When Jim Rivera, White Sox outfielder, committed an error in Monday's game against Boston, it was his first since donning a Chicago uniform on July 29th. Rivera, who was acquired from the St. Louis Browns on waivers, had played 43 games for the Chisox without a miscue.

NEW YORK (AP) Jackie Robinson is the first major league player to score 100 runs this season. The Brooklyn second sacker tallied three times against Cincinati in Monday's game, boosting his total runs scored to 101.

NEW YORK (AP) — Were the St. Louis Cardinals seeing double in Monday's sixth inning against the Giants. . . or was the situation too dark?

Giants' shortstop Alvin Dar went to bat twice as his club scored nine times and hit a double each time.

The Tale of The Big Brown Trout

By AL McCLANE
Fishing Editor

Pretty women seldom pay respect to philosophers. Now Pat, who is my wife and should know better, materially lessened the popularity of her sex for future generations.

I caught three large trout in the Haunted House Pool on the Delaware River one morning recently and I carefully strung them on a willow branch. The fish were taken honestly — on a dry fly — and when I left her to wander down toward Basket Brook my pace was quick and sure.

After all, I am an expert. She takes pleasure in casting a plug, and leaving her at the pool seemed safe enough. I had caught all the fish, and anyhow she could get plenty of exercise winging the bait toward Pennsylvania.

When I returned an hour later, I saw her blonde head bobbing among the cataracts, as she bounced to the gravel shingle near the end of the pool. There are probably among my readers young men who will be horrified at the thought that went through my mind as I turned from this scene of helpless womanhood, but there, next to my fish, was a brown trout of monstrous size. A fish that I could never match in 20 years of Delaware fishing.

She had flung her plug in the face of tradition with unerring aim. The trout weighed 7 pounds 3 ounces and swallowed a black finish Heddon River Runt. Of course you and I know such a lure is no good for eastern trouting, but then, we are philosophers.

The miracle of deep freezing and the ingenuity of a trout fisherman have been combined at a place called the Green Spring Mountain Trout Farm, in Newville, Pa. The hatchery reared fish just don't have the delicate flavor of a wild trout, especially when you've had them fresh out of the water on the banks of a far off stream.

Well, Colin Thomas decided he could produce a "wild" trout for the market and after consulting with a number of food scientists he learned the real problem was that the cells, tissues, and fatty oils of the trout's flesh broke down in a matter of minutes after the fish was taken from the stream. The change destroyed the flavor [illegible] built a deep freeze unit. Under his system, the trout are cleaned packed in a pliofilm bag, and in the quick freeze — all in ten minutes time.

The trout arrive at your house frozen solid, and after a very impartial test I can report that they are equal to most and superior to many wild fish. They come in a cardboard creel, incidentally, along with a half-dozen recipes that can't be beat.

Truman, Taft to Bring in Old Tactics

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Truman and Sen. Taft will make it more comfortable for anyone who can't get adjusted to the campaigning of Gen. Eisenhower and Gov. Stevenson.

Since everybody has been listening to them for years, hearing the President and the senator on the warpath again will be as relaxing as last year's hat. They follow standard political practice: Make it slam-bang and personal.

Not so with Eisenhower and Stevenson. Being newcomers to national politics, they have had to inch their way along to get the feel of things. They started out as mild as a couple of cousins.

Now the general is getting rougher on the Truman administration and the governor is getting a little more caustic about the Republicans. But both still seem to be trying to work up a full head of steam.

They may bet an assist in this from Truman and Taft, with Taft shoveling coals on the fire under Stevenson, Truman doing the same for Eisenhower, and Truman and Taft doing likewise for each other.

In this way the quartet should have a nice blaze going by election day with help from the vice presidential candidates, Sen. Sparkman and Sen. Nixon.

Truman and Taft are more than just famous politicians whose names are a household word. They have become symbols of their parties.

Although Truman and Taft are not now candidates for anything, they're both such aggressive men, with strong opinions and a yet express them, before this ca paign is over they may oversh ew the two men running for offi

Fight Buildup Is Termed Ridiculous

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK, (UP) — The p licity buildup for next wee heavyweight title fight between J sey Joe Walcott and Rocky M ciano should be heading today the sublime.

It's certainly been in the r culous up to now.

As of the current dispa from the respective training cam the imminent embroglio has had the dignity of a Mack Sennet co dy. Only the keystone kops w never this funny.

Everybody is crowding into publicity act except the fight and the situation as to their c dition and workouts has b buried deepter than the prize n get at Fort Knox. If the tr hadn't leaked out when the tracts were signed, you'd th Rocky's manager, Al (The V Weill, was prepping to do ba with Felix (Deadpan) Bocchicc Walcott's Arcaro.

The latest "fight" news fr Marciano's manager concerned raucous roars from Weill whe was reported that Rocky wo take his own chef to Philadelp because of crank letters wh threatened him with a menu ey.

One thing certain, Rocky's ca must be the best fed in pugili history because his chef is gett more publicity than Oscar of Waldrof ever had. Up to now daily dispatches have caused feeling that the Rock was trai like a candidate for a fat m pie-eating contest. He has b eating prodigious amounts of and using steaks for hors d'oeu which are society sandwiches big as a minute.

Another scintillating scoop c cerned the fact that somebody other from Brockton, Ma Rocky's home town, predicted there would be "dancing in streets" if Marciano won.

It reminds me of a great l one writer sent out during Johnstown flood. The reporters started, "God sat on the hills rounding Johnstown tonight."

His exasperated editor, sittin the other end of the telegraph impatiently awaiting statistical formaion on the flood dam broke in and said:

"Forget the flood. Interv God."

Which brings me to the fact "dancing in the streets" line cause me to miss the fight. the chance the Rock will wi may go cover the Massachu Mardi Gras. Always did want see a New Englander lose his serve and do a buck and wing Fouth and Main.

But probably the best trai camp story of them all concer Bocchicchio's request that Weill forced to undergo a physical up before being permitted Rocky's corner. Felix, who ear his appearance of a shopw George Raft, insisted he di want "The Vest" to drop dead a heart attack.

Although it has been known happen, it's a good thing that bout isn't scheduled to end football games — with a gun s Otherwise Weill might have a fect comeback.

The fighters? On, they're aro somewhere, sparring or running something.

Graziano Is Favored Over Davey

CHICAGO (AP) —Roughneck Rocky Graziano and undefeated Chuck Davey, the mercury-footed Michigan State Graduate, are cast in boxing's beauty-and-the-beast episode tomorrow night.

The scheduled 10-round scrap in Chicago Stadium will be televised and broadcast nationally.

Odds favoring the sledge-fisted, mauling Graziano, who rose from New York's slums to gain and lose the middleweight crown in three brutal battles with Tony Zale, have shrunk from 12-5 a week ago to 9-5.

Some ring critics think Rocky has been washed up since those punishing brawls with the former Gary "Man of Steel." But they still respect his toughness and slugging ability. They think Rocky can knock out Davey if he can hit him.

"These little guys are all alike—They run but they can't hide," Graziano. "I think Joe Louis first said that —but he was sure right."

Davey, one of the finest southpaws in years, realizes he must depend on his speed and cleverness to the limit.

"I don't think Rocky will be able to hit me with any of his wild, roundhouse swings," he said. "I'm in the best shape of my whole life and could go 20 rounds. Rocky will be swinging at the air all night."

Davey, 26, is unbeaten in 36 pro fights and never has been knocked off his feet. Weighing 140, he will sacrifice about 13 pounds at ring time to his 30-year-old opponent. Graziano figures to weigh in at noon Wednesday at an official 158 then take enough nourishment to get to 162 by night.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) —Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick will not know until he reads this that he nearly got himself thrown bodily out of the Polo Ground by an alert National League umpire one recent afternoon.

It seems the czar was watching a game from a window in President Horace Stoneham's office deep in centerfield, and was employing a pair of king-size field glasses to bring the action closer. Our vigilant umpire, who prefers to remain nameless, caught the glint of the afternoon sun on the lenses and sensed a major sign-stealing plot.

"Throw that guy out of there in a hurry," he yelled to Manager Leo Durocher, adding an ominous "or else."

Leo obligingly took down the dugout phone and held a short and earnest conversation, after which he turned innocently to the arbiter.

"Told 'em what you said," he announced. "That's the commissioner."

It was one time, they say, that Leo had the last word with an umpire.

Down in Havana, where the 13th annual "Amateur World Series" has been in progress between teams from Latin and South America, they at least took a vigorous whack at cutting down the length of games. They've been having the same trouble we have.

The good senors who ran the show simply slapped on a time limit: 2½ hours for afternoon games, two hours, 45 minutes for arclighters, with the provision that the inning in progress when time expired would be completed.

Worked fine, they say, and you should have seen the teams which were behind after the two-hour mark get out there and hustle.

Observing the great success of Hoyt Wilhelm as a reliever for the Giants this year, Carl Hubbell, the old Hall-of-Famer, predicts the woods will be full of young knuckleballer flingers for the next few seasons.

Bobcats Work on Defense for DeQueen

Coach Joe Ensminger said today he wasn't disappointed in the showing the Bobcats made in the 26-13 win over Stamps Friday night but there "is need for improvement."

The squad showed plenty of spirit in practice yesterday and settled down to plain old fundamentals—mainly tackling, certainly one of their weak departments against the Yellowjackets — but they will work on everything.

And they will need everything when they tangle with the DeQueen Leopards here Friday night. The Leopards, idle last week, were in the stands for a first hand view of how the Hope boys operate.

The Bobcats came out of the game in pretty good shape with only a few bruised shoulders and muscles. Quarterback Tom Ed Hays probably won't see action Friday night as he is nursing a bruised leg which he had before the opening game. Coach Ensminger said Hays would not see action until his leg is completely healed.

The coaches were well pleased with the performance of the backfield and they did show up well. In spots the line looked good but on occasions some of that "green" material really glared.

However, a few more games which will give them much needed experience and the Bobcats are likely to develop into a fairly potent outfit.

Sports in Brief

DETROIT (AP) — Hal Newhouser the Tigers' veteran left hander needs only one more victory to join the exclusivbe 200-win club. Newhouser picked up his 199th triumph in a relief role Monday as the Bengals nipped Washington, 5-4. Bob Feller of Cleveland is the only active major league pitcher to have hit the double century mark. He has 239.

CHICAGO (AP)—When Jim Rivera, White Sox outfielder, committed an error in Monday's game against Boston, it was his first since donning a Chicago uniform on July 29th. Rivera, who was acquired from the St. Louis Browns on waivers, had played 43 games for the Chisox without a miscue.

NEW YORK (AP) Jackie Robinson is the first major league player to score 100 runs this season. The Brooklyn second sacker tallied three times against Cincinati in Monday's game, boosting his total runs scored to 101.

NEW YORK (AP) — Were the St. Louis Cardinals seeing double in Monday's sixth inning against the Giants. . . or was the situation too dark?

Giants' shortstop Alvin Dar went to bat twice as his club scored nine times and hit a double each time.

AP&L to Dedicate New Office

PINE BLUFF (AP) — The Arkansas Power and Light Company will dedicate its new $2 million general office building here today.

A parade, dedicatory speeches and dinner will highlight the celebration which begins at 3 p. m.

Francis Cherry, Democratic nominee for governor, will participate in the parade and Ralph Mitchell Jr., president of the Pine Bluff Chamber of Commerce will deliver the dedicatory address at 3:30 p. m.

A dinner and reception for visiting industrialists and dignitaries will be held at the Pine Bluff Country Club following the ceremonies.

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Truman and Sen. Taft will make it more comfortable for anyone who can't get adjusted to the campaigning of Gen. Eisenhower and Gov. Stevenson.

Since everybody has been listening to them for years, hearing the President and the senator on the warpath again will be as relaxing as last year's hat. They follow standard political practice: Make it slam-bang and personal.

Not so with Eisenhower and Stevenson. Being newcomers to national politics, they have had to inch their way along to get the feel of things. They started out as mild as a couple of cousins.

Now the general is getting rougher on the Truman administration and the governor is getting a little more caustic about the Republicans. But both still seem to be trying to work up a full head of steam.

They may get an assist in this from Truman and Taft, with Taft shoveling coals on the fire under Stevenson, Truman doing the same for Eisenhower, and Truman and Taft doing likewise for each other.

In this way the quartet should have a nice blaze going by election day with help from the vice presidential candidates, Sen. Sparkman and Sen. Nixon.

Truman and Taft are more than just famous politicians whose names are a household word. They have become symbols of their parties.

Although Truman and Taft are not now candidates for anything, they're both such aggressive men, with strong opinions and a yet express them, before this ca paign is over they may oversh ew the two men running for offi

Fight Buildup Is Termed Ridiculous

NEW YORK, (UP) — The p licity buildup for next wee heavyweight title fight between J sey Joe Walcott and Rocky M ciano should be heading today the sublime.

CHAPTER TWENTY

AUGUST was an unexpectedly cold month. Vacationists shivered on beaches, piled on extra sweaters and wished for summer cottages with central heating and thermostats.

"Nothing," Rolph Hilliard told Nance, following a week end at his shore place, "is more depressing than sand without sun. I huddled three days over a fireplace."

Nance made a clucking sound of commiseration. Her reactions to the weather, or anything else these days, was halfhearted. She was in New York permanently now, after seeing Eleanor through her breakdown following Jeremy's marriage.

In a way, Eleanor's illness had been a good thing for Nance. It kept her mind and body occupied, and when Eleanor at length was able to be up and about again as usual—although she was noticeably thinner and subdued—Nance found that she herself had recovered from the first shock. And she decided at once that she would not stay in Thurstonia, encountering the inevitable pity of her friends, and forever running into Eve and Jeremy.

Kit had insisted on Nance making her home with her.

"Apartments are still scarce," she'd reasoned. "Besides, if you are going to be in New York, I'd like you with me. So would Eleanor."

Nance agreed. Kit was kind, and it really was not sensible to live alone. Kit vigorously discouraged brooding, and already, in the pattern of days which at first had been her grim routine of eating, sleeping, working, Kit was weaving her bright threads. And Rolph. Rolph was surprisingly sensitive of her moods. Perceptive and responsive, without mollycoddling her hurt pride.

Rolph was a truly nice person, Nance thought, considering him across the table. They often came to this quiet place near the office, for tea. Rolph was from a small town in Kent, England. His voice still had a trace of the broad a's and full, round o's, and his habit for tea at four came, he said, from a long line of tea-drinking ancestors.

Rolph said, refilling her cup, "I'm having the office adjoining mine made over as a studio for you, Nance. There are a couple of new books coming up. You'll get the art contracts."

"There's really no work space for me in Kit's apartment, Rolph. And I don't want to make a nuisance of myself. Kit has her own [illegible]

[illegible] Don't let this [illegible] Nance [illegible] to let this spoil my life, either. I have my work."

He nodded.

She continued, "I'm fortunate it's work I like. I can put all myself into it. It's so much more convenient being a jilted artist than a jilted stenographer, isn't it? Nine to five, with nothing but curlicues, and all those empty hours to fill! Artists are like authors—they never really stop working. Even in their sleep. I've often pushed myself awake to catch a dream, to get it on paper before I lost it."

He nodded, then frowned. "That's fine, for now. But drive yourself too hard and you'll go stale. I've seen it happen. Don't shut out your friends, Nance. Every contact is a stimulant, or a sedative. You need both." He grinned suddenly. "I'm not quite sure which category I'm in."

"Both!" She added, "You've been kind, Rolph."

"I'll be around if you need me, Nance."

She knew what he meant. Exactly. She would, just now, have preferred not knowing. Up to now, in her various encounters with Rolph Hilliard, she had sensed vaguely that he was on the verge of being in love with her. He hadn't put anything in words. Jeremy had been a barrier. Jeremy was no longer a barrier, but she wasn't ready for another love, and Rolph knew it. But he offered her his strength to lean upon, and she was grateful. She said gently, "Thank you, Rolph."

The tables around them were filling. Glancing up, Nance saw Steve Raymond and Libby Oliver in the foyer. Rolph saw them in the same instant, and lifting his brows at Nance for acquiescence, he waved them over.

"My lord," Steve said, seating Libby and pulling out a chair next to Nance, "tea!" He ordered martinis for himself and Libby.

But Libby protested, "I think I'll have tea, Steve. You should, too. Unless you want to start the Carlsons' party with a hang-over. Tea," she said firmly to the waiter, "for both of us, please."

Steve scowled, "Mama knows best."

"All right, all right."

Nance felt impatient with both of them. Especially Libby. Why, with Steve so churlish, did she tag along?

"Oh, Steve needs her, after a fashion," Rolph said. "He always has, and Libby knows it. She has more money than he has, so he's [illegible] been a battle royal. But Libby was in Florida, and when she got back, it was too late. Libby's a sample of Hope Lives Eternal."

"It's hard on Libby."

Rolph shrugged. "Funny what people in love will put up with."

"But what is it getting her?"

"Nothing, at the moment. Except one of these days Steve is going to snap out of this and discover he loves Libby."

"Suppose he doesn't?"

"Then Libby will see to it there's not another Eve. It's worth, from Libby's point of view, a few dints in her pride. She really loves the guy."

Nance winced, although she knew Rolph's remark had no personal significance. I walked out on Jeremy, she thought. My darn pride! Only I couldn't have made a door mat of myself, like Libby. And Jeremy isn't Steve. He wouldn't have let me, or anyone else, pull strings. He wanted Eve, he married her, and that's that.

She said, as they walked along the corridor of their office building, "Rolph, I didn't tell you this before. The girl Jeremy married is Eve."

He didn't get it, at first. Then he whistled. Then, abrutly, he frowned. "Why?"

Nance knew what he meant. He hadn't, from the first, thought Eve had just happened to go to Thurstonia. He was seeking, now, the motive for the marriage. Eve's motive. Nance was heartened by his understanding.

He said thoughtfully, "Eve didn't need money, after what she got from Steve."

"Jeremy hasn't that sort of money, anyway. No, it wasn't that. I think I've figured it out. Partly, anyway. She hates Jeremy's father and mother. She hates me. She hated me long before she knew me, because I had everything that had been taken from her. It's the story of a child carrying a grudge, and I know it sounds farfetched." She smiled wryly. "Yet I know I'm right . . . Rolph, it's not only losing Jeremy that hurts. It's losing him to her. I'm not particularly noble, but I think I could stand it if I thought he'd be happy with her. But the things you've told me, and Libby—well, how can he be happy with Eve?"

He said, "Let Jeremy fight his fight, Nance. You fight yours."

She managed a smile. "I expect that's the sensible thing to do."

"You can't be responsible for his trials and errors, Nance."

Not responsible, but you couldn't help being apprehensive. When you saw what Eve had done to Steve Raymond, how could you not worry over what she'd do to Jeremy? Unless Eve really loved him. Nance was trying hard to believe that [illegible]

The Tale of The Big Brown Trout
By AL McCLANE
Fishing Editor

Pretty women seldom pay respect to philosophers. Now Pat, who is my wife and should know better, materially lessened the popularity of her sex for future generations.

I caught three large trout in the Haunted House Pool on the Delaware River one morning recently and I carefully strung them on a willow branch. The fish were taken honestly — on a dry fly — and when I left her to wander down toward Basket Brook my pace was quick and sure.

After all, I am an expert. She takes pleasure in casting a plug, and leaving her at the pool seemed safe enough. I had caught all the fish, and anyhow she could get plenty of exercise winging the bait toward Pennsylvania.

When I returned an hour later, I saw her blonde head bobbing among the cataracts, as she bounced to the gravel shingle near the end of the pool. There are probably among my readers young men who will be horrified at the thought that went through my mind as I turned from this scene of helpless womanhood, but there, next to my fish, was a brown trout of monstrous size. A fish that I could never match in 20 years of Delaware fishing.

She had flung her plug in the face of tradition with unerring aim. The trout weighed 7 pounds 3 ounces and swallowed a black finish Heddon River Runt. Of course you and I know such a lure is no good for eastern trouting, but then, we are philosophers.

The miracle of deep freezing and the ingenuity of a trout fisherman have been combined at a place called the Green Spring Mountain Trout Farm, in Newville, Pa. The hatchery reared fish just don't have the delicate flavor of a wild trout, especially when you've had them fresh out of the water on the banks of a far off stream.

Well, Colin Thomas decided he could produce a "wild" trout for the market and after consulting with a number of food scientists he learned the real problem was that the cells, tissues, and fatty oils of the trout's flesh broke down in a matter of minutes after the fish was taken from the stream. The change destroyed the flavor. [illegible] built a deep freeze unit. Under his system, the trout are cleaned packed in a pliofilm bag, and in the quick freeze — all in ten minutes time.

The trout arrive at your house frozen solid, and after a very impartial test I can report that they are equal to most and superior to many wild fish. They come in a cardboard creel, incidentally, along with a half-dozen recipes that can't be beat.

Graziano Is Favored Over Davey

CHICAGO (AP) — Roughneck Rocky Graziano and undefeated Chuck Davey, the mercury-footed Michigan State Graduate, are cast in boxing's beauty-and-the-beast episode tomorrow night.

The scheduled 10-round scrap in Chicago Stadium will be televised and broadcast nationally.

Odds favoring the sledge-fisted, mauling Graziano, who rose from New York's slums to gain and lose the middleweight crown in three brutal battles with Tony Zale, have shrunk from 12-5 a week ago to 9-5.

Some ring critics think Rocky has been washed up since those punishing brawls with the former Gary "Man of Steel." But they still respect his toughness and slugging ability. They think Rocky can knock out Davey if he can hit him.

"These little guys are all alike—They run but they can't hide," Graziano. "I think Joe Louis first said that —but he was sure right."

Davey, one of the finest southpaws in years, realizes he must depend on his speed and cleverness to the limit.

"I don't think Rocky will be able to hit me with any of his wild, roundhouse swings," he said. "I'm in the best shape of my whole life and could go 20 rounds. Rocky will be swinging at the air all night."

Davey, 26, is unbeaten in 36 pro fights and never has been knocked off his feet. Weighing 149, he will sacrifice about 13 pounds at ring time to his 30-year-old opponent. Graziano figures to weigh in at noon Wednesday at an official 158 then take enough nourishment to get to 162 by night.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick will not know until he reads this that he nearly got himself thrown bodily out of the Polo Ground by an alert National League umpire one recent afternoon.

It seems the czar was watching a game from a window in President Horace Stoneham's office deep in centerfield, and was employing a pair of king-size field glasses to bring the action closer. Our vigilant umpire, who prefers to remain nameless, caught the glint of the afternoon sun on the lenses and sensed a major sign-stealing plot.

"Throw that guy out of there in a hurry," he yelled to Manager Leo Durocher, adding an ominous "or else."

Leo obligingly took down the dugout phone and held a short and earnest conversation, after which he turned innocently to the arbiter.

"Told 'em what you said," he announced. "That's the commissioner."

It was one time, they say, that Leo had the last word with an umpire.

Down in Havana, where the 13th annual "Amateur World Series" has been in progress between teams from Latin and South America, they at least took a vigorous whack at cutting down the length of games. They've been having the same trouble we have.

The good senors who ran the show simply slapped on a time limit: 2½ hours for afternoon games, two hours, 45 minutes for arclighters, with the provision that the inning in progress when time expired would be completed.

Worked fine, they say, and you should have seen the teams which were behind after the two-hour mark get out there and hustle.

Observing the great success of Hoyt Wilhelm as a reliver for the Giants this year, Carl Hubbell, the old Hall-of-Famer, predicts the woods will be full of young knuckleballer flingers for the next few seasons.

Bobcats Work on Defense for DeQueen

Coach Joe Ensminger said today he wasn't disappointed in the showing the Bobcats made in the 26-13 win over Stamps Friday night but there "is need for improvement."

The squad showed plenty of spirit in practice yesterday and settled down to plain old fundamentals—mainly tackling, certainly one of their weak departments against the Yellowjackets — but they will work on everything.

And they will need everything when they tangle with the DeQueen Leopards here Friday night. The Leopards, idle last week, were in the stands for a first hand view of how the Hope boys operate.

The Bobcats came out of the game in pretty good shape with only a few bruised shoulders and muscles. Quarterback Tom Ed Hays probably won't see action Friday night as he is nursing a bruised leg which he had before the opening game. Coach Ensminger said Hays would not see action until his leg is completely healed.

The coaches were well pleased with the performance of the backfield and they did show up well. In spots the line looked good but on occasions some of that "green" material really glared.

However, a few more games which will give them much needed experience and the Bobcats are likely to develop into a fairly potent outfit.

Sports in Brief

DETROIT (AP) — Hal Newhouser the Tigers' veteran left hander needs only one more victory to join the exclusivbe 200-win club. Newhouser picked up his 199th triumph in a relief role Monday as the Bengals nipped Washington, 5-4. Bob Feller of Cleveland is the only active major league pitcher to have hit the double century mark. He has 239.

CHICAGO (AP)—When Jim Rivera, White Sox outfielder, committed an error in Monday's game against Boston, it was his first since donning a Chicago uniform on July 25th. Rivera, who was acquired from the St. Louis Browns on waivers, had played 43 games for the Chisox without a miscue.

NEW YORK (AP) Jackie Robinson is the first major league player to score 100 runs this season. The Brooklyn second sacker tallied three times against Cincinati in Monday's game, boosting his total runs scored to 101.

NEW YORK (AP) — Were the St. Louis Cardinals seeing double in Monday's sixth inning against the Giants. . . or was the situation too dark?

Giants' shortstop Alvin Dar went to bat twice as his club scored nine times and hit a double each time.

AP&L to Dedicate New Office

PINE BLUFF (AP) — The Arkansas Power and Light Company will dedicate its new $2 million general office building here today.

A parade, dedicatory speeches and dinner will highlight the celebration which begins at 3 p. m.

Francis Cherry, Democratic nominee for governor, will participate in the parade and Ralph Mitchell Jr., president of the Pine Bluff Chamber of Commerce will deliver the dedicatory address at 3:30 p. m.

A dinner and reception for visiting industrialists and dignitaries will be held at the Pine Bluff Country Club following the ceremonies.

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Truman and Sen. Taft will make it more comfortable for anyone who can't get adjusted to the campaigning of Gen. Eisenhower and Gov. Stevenson.

Since everybody has been listening to them for years, hearing the President and the senator on the warpath again will be as relaxing as last year's hat. They follow standard political practice: Make it slam-bang and personal.

Not so with Eisenhower and Stevenson. Being newcomers to national politics, they have had to inch their way along to get the feel of things. They started out as mild as a couple of cousins.

Now the general is getting rougher on the Truman administration and the governor is getting a little more caustic about the Republicans. But both still seem to be trying to work up a full head of steam.

They may bet an assist in this from Truman and Taft, with Taft shoveling coals on the fire under Stevenson, Truman doing the same for Eisenhower, and Truman and Taft doing likewise for each other.

In this way the quartet should have a nice blaze going by election day with help from the vice presidential candidates, Sen. Sparkman and Sen. Nixon.

Truman and Taft are more than just famous politicians whose names are a household word. They have become symbols of their parties.

Although Truman and Taft are not now candidates for anything, they're both such aggressive men,

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK, (UP) — The p licity buildup for next wee heavyweight title fight between J sey Joe Walcott and Rocky M ciano should be heading today the sublime.

It's certainly been in the r culous up to now.

As of the current dispa from the respective training cam the imminent embroglio has had the dignity of a Mack Sennet co dy. Only the keystone kops w never this funny.

Everybody is crowding into publicity act except the fight and the situation as to their c dition and workouts has b buried deepter than the prize n get at Fort Knox. If the tr hadn't leaked out when the tracts were signed, you'd th Rocky's manager, Al (The V Weill, was prepping to do ba with Felix (Deadpan) Bocchicc Walcott's Arcaro.

The latest "fight" news fr Marciano's manager concerned raucous roars from Weill whe was reported that Rocky wo take his own chef to Philadelp because of crank letters wh threatened him with a menu [illegible] ey.

One thing certain, Rocky's ca must be the best fed in pugili history because his chef is gett more publicity than Oscar of Waldrof ever had. Up to now daily dispatches have caused feeling that the Rock was train like a candidate for a fat m pie-eating contest. He has b eating prodigious amounts of f and using steaks for hors d'oeu which are society sandwiches big as a minute.

Another scintillating scoop c cerned the fact that somebody other from Brockton, Ma Rocky's home town, predicted t there would be "dancing in streets" if Marciano won.

It reminds me of a great l one writer sent out during Johnstown flood. The reporters c started, "God sat on the hills rounding Johnstown tonight."

His exasperated editor, sitting the other end of the telegraph impatiently awaiting statistical formaion on the flood dama broke in and said:

"Forget the flood. Interv God."

Which brings me to the fact "dancing in the streets" line r cause me to miss the fight. the chance the Rock will wi may go cover the Massachu Mardi Gras. Always did want see a New Englander lose his serve and do a buck and wing Fouth and Main.

But probably the best trai camp story of them all concer Bocchicchio's request that Weill forced to undergo a physical up before being permitted Rocky's corner. Felix, who ear his appearance of a shopw George Raft, insisted he di want "The Vest" to drop dead a heart attack.

Although it has been known happen, it's a good thing that bout isn't scheduled to end football games — with a gun s Otherwise Weill might have a fect comeback.

The fighters? On, they're aro somewhere, sparring or running something.

CHAPTER TWENTY

AUGUST was an unexpectedly cold month. Vacationists shivered on beaches, piled on extra sweaters and wished for summer cottages with central heating and thermostats.

"Nothing," Rolph Hilliard told Nance, following a week end at his shore place, "is more depressing than sand without sun. I huddled three days over a fireplace."

Nance made a clucking sound of commiseration. Her reactions to the weather, or anything else these days, was halfhearted. She was in New York permanently now, after seeing Eleanor through her breakdown following Jeremy's marriage.

In a way, Eleanor's illness had been a good thing for Nance. It kept her mind and body occupied, and when Eleanor at length was able to be up and about again as usual—although she was noticeably thinner and subdued—Nance found that she herself had recovered from the first shock. And she decided at once that she would not stay in Thurstonia, encountering the inevitable pity of her friends, and forever running into Eve and Jeremy.

Kit had insisted on Nance making her home with her.

"Apartments are still scarce," she'd reasoned. "Besides, if you are going to be in New York, I'd like you with me. So would Eleanor."

Nance agreed. Kit was kind, and it really was not sensible to live alone. Kit vigorously discouraged brooding, and already, in the pattern of days which at first had been her grim routine of eating, sleeping, working, Kit was weaving her bright threads. And Rolph. Rolph was surprisingly sensitive of her moods. Perceptive and responsive, without mollycoddling her hurt pride.

Rolph was a truly nice person, Nance thought, considering him across the table. They often came to this quiet place near the office for tea. Rolph was from a small town in Kent, England. His voice still had a trace of the broad a's and full, round o's, and his habit for tea at four came, he said, from a long line of tea-drinking ancestors.

Rolph said, refilling her cup, "I'm having the office adjoining mine made over as a studio for you, Nance. There are a couple of new books coming up. You'll get the art contracts."

"There's really no work space for me in Kit's apartment, Rolph. And I don't want to make a nuisance of myself. Kit has her own [illegible]

[illegible] Don't let this [illegible] Nance." [illegible]

to let this spoil my life, either. I have my work."

He nodded.

She continued, "I'm fortunate it's work I like. I can put all myself into it. It's so much more convenient being a jilted artist than a jilted stenographer, isn't it? Nine to five, with nothing but curlicues, and all those empty hours to fill! Artists are like authors—they never really stop working. Even in their sleep. I've often pushed myself awake to catch a dream, to get it on paper before I lost it."

He nodded, then frowned. "That's fine, for now. But drive yourself too hard and you'll go stale. I've seen it happen. Don't shut out your friends, Nance. Every contact is a stimulant, or a sedative. You need both." He grinned suddenly. "I'm not quite sure which category I'm in."

"Both!" She added, "You've been kind, Rolph."

"I'll be around if you need me, Nance."

She knew what he meant. Exactly. She would, just now, have preferred not knowing. Up to now, in her various encounters with Rolph Hilliard, she had sensed vaguely that he was on the verge of being in love with her. He hadn't put anything in words. Jeremy had been a barrier. Jeremy was no longer a barrier, but she wasn't ready for another love, and Rolph knew it. But he offered her his strength to lean upon, and she was grateful. She said gently, "Thank you, Rolph."

The tables around them were filling. Glancing up, Nance saw Steve Raymond and Libby Oliver in the foyer. Rolph saw them in the same instant, and lifting his brows at Nance for acquiescence, he waved them over.

"My lord," Steve said, seating Libby and pulling out a chair next to Nance, "tea!" He ordered martinis for himself and Libby.

But Libby protested, "I think I'll have tea, Steve. You should, too. Unless you want to start the Carlsons' party with a hang-over. Tea," she said firmly to the waiter, "for both of us, please."

Steve scowled, "Mama knows best."

"All right, all right."

Nance felt impatient with both of them. Especially Libby. Why, with Steve so churlish, did she tag along?

She questioned Rolph about it, on their way back to the office. They'd left Steve and Libby at the table, still bickering.

"Oh, Steve needs her, after a fashion," Rolph said. "He always has, and Libby knows it. She has [illegible] been a battle royal. But Libby was in Florida, and when she got back, it was too late. Libby's a sample of Hope Lives Eternal."

"It's hard on Libby."

Rolph shrugged. "Funny what people in love will put up with."

"But what is it getting her?"

"Nothing, at the moment. Except one of these days Steve is going to snap out of this and discover he loves Libby."

"Suppose he doesn't?"

"Then Libby will see to it there's not another Eve. It's worth, from Libby's point of view, a few dints in her pride. She really loves the guy."

Nance winced, although she knew Rolph's remark had no personal significance. I walked out on Jeremy, she thought. My darn pride! Only I couldn't have made a door mat of myself, like Libby. And Jeremy isn't Steve. He wouldn't have let me, or anyone else, pull strings. He wanted Eve, he married her, and that's that.

She said, as they walked along the corridor of their office building, "Rolph, I didn't tell you this before. The girl Jeremy married is Eve."

He didn't get it, at first. Then he whistled. Then, abruptly, he frowned. "Why?"

Nance knew what he meant. He hadn't, from the first, thought Eve had just happened to go to Thurstonia. He was seeking, now, the motive for the marriage. Eve's motive. Nance was heartened by his understanding.

He said thoughtfully, "Eve didn't need money, after what she got from Steve."

"Jeremy hasn't that sort of money, anyway. No, it wasn't that. I think I've figured it out. Partly, anyway. She hates Jeremy's father and mother. She hates me. She hated me long before she knew me, because I had everything that had been taken from her. It's the story of a child carrying a grudge, and I know it sounds far-fetched." She smiled wryly. "Yet I know I'm right . . . Rolph, it's not only losing Jeremy that hurts. It's losing him to her. I'm not particularly noble, but I think I could stand it if I thought he'd be happy with her. But the things you've told me, and Libby—well, how can he be happy with Eve?"

He said, "Let Jeremy fight his fight, Nance. You fight yours."

She managed a smile. "I expect that's the sensible thing to do."

"You can't be responsible for his trials and errors, Nance."

Not responsible, but you couldn't help being apprehensive. When you saw what Eve had done to Steve Raymond, how could you not worry over what she'd do to Jeremy? Unless Eve really loved him. Nance was trying hard to believe that. [illegible]

The Tale of The Big Brown Trout
By AL McCLANE
Fishing Editor

Pretty women seldom pay respect to philosophers. Now Pat, who is my wife and should know better, materially lessened the popularity of her sex for future generations.

I caught three large trout in the Haunted House Pool on the Delaware River one morning recently and I carefully strung them on a willow branch. The fish were taken honestly — on a dry fly — and when I left her to wander down toward Basket Brook my pace was quick and sure.

After all, I am an expert. She takes pleasure in casting a plug, and leaving her at the pool seemed safe enough. I had caught all the fish, and anyhow she could get plenty of exercise winging the bait toward Pennsylvania.

When I returned an hour later, I saw her blonde head bobbing among the cataracts, as she bounced to the gravel shingle near the end of the pool. There are probably among my readers young men who will be horrified at the thought that went through my mind as I turned from this scene of helpless womanhood, but there, next to my fish, was a brown trout of monstrous size. A fish that I could never match in 20 years of Delaware fishing.

She had flung her plug in the face of tradition with unerring aim. The trout weighed 7 pounds 3 ounces and swallowed a black finish Heddon River Runt. Of course you and I know such a lure is no good for eastern trouting, but then, we are philosophers.

The miracle of deep freezing and the ingenuity of a trout fisherman have been combined at a place called the Green Spring Mountain Trout Farm, in Newville, Pa. The hatchery reared fish just don't have the delicate flavor of a wild trout, especially when you've had them fresh out of the water on the banks of a far off stream.

Well, Colin Thomas decided he could produce a "wild" trout for the market and after consulting with a number of food scientists he learned the real problem was that the cells, tissues, and fatty oils of the trout's flesh broke down in a matter of minutes after the fish was taken from the stream. [illegible] built a deep freeze unit. Under his system, the trout are cleaned packed in a pliofilm bag, and in the quick freeze — all in ten minutes time.

The trout arrive at your house frozen solid, and after a very impartial test I can report that they are equal to most and superior to many wild fish. They come in a cardboard creel, incidentally, along with a half-dozen recipes that can't be beat.

Graziano Is Favored Over Davey

CHICAGO (AP) —Roughneck Rocky Graziano and undefeated Chuck Davey, the mercury-footed Michigan State Graduate, are cast in boxing's beauty-and-the-beast episode tomorrow night.

The scheduled 10-round scrap in Chicago Stadium will be televised and broadcast nationally.

Odds favoring the sledge-fisted, mauling Graziano, who rose from New York's slums to gain and lose the middleweight crown in three brutal battles with Tony Zale, have shrunk from 12-5 a week ago to 9-5.

Some ring critics think Rocky has been washed up since those punishing brawls with the former Gary "Man of Steel." But they still respect his toughness and slugging ability. They think Rocky can knock out Davey if he can hit him.

"These little guys are all alike— They run but they can't hide," Graziano. "I think Joe Louis first said that —but he was sure right."

Davey, one of the finest southpaws in years, realizes he must depend on his speed and cleverness to the limit.

"I don't think Rocky will be able to hit me with any of his wild, roundhouse swings," he said. "I'm in the best shape of my whole life and could go 20 rounds. Rocky will be swinging at the air all night."

Davey, 26, is unbeaten in 36 pro fights and never has been knocked off his feet. Weighing 149, he will sacrifice about 13 pounds at ring time to his 30-year-old opponent. Graziano figures to weigh in at noon Wednesday at an official 158 then take enough nourishment to get to 162 by night.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) —Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick will not know until he reads this that he nearly got himself thrown bodily out of the Polo Ground by an alert National League umpire one recent afternoon.

It seems the czar was watching a game from a window in President Horace Stoneham's office deep in centerfield, and was employing a pair of king-size field glasses to bring the action closer. Our vigilant umpire, who prefers to remain nameless, caught the glint of the afternoon sun on the lenses and sensed a major sign-stealing plot.

"Throw that guy out of there in a hurry," he yelled to Manager Leo Durocher, adding an ominous "or else."

Leo obligingly took down the dugout phone and held a short and earnest conversation, after which he turned innocently to the arbiter.

"Told 'em what you said," he announced. "That's the commissioner."

It was one time, they say, that Leo had the last word with an umpire.

Down in Havana, where the 13th annual "Amateur World Series" has been in progress between teams from Latin and South America, they at least took a vigorous whack at cutting down the length of games. They've been having the same trouble we have.

The good senors who ran the show simply slapped on a time limit: 2½ hours for afternoon games, two hours, 45 minutes for arclighters, with the provision that the inning in progress when time expired would be completed.

Worked fine, they say, and you should have seen the teams which were behind after the two-hour mark get out there and hustle.

Observing the great success of Hoyt Wilhelm as a reliver for the Giants this year, Carl Hubbell, the old Hall-of-Famer, predicts the woods will be full of young knuckleballer flingers for the next few seasons.

Bobcats Work on Defense for DeQueen

Coach Joe Ensminger said today he wasn't disappointed in the showing the Bobcats made in the 26-13 win over Stamps Friday night but there "is need for improvement."

The squad showed plenty of spirit in practice yesterday and settled down to plain old fundamentals—mainly tackling, certainly one of their weak departments against the YellowJackets — but they will work on everything.

And they will need everything when they tangle with the DeQueen Leopards here Friday night. The Leopards, idle last week, were in the stands for a first hand view of how the Hope boys operate.

The Bobcats came out of the game in pretty good shape with only a few bruised shoulders and muscles. Quarterback Tom Ed Hays probably won't see action Friday night as he is nursing a bruised leg which he had before the opening game. Coach Ensminger said Hays would not see action until his leg is completely healed.

The coaches were well pleased with the performance of the backfield and they did show up well. In spots the line looked good but on occasions some of that "green" material really glared.

However, a few more games which will give them much needed experience and the Bobcats are likely to develop into a fairly potent outfit.

Sports in Brief

DETROIT (AP) — Hal Newhouser the Tigers' veteran left hander needs only one more victory to join the exclusivbe 200-win club. Newhouser picked up his 199th triumph in a relief role Monday as the Bengals nipped Washington, 5-4. Bob Feller of Cleveland is the only active major league pitcher to have hit the double century mark. He has 239.

CHICAGO (AP)—When Jim Rivera, White Sox outfielder, committed an error in Monday's game against Boston, it was his first since donning a Chicago uniform on July 29th. Rivera, who was acquired from the St. Louis Browns on waivers, had played 43 games for the Chisox without a miscue.

NEW YORK (AP) Jackie Robinson is the first major league player to score 100 runs this season. The Brooklyn second sacker tallied three times against Cincinati in Monday's game, boosting his total runs scored to 101.

NEW YORK (AP) — Were the St. Louis Cardinals seeing double in Monday's sixth inning against the Giants. . . or was the situation too dark?

Giants' shortstop Alvin Dar went to bat twice as his club scored nine times and hit a double each time.

Truman, Taft to Bring in Old Tactics

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Truman and Sen. Taft will make it more comfortable for anyone who can't get adjusted to the campaigning of Gen. Eisenhower and Gov. Stevenson.

Since everybody has been listening to them for years, hearing the President and the senator on the warpath again will be as relaxing as last year's hat. They follow standard political practice: Make it slam-bang and personal.

Not so with Eisenhower and Stevenson. Being newcomers to national politics, they have had to inch their way along to get the feel of things. They started out as mild as a couple of cousins.

Now the general is getting rougher on the Truman administration and the governor is getting a little more caustic about the Republicans. But both still seem to be trying to work up a full head of steam.

They may bet an assist in this from Truman and Taft, with Taft shoveling coals on the fire under Stevenson, Truman doing the same for Eisenhower, and Truman and Taft doing likewise for each other.

In this way the quartet should have a nice blaze going by election day with help from the vice presidential candidates, Sen. Sparkman and Sen. Nixon.

Truman and Taft are more than just famous politicians whose names are a household word. They have become symbols of their parties.

Although Truman and Taft are not now candidates for anything, they're both such aggressive men, with strong opinions and a yet express them, before this ca paign is over they may oversh ew the two men running for offi

Fight Buildup Is Termed Ridiculous

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK, (UP) — The p licity buildup for next wee heavyweight title fight between J sey Joe Walcott and Rocky M ciano should be heading today the sublime.

It's certainly been in the r culous up to now.

As of the current dispa from the respective training cam the imminent embroglio has had the dignity of a Mack Sennet co dy. Only the keystone kops w never this funny.

Everybody is crowding into publicity act except the fight and the situation as to their c dition and workouts has b buried deeper than the prize m get at Fort Knox. If the tr hadn't leaked out when the c tracts were signed, you'd th Rocky's manager, Al (The Ve Weill, was prepping to do ba with Felix (Deadpan) Bocchicc Walcott's Arcaro.

The latest "fight" news fr Marciano's manager concerned raucous roars from Weill when was reported that Rocky wo take his own chef to Philadelp because of crank letters wh threatened him with a menu ey.

One thing certain, Rocky's ca must be the best fed in pugili history because his chef is gett more publicity than Oscar of Waldrof ever had. Up to now daily dispatches have caused feeling that the Rock was train like a candidate for a fat m pie-eating contest. He has b eating prodigious amounts of f and using steaks for hors d'oeu which are society sandwiches big as a minute.

Another scintillating scoop c cerned the fact that somebody other from Brockton, Ma Rocky's home town, predicted t there would be "dancing in streets" if Marciano won.

It reminds me of a great l one writer sent out during Johnstown flood. The reporters c started, "God sat on the hills rounding Johnstown tonight."

His exasperated editor, sitting the other end of the telegraph impatiently awaiting statistical formaion on the flood dama broke in and said:

"Forget the flood. Interv God."

Which brings me to the fact "dancing in the streets" line r cause me to miss the fight. the chance the Rock will win may go cover the Massachus Mardi Gras. Always did want see a New Englander lose his serve and do a buck and wing Fouth and Main.

But probably the best train camp story of them all concer Bocchicchio's request that Weill forced to undergo a physical up before being permitted Rocky's corner. Felix, who ear his appearance of a shopw George Raft, insisted he di want "The Vest" to drop dead a heart attack.

Although it has been known happen, it's a good thing that bout isn't scheduled to end football games — with a gun s Otherwise Weill might have a fect comeback.

The fighters? On, they're aro somewhere, sparring or running something.

CHAPTER TWENTY

AUGUST was an unexpectedly cold month. Vacationists shivered on beaches, piled on extra sweaters and wished for summer cottages with central heating and thermostats.

"Nothing," Rolph Hilliard told Nance, following a week end at his shore place, "is more depressing than sand without sun. I huddled three days over a fireplace."

Nance made a clucking sound of commiseration. Her reactions to the weather, or anything else these days, was halfhearted. She was in New York permanently now, after seeing Eleanor through her breakdown following Jeremy's marriage.

In a way, Eleanor's illness had been a good thing for Nance. It kept her mind and body occupied, and when Eleanor at length was able to be up and about again as usual—although she was noticeably thinner and subdued—Nance found that she herself had recovered from the first shock. And she decided at once that she would not stay in Thurstonia, encountering the inevitable pity of her friends, and forever running into Eve and Jeremy.

Kit had insisted on Nance making her home with her.

"Apartments are still scarce," she'd reasoned. "Besides, if you are going to be in New York, I'd like you with me. So would Eleanor."

Nance agreed. Kit was kind, and it really was not sensible to live alone. Kit vigorously discouraged brooding, and already, in the pattern of days which at first had been her grim routine of eating, sleeping, working, Kit was weaving her bright threads. And Rolph. Rolph was surprisingly sensitive of her moods. Perceptive and responsive, without mollycoddling her hurt pride.

Rolph was a truly nice person, Nance thought, considering him across the table. They often came to this quiet place near the office, for tea. Rolph was from a small town in Kent, England. His voice still had a trace of the broad a's and full, round o's, and his habit for tea at four came, he said, from a long line of tea-drinking ancestors.

Rolph said, refilling her cup, "I'm having the office adjoining mine made over as a studio for you, Nance. There are a couple of new books coming up. You'll get the art contracts."

"There's really no work space for me in Kit's apartment, Rolph. And I don't want to make a nuisance of myself. Kit has her own [illegible] Don't let this [illegible] Nance." [illegible] she said [illegible] to let this spoil my life, either. I have my work."

He nodded.

She continued, "I'm fortunate it's work I like. I can put all myself into it. It's so much more convenient being a jilted artist than a jilted stenographer, isn't it? Nine to five, with nothing but curlicues, and all those empty hours to fill! Artists are like authors—they never really stop working. Even in their sleep. I've often pushed myself awake to catch a dream, to get it on paper before I lost it."

He nodded, then frowned. "That's fine, for now. But drive yourself too hard and you'll go stale. I've seen it happen. Don't shut out your friends, Nance. Every contact is a stimulant, or a sedative. You need both." He grinned suddenly. "I'm not quite sure which category I'm in."

"Both!" She added, "You've been kind, Rolph."

"I'll be around if you need me, Nance."

She knew what he meant. Exactly. She would, just now, have preferred not knowing. Up to now, in her various encounters with Rolph Hilliard, she had sensed vaguely that he was on the verge of being in love with her. He hadn't put anything in words. Jeremy had been a barrier. Jeremy was no longer a barrier, but she wasn't ready for another love, and Rolph knew it. But he offered her his strength to lean upon, and she was grateful. She said gently, "Thank you, Rolph."

The tables around them were filling. Glancing up, Nance saw Steve Raymond and Libby Oliver in the foyer. Rolph saw them in the same instant, and lifting his brows at Nance for acquiescence, he waved them over.

"My lord," Steve said, seating Libby and pulling out a chair next to Nance, "tea!" He ordered martinis for himself and Libby.

But Libby protested, "I think I'll have tea, Steve. You should, too. Unless you want to start the Carlsons' party with a hang-over. Tea," she said firmly to the waiter, "for both of us, please."

Steve scowled. "Mama knows best."

"All right, all right."

Nance felt impatient with both of them. Especially Libby. Why, with Steve so churlish, did she tag along?

She questioned Rolph about it, on their way back to the office. They'd left Steve and Libby at the table, still bickering.

"Oh, Steve needs her, after a fashion," Rolph said. "He always has, and Libby knows it. She has [illegible] been a battle royal. But Libby was in Florida, and when she got back, it was too late. Libby's a sample of Hope Lives Eternal."

"It's hard on Libby."

Rolph shrugged. "Funny what people in love will put up with."

"But what is it getting her?"

"Nothing, at the moment. Except one of these days Steve is going to snap out of this and discover he loves Libby."

"Suppose he doesn't?"

"Then Libby will see to it there's not another Eve. It's worth, from Libby's point of view, a few dints in her pride. She really loves the guy."

Nance winced, although she knew Rolph's remark had no personal significance. I walked out on Jeremy, she thought. My darn pride! Only I couldn't have made a door mat of myself, like Libby. And Jeremy isn't Steve. He wouldn't have let me, or anyone else, pull strings. He wanted Eve, he married her, and that's that.

She said, as they walked along the corridor of their office building, "Rolph, I didn't tell you this before. The girl Jeremy married is Eve."

He didn't get it, at first. Then he whistled. Then, abrutly, he frowned. "Why?"

Nance knew what he meant. He hadn't, from the first, thought Eve had just happened to go to Thurstonia. He was seeking, now, the motive for the marriage. Eve's motive. Nance was heartened by his understanding.

He said thoughtfully, "Eve didn't need money, after what she got from Steve."

"Jeremy hasn't that sort of money, anyway. No, it wasn't that. I think I've figured it out. Partly, anyway. She hates Jeremy's father and mother. She hates me. She hated me long before she knew me, because I had everything that had been taken from her. It's the story of a child carrying a grudge, and I know it sounds far-fetched." She smiled wryly. "Yet I know I'm right . . . Rolph, it's not only losing Jeremy that hurts. It's losing him to her. I'm not particularly noble, but I think I could stand it if I thought he'd be happy with her. But the things you've told me, and Libby—well, how can he be happy with Eve?"

He said, "Let Jeremy fight his fight, Nance. You fight yours."

She managed a smile. "I expect that's the sensible thing to do."

"You can't be responsible for his trials and errors, Nance."

Not responsible, but you couldn't help being apprehensive. When you saw what Eve had done to Steve Raymond, how could you not worry over what she'd do to Jeremy? Unless Eve really loved him. Nance was trying hard to [illegible]

The Tale of The Big Brown Trout

By AL McCLANE
Fishing Editor

Pretty women seldom pay respect to philosophers. Now Pat, who is my wife and should know better, materially lessened the popularity of her sex for future generations.

I caught three large trout in the Haunted House Pool on the Delaware River one morning recently and I carefully strung them on a willow branch. The fish were taken honestly — on a dry fly — and when I left her to wander down toward Basket Brook my pace was quick and sure.

After all, I am an expert. She takes pleasure in casting a plug, and leaving her at the pool seemed safe enough. I had caught all the fish, and anyhow she could get plenty of exercise winging the bait toward Pennsylvania.

When I returned an hour later, I saw her blonde head bobbing among the cataracts, as she bounced to the gravel shingle near the end of the pool. There are probably among my readers young men who will be horrified at the thought that went through my mind as I turned from this scene of helpless womanhood, but there, next to my fish, was a brown trout of monstrous size. A fish that I could never match in 20 years of Delaware fishing.

She had flung her plug in the face of tradition with unerring aim. The trout weighed 7 pounds 3 ounces and swallowed a black finish Heddon River Runt. Of course you and I know such a lure is no good for eastern trouting, but then, we are philosophers.

The miracle of deep freezing and the ingenuity of a trout fisherman have been combined at a place called the Green Spring Mountain Trout Farm, in Newville, Pa. The hatchery reared fish just don't have the delicate flavor of a wild trout, especially when you've had them fresh out of the water on the banks of a far off stream.

Well, Colin Thomas decided he could produce a "wild" trout for the market and after consulting with a number of food scientists he learned the real problem was that the cells, tissues, and fatty oils of the trout's flesh broke down in a matter of minutes after the fish was taken from the stream. The change destroyed the flavor. [illegible] built a deep freeze unit. Under his system, the trout are cleaned packed in a pliofilm bag, and in the quick freeze — all in ten minutes time.

The trout arrive at your house frozen solid, and after a very impartial test I can report that they are equal to most and superior to many wild fish. They come in a cardboard creel, incidentally, along with a half-dozen recipes that can't be beat.

Graziano Is Favored Over Davey

CHICAGO (AP) —Roughneck Rocky Graziano and undefeated Chuck Davey, the mercury-footed Michigan State Graduate, are cast in boxing's beauty-and-the-beast episode tomorrow night.

The scheduled 10-round scrap in Chicago Stadium will be televised and broadcast nationally.

Odds favoring the sledge-fisted, mauling Graziano, who rose from New York's slums to gain and lose the middleweight crown in three brutal battles with Tony Zale, have shrunk from 12-5 a week ago to 9-5.

Some ring critics think Rocky has been washed up since those punishing brawls with the former Gary "Man of Steel." But they still respect his toughness and slugging ability. They think Rocky can knock out Davey if he can hit him.

"These little guys are all alike—They run but they can't hide," Graziano. "I think Joe Louis first said that —but he was sure right."

Davey, one of the finest southpaws in years, realizes he must depend on his speed and cleverness to the limit.

"I don't think Rocky will be able to hit me with any of his wild, roundhouse swings," he said. "I'm in the best shape of my whole life and could go 20 rounds. Rocky will be swinging at the air all night."

Davey, 26, is unbeaten in 36 pro fights and never has been knocked off his feet. Weighing 140, he will sacrifice about 13 pounds at ring time to his 30-year-old opponent. Graziano figures to weigh in at noon Wednesday at an official 158 then take enough nourishment to get to 162 by night.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) —Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick will not know until he reads this that he nearly got himself thrown bodily out of the Polo Ground by an alert National League umpire one recent afternoon.

It seems the czar was watching a game from a window in President Horace Stoneham's office deep in centerfield, and was employing a pair of king-size field glasses to bring the action closer. Our vigilant umpire, who prefers to remain nameless, caught the glint of the afternoon sun on the lenses and sensed a major sign-stealing plot.

"Throw that guy out of there in a hurry," he yelled to Manager Leo Durocher, adding an ominous "or else."

Leo obligingly took down the dugout phone and held a short and earnest conversation, after which he turned innocently to the arbiter.

"Told 'em what you said," he announced. "That's the commissioner."

It was one time, they say, that Leo had the last word with an umpire.

Down in Havana, where the 13th annual "Amateur World Series" has been in progress between teams from Latin and South America, they at least took a vigorous whack at cutting down the length of games. They've been having the same trouble we have.

The good senors who ran the show simply slapped on a time limit: 2½ hours for afternoon games, two hours, 45 minutes for arclighters, with the provision that the inning in progress when time expired would be completed.

Worked fine, they say, and you should have seen the teams which were behind after the two-hour mark get out there and hustle.

Observing the great success of Hoyt Wilhelm as a reliver for the Giants this year, Carl Hubbell, the old Hall-of-Famer, predicts the woods will be full of young knuckleballer flingers for the next few seasons.

Bobcats Work on Defense for DeQueen

Coach Joe Ensminger said today he wasn't disappointed in the showing the Bobcats made in the 26-13 win over Stamps Friday night but there "is need for improvement."

The squad showed plenty of spirit in practice yesterday and settled down to plain old fundamentals—mainly tackling, certainly one of their weak departments against the Yellowjackets — but they will work on everything.

And they will need everything when they tangle with the DeQueen Leopards here Friday night. The Leopards, idle last week, were in the stands for a first hand view of how the Hope boys operate.

The Bobcats came out of the game in pretty good shape with only a few bruised shoulders and muscles. Quarterback Tom Ed Hays probably won't see action Friday night as he is nursing a bruised leg which he had before the opening game. Coach Ensminger said Hays would not see action until his leg is completely healed.

The coaches were well pleased with the performance of the backfield and they did show up well. In spots the line looked good but on occasions some of that "green" material really glared.

However, a few more games which will give them much needed experience and the Bobcats are likely to develop into a fairly potent outfit.

Sports in Brief

DETROIT (AP) — Hal Newhouser the Tigers' veteran left hander needs only one more victory to join the exclusivbe 200-win club. Newhouser picked up his 199th triumph in a relief role Monday as the Bengals nipped Washington, 5-4. Bob Feller of Cleveland is the only active major league pitcher to have hit the double century mark. He has 239.

CHICAGO (AP)—When Jim Rivera, White Sox outfielder, committed an error in Monday's game against Boston, it was his first since donning a Chicago uniform on July 25th. Rivera, who was acquired from the St. Louis Browns on waivers, had played 43 games for the Chisox without a miscue.

NEW YORK (AP) Jackie Robinson is the first major league player to score 100 runs this season. The Brooklyn second sacker tallied three times against Cincinati in Monday's game, boosting his total runs scored to 101.

NEW YORK (AP) — Were the St. Louis Cardinals seeing double in Monday's sixth inning against the Giants. . . or was the situation too dark?

Giants' shortstop Alvin Dar went to bat twice as his club scored nine times and hit a double each time.

AP&L to Dedicate New Office

PINE BLUFF (AP) — The Arkansas Power and Light Company will dedicate its new $2 million general office building here today.

A parade, dedicatory speeches and dinner will highlight the celebration which begins at 3 p. m.

Francis Cherry, Democratic nominee for governor, will participate in the parade and Ralph Mitchell Jr., president of the Pine Bluff Chamber of Commerce will deliver the dedicatory address at 3:30 p. m.

A dinner and reception for visiting industrialists and dignitaries will be held at the Pine Bluff Country Club following the ceremonies.

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Truman and Sen. Taft will make it more comfortable for anyone who can't get adjusted to the campaigning of Gen. Eisenhower and Gov. Stevenson.

Since everybody has been listening to them for years, hearing the President and the senator on the warpath again will be as relaxing as last year's hat. They follow standard political practice: Make it slam-bang and personal.

Not so with Eisenhower and Stevenson. Being newcomers to national politics, they have had to inch their way along to get the feel of things. They started out as mild as a couple of cousins.

Now the general is getting rougher on the Truman administration and the governor is getting a little more caustic about the Republicans. But both still seem to be trying to work up a full head of steam.

They may bet an assist in this from Truman and Taft, with Taft shoveling coals on the fire under Stevenson, Truman doing the same for Eisenhower, and Truman and Taft doing likewise for each other.

In this way the quartet should have a nice blaze going by election day with help from the vice presidential candidates, Sen. Sparkman and Sen. Nixon.

Truman and Taft are more than just famous politicians whose names are a household word. They have become symbols of their parties.

Although Truman and Taft are not now candidates for anything, they're both such aggressive men, with strong opinions and a yet express them, before this ca paign is over they may oversh ew the two men running for offi

Fight Buildup Is Termed Ridiculous

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK, (UP) — The p licity buildup for next we heavyweight title fight between sey Joe Walcott and Rocky M ciano should be heading today the sublime.

As of the current dispa from the respective training cam the imminent embroglio has had the dignity of a Mack Sennet co dy. Only the keystone kops w never this funny.

Everybody is crowding into publicity act except the fight and the situation as to their c dition and workouts has b buried deepter than the prize n get at Fort Knox. If the tr hadn't leaked out when the tracts were signed, you'd th Rocky's manager, Al (The V Weill, was prepping to do ba with Felix (Deadpan) Bocchic Walcott's Arcaro.

The latest "fight" news fr Marciano's manager concerned raucous roars from Weill whe was reported that Rocky w take his own chef to Philadelp because of crank letters wh threatened him with a menu ey.

One thing certain, Rocky's ca must be the best fed in pugili history because his chef is get more publicity than Oscar of Waldrof ever had. Up to now daily dispatches have caused feeling that the Rock was trai like a candidate for a fat m pie-eating contest. He has b eating prodigious amounts of and using steaks for hors d'oeu which are society sandwiches big as a minute.

Another scintillating scoop cerned the fact that somebody other from Brockton, Ma Rocky's home town, predicted there would be "dancing in streets" if Marciano won.

It reminds me of a great one writer sent out during Johnstown flood. The reporters started, "God sat on the hills rounding Johnstown tonight."

His exasperated editor, sitting the other end of the telegraph impatiently awaiting statistical formaion on the flood dam broke in and said:

"Forget the flood. Interv God."

Which brings me to the fact "dancing in the streets" line cause me to miss the fight. the chance the Rock will wi may go cover the Massachu Mardi Gras. Always did want see a New Englander lose his serve and do a buck and wing Fouth and Main.

But probably the best trai camp story of them all concer Bocchicchio's request that Weill forced to undergo a physical up before being permitted Rocky's corner. Felix, who ear his appearance of a shopw George Raft, insisted he di want "The Vest" to drop dead a heart attack.

Although it has been known happen, it's a good thing that bout isn't scheduled to end football games — with a gun s Otherwise Weill might have a fect comeback.

The fighters? On, they're aro somewhere, sparring or running something.

CHAPTER TWENTY

AUGUST was an unexpectedly cold month. Vacationists shivered on beaches, piled on extra sweaters and wished for summer cottages with central heating and thermostats.

"Nothing," Rolph Hilliard told Nance, following a week end at his shore place, "is more depressing than sand without sun. I huddled three days over a fireplace."

Nance made a clucking sound of commiseration. Her reactions to the weather, or anything else these days, was halfhearted. She was in New York permanently now, after seeing Eleanor through her breakdown following Jeremy's marriage.

In a way, Eleanor's illness had been a good thing for Nance. It kept her mind and body occupied, and when Eleanor at length was able to be up and about again as usual—although she was noticeably thinner and subdued—Nance found that she herself had recovered from the first shock. And she decided at once that she would not stay in Thurstonia, encountering the inevitable pity of her friends, and forever running into Eve and Jeremy.

Kit had insisted on Nance making her home with her.

"Apartments are still scarce," she'd reasoned. "Besides, if you are going to be in New York, I'd like you with me. So would Eleanor."

Nance agreed. Kit was kind, and it really was not sensible to live alone. Kit vigorously discouraged brooding, and already, in the pattern of days which at first had been her grim routine of eating, sleeping, working, Kit was weaving her bright threads. And Rolph. Rolph was surprisingly sensitive of her moods. Perceptive and responsive, without mollycoddling her hurt pride.

Rolph was a truly nice person, Nance thought, considering him across the table. They often came to this quiet place near the office, for tea. Rolph was from a small town in Kent, England. His voice still had a trace of the broad a's and full, round o's, and his habit for tea at four came, he said, from a long line of tea-drinking ancestors.

Rolph said, refilling her cup, "I'm having the office adjoining mine made over as a studio for you, Nance. There are a couple of new books coming up. You'll get the art contracts."

"There's really no work space for me in Kit's apartment, Rolph. And I don't want to make a nuisance of myself. Kit has her own [illegible] Don't let this [illegible] to let this spoil my life, either. I have my work."

He nodded.

She continued, "I'm fortunate it's work I like. I can put all myself into it. It's so much more convenient being a jilted artist than a jilted stenographer, isn't it? Nine to five, with nothing but curlicues, and all those empty hours to fill! Artists are like authors—they never really stop working. Even in their sleep. I've often pushed myself awake to catch a dream, to get it on paper before I lost it."

He nodded, then frowned. "That's fine, for now. But drive yourself too hard and you'll go stale. I've seen it happen. Don't shut out your friends, Nance. Every contact is a stimulant, or a sedative. You need both." He grinned suddenly. "I'm not quite sure which category I'm in."

"Both!" She added, "You've been kind, Rolph."

"I'll be around if you need me, Nance."

She knew what he meant. Exactly. She would, just now, have preferred not knowing. Up to now, in her various encounters with Rolph Hilliard, she had sensed vaguely that he was on the verge of being in love with her. He hadn't put anything in words. Jeremy had been a barrier. Jeremy was no longer a barrier, but she wasn't ready for another love, and Rolph knew it. But he offered her his strength to lean upon, and she was grateful. She said gently, "Thank you, Rolph."

The tables around them were filling. Glancing up, Nance saw Steve Raymond and Libby Oliver in the foyer. Rolph saw them in the same instant, and lifting his brows at Nance for acquiescence, he waved them over.

"My lord," Steve said, seating Libby and pulling out a chair next to Nance, "tea!" He ordered martinis for himself and Libby.

But Libby protested, "I think I'll have tea, Steve. You should, too. Unless you want to start the Carlsons' party with a hang-over. Tea," she said firmly to the waiter, "for both of us, please."

Steve scowled, "Mama knows best."

"All right, all right."

Nance felt impatient with both of them. Especially Libby. Why, with Steve so churlish, did she tag along?

She questioned Rolph about it, on their way back to the office. They'd left Steve and Libby at the table, still bickering.

"Oh, Steve needs her, after a fashion," Rolph said. "He always has, and Libby knows it. She has [illegible] been a battle royal. But Libby was in Florida, and when she got back, it was too late. Libby's a sample of Hope Lives Eternal."

"It's hard on Libby."

Rolph shrugged. "Funny what people in love will put up with."

"But what is it getting her?"

"Nothing, at the moment. Except one of these days Steve is going to snap out of this and discover he loves Libby."

"Suppose he doesn't?"

"Then Libby will see to it there's not another Eve. It's worth, from Libby's point of view, a few dints in her pride. She really loves the guy."

Nance winced, although she knew Rolph's remark had no personal significance. I walked out on Jeremy, she thought. My darn pride! Only I couldn't have made a door mat of myself, like Libby. And Jeremy isn't Steve. He wouldn't have let me, or anyone else, pull strings. He wanted Eve, he married her, and that's that.

She said, as they walked along the corridor of their office building, "Rolph, I didn't tell you this before. The girl Jeremy married is Eve."

He didn't get it, at first. Then he whistled. Then, abrutly, he frowned. "Why?"

Nance knew what he meant. He hadn't, from the first, thought Eve had just happened to go to Thurstonia. He was seeking, now, the motive for the marriage. Eve's motive. Nance was heartened by his understanding.

He said thoughtfully, "Eve didn't need money, after what she got from Steve."

"Jeremy hasn't that sort of money, anyway. No, it wasn't that. I think I've figured it out. Partly, anyway. She hates Jeremy's father and mother. She hates me. She hated me long before she knew me, because I had everything that had been taken from her. It's the story of a child carrying a grudge, and I know it sounds far-fetched." She smiled wryly. "Yet I know I'm right . . . Rolph, it's not only losing Jeremy that hurts. It's losing him to her. I'm not particularly noble, but I think I could stand it if I thought he'd be happy with her. But the things you've told me, and Libby—well, how can he be happy with Eve?"

He said, "Let Jeremy fight his fight, Nance. You fight yours."

She managed a smile. "I expect that's the sensible thing to do."

"You can't be responsible for his trials and errors, Nance."

Not responsible, but you couldn't help being apprehensive. When you saw what Eve had done to Steve Raymond, how could you not worry over what she'd do to Jeremy? Unless Eve really loved him. Nance was trying hard to [illegible]

The Tale of The Big Brown Trout
By AL McCLANE
Fishing Editor

Pretty women seldom pay respect to philosophers. Now Pat, who is my wife and should know better, materially lessened the popularity of her sex for future generations.

I caught three large trout in the Haunted House Pool on the Delaware River one morning recently and I carefully strung them on a willow branch. The fish were taken honestly — on a dry fly — and when I left her to wander down toward Basket Brook my pace was quick and sure.

After all, I am an expert. She takes pleasure in casting a plug, and leaving her at the pool seemed safe enough. I had caught all the fish, and anyhow she could get plenty of exercise winging the bait toward Pennsylvania.

When I returned an hour later, I saw her blonde head bobbing among the cataracts, as she bounced to the gravel shingle near the end of the pool. There are probably among my readers young men who will be horrified at the thought that went through my mind as I turned from this scene of helpless womanhood, but there, next to my fish, was a brown trout of monstrous size. A fish that I could never match in 20 years of Delaware fishing.

She had flung her plug in the face of tradition with unerring aim. The trout weighed 7 pounds 3 ounces and swallowed a black finish Heddon River Runt. Of course you and I know such a lure is no good for eastern trouting, but then, we are philosophers.

The miracle of deep freezing and the ingenuity of a trout fisherman have been combined at a place called the Green Spring Mountain Trout Farm, in Newville, Pa. The hatchery reared fish just don't have the delicate flavor of a wild trout, especially when you've had them fresh out of the water on the banks of a far off stream.

Well, Colin Thomas decided he could produce a "wild" trout for the market and after consulting with a number of food scientists he learned the real problem was that the cells, tissues, and fatty oils of the trout's flesh broke down in a matter of minutes after the fish was taken from the stream. The change destroyed the flavor. [illegible] built a deep freeze unit. Under his system, the trout are cleaned packed in a pliofilm bag, and in the quick freeze — all in ten minutes time.

The trout arrive at your house frozen solid, and after a very impartial test I can report that they are equal to most and superior to many wild fish. They come in a cardboard creel, incidentally, along with a half-dozen recipes that can't be beat.

Graziano Is Favored Over Davey

CHICAGO (AP) —Roughneck Rocky Graziano and undefeated Chuck Davey, the mercury-footed Michigan State Graduate, are cast in boxing's beauty-and-the-beast episode tomorrow night.

The scheduled 10-round scrap in Chicago Stadium will be televised and broadcast nationally.

Odds favoring the sledge-fisted, mauling Graziano, who rose from New York's slums to gain and lose the middleweight crown in three brutal battles with Tony Zale, have shrunk from 12-5 a week ago to 9-5.

Some ring critics think Rocky has been washed up since those punishing brawls with the former Gary "Man of Steel." But they still respect his toughness and slugging ability. They think Rocky can knock out Davey if he can hit him.

"These little guys are all alike— They run but they can't hide," Graziano. "I think Joe Louis first said that —but he was sure right."

Davey, one of the finest southpaws in years, realizes he must depend on his speed and cleverness to the limit.

"I don't think Rocky will be able to hit me with any of his wild, roundhouse swings," he said. "I'm in the best shape of my whole life and could go 20 rounds. Rocky will be swinging at the air all night."

Davey, 26, is unbeaten in 36 pro fights and never has been knocked off his feet. Weighing 140, he will sacrifice about 13 pounds at ring time to his 30-year-old opponent. Graziano figures to weigh in at noon Wednesday at an official 158 then take enough nourishment to get to 162 by night.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) —Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick will not know until he reads this that he nearly got himself thrown bodily out of the Polo Ground by an alert National League umpire one recent afternoon.

It seems the czar was watching a game from a window in President Horace Stoneham's office deep in centerfield, and was employing a pair of king-size field glasses to bring the action closer. Our vigilant umpire, who prefers to remain nameless, caught the glint of the afternoon sun on the lenses and sensed a major sign-stealing plot.

"Throw that guy out of there in a hurry," he yelled to Manager Leo Durocher, adding an ominous "or else."

Leo obligingly took down the dugout phone and held a short and earnest conversation, after which he turned innocently to the arbiter.

"Told 'em what you said," he announced. "That's the commissioner."

It was one time, they say, that Leo had the last word with an umpire.

Down in Havana, where the 13th annual "Amateur World Series" has been in progress between teams from Latin and South America, they at least took a vigorous whack at cutting down the length of games. They've been having the same trouble we have.

The good senors who ran the show simply slapped on a time limit: 2½ hours for afternoon games, two hours, 45 minutes for arclighters, with the provision that the inning in progress when time expired would be completed.

Worked fine, they say, and you should have seen the teams which were behind after the two-hour mark get out there and hustle.

Observing the great success of Hoyt Wilhelm as a reliver for the Giants this year, Carl Hubbell, the old Hall-of-Famer, predicts the woods will be full of young knuckleballer flingers for the next few seasons.

Bobcats Work on Defense for DeQueen

Coach Joe Ensminger said today he wasn't disappointed in the showing the Bobcats made in the 26-13 win over Stamps Friday night but there "is need for improvement."

The squad showed plenty of spirit in practice yesterday and settled down to plain old fundamentals—mainly tackling, certainly one of their weak departments against the Yellowjackets — but they will work on everything.

And they will need everything when they tangle with the DeQueen Leopards here Friday night. The Leopards, idle last week, were in the stands for a first hand view of how the Hope boys operate.

The Bobcats came out of the game in pretty good shape with only a few bruised shoulders and muscles. Quarterback Tom Ed Hays probably won't see action Friday night as he is nursing a bruised leg which he had before the opening game. Coach Ensminger said Hays would not see action until his leg is completely healed.

The coaches were well pleased with the performance of the backfield and they did show up well. In spots the line looked good but on occasions some of that "green" material really glared.

However, a few more games which will give them much needed experience and the Bobcats are likely to develop into a fairly potent outfit.

Sports in Brief

DETROIT (AP) — Hal Newhouser the Tigers' veteran left hander needs only one more victory to join the exclusivbe 200-win club. Newhouser picked up his 199th triumph in a relief role Monday as the Bengals nipped Washington, 5-4. Bob Feller of Cleveland is the only active major league pitcher to have hit the double century mark. He has 239.

CHICAGO (AP)—When Jim Rivera, White Sox outfielder, committed an error in Monday's game against Boston, it was his first since donning a Chicago uniform on July 25th. Rivera, who was acquired from the St. Louis Browns on waivers, had played 43 games for the Chisox without a miscue.

NEW YORK (AP) Jackie Robinson is the first major league player to score 100 runs this season. The Brooklyn second sacker tallied three times against Cincinati in Monday's game, boosting his total runs scored to 101.

NEW YORK (AP) — Were the St. Louis Cardinals seeing double in Monday's sixth inning against the Giants. . . or was the situation too dark?

Giants' shortstop Alvin Dar went to bat twice as his club scored nine times and hit a double each time.

Truman, Taft to Bring in Old Tactics

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Truman and Sen. Taft will make it more comfortable for anyone who can't get adjusted to the campaigning of Gen. Eisenhower and Gov. Stevenson.

Since everybody has been listening to them for years, hearing the President and the senator on the warpath again will be as relaxing as last year's hat. They follow standard political practice: Make it slam-bang and personal.

Not so with Eisenhower and Stevenson. Being newcomers to national politics, they have had to inch their way along to get the feel of things. They started out as mild as a couple of cousins.

Now the general is getting rougher on the Truman administration and the governor is getting a little more caustic about the Republicans. But both still seem to be trying to work up a full head of steam.

They may bet an assist in this from Truman and Taft, with Taft shoveling coals on the fire under Stevenson, Truman doing the same for Eisenhower, and Truman and Taft doing likewise for each other.

In this way the quartet should have a nice blaze going by election day with help from the vice presidential candidates, Sen. Sparkman and Sen. Nixon.

Truman and Taft are more than just famous politicians whose names are a household word. They have become symbols of their parties.

Although Truman and Taft are not now candidates for anything, they're both such aggressive men, with strong opinions and a yet express them, before this ca paign is over they may oversh ew the two men running for offi

Fight Buildup Is Termed Ridiculous

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK, (UP) — The p licity buildup for next wee heavyweight title fight between J sey Joe Walcott and Rocky M ciano should be heading today the sublime.

It's certainly been in the r culous up to now.

As of the current dispa from the respective training cam the imminent embroglio has had the dignity of a Mack Sennet co dy. Only the keystone kops w never this funny.

Everybody is crowding into publicity act except the fight and the situation as to their c dition and workouts has b buried deepter than the prize n get at Fort Knox. If the tr hadn't leaked out when the tracts were signed, you'd th Rocky's manager, Al (The V Weill, was prepping to do ba with Felix (Deadpan) Bocchicc Walcott's Arcaro.

The latest "fight" news fr Marciano's manager concerned raucous roars from Weill whe was reported that Rocky w take his own chef to Philadel because of crank letters wh threatened him with a menu ey.

One thing certain, Rocky's ca must be the best fed in pugili history because his chef is gett more publicity than Oscar of Waldrof ever had. Up to now daily dispatches have caused feeling that the Rock was train like a candidate for a fat m pie-eating contest. He has b eating prodigious amounts of f and using steaks for hors d'oeu which are society sandwiches big as a minute.

Another scintillating scoop c cerned the fact that somebody other from Brockton, Ma Rocky's home town, predicted there would be "dancing in streets" if Marciano won.

It reminds me of a great l one writer sent out during Johnstown flood. The reporters started, "God sat on the hills rounding Johnstown tonight."

His exasperated editor, sitting the other end of the telegraph impatiently awaiting statistical formaion on the flood dam broke in and said:

"Forget the flood. Interv God."

Which brings me to the fact "dancing in the streets" line cause me to miss the fight. the chance the Rock will wi may go cover the Massachu Mardi Gras. Always did want see a New Englander lose his serve and do a buck and wing Fouth and Main.

But probably the best trai camp story of them all concer Bocchicchio's request that Weill forced to undergo a physical up before being permitted Rocky's corner. Felix, who ear his appearance of a shopw George Raft, insisted he di want "The Vest" to drop dead a heart attack.

Although it has been known happen, it's a good thing that bout isn't scheduled to end football games — with a gun s Otherwise Weill might have a fect comeback.

The fighters? On, they're aro somewhere, sparring or running something.

CHAPTER TWENTY

AUGUST was an unexpectedly cold month. Vacationists shivered on beaches, piled on extra sweaters and wished for summer cottages with central heating and thermostats.

"Nothing," Rolph Hilliard told Nance, following a week end at his shore place, "is more depressing than sand without sun. I huddled three days over a fireplace."

Nance made a clucking sound of commiseration. Her reactions to the weather, or anything else these days, was halfhearted. She was in New York permanently now, after seeing Eleanor through her breakdown following Jeremy's marriage.

In a way, Eleanor's illness had been a good thing for Nance. It kept her mind and body occupied, and when Eleanor at length was able to be up and about again as usual—although she was noticeably thinner and subdued—Nance found that she herself had recovered from the first shock. And she decided at once that she would not stay in Thurstonia, encountering the inevitable pity of her friends, and forever running into Eve and Jeremy.

Kit had insisted on Nance making her home with her.

"Apartments are still scarce," she'd reasoned. "Besides, if you are going to be in New York, I'd like you with me. So would Eleanor."

Nance agreed. Kit was kind, and it really was not sensible to live alone. Kit vigorously discouraged brooding, and already, in the pattern of days which at first had been her grim routine of eating, sleeping, working, Kit was weaving her bright threads. And Rolph. Rolph was surprisingly sensitive of her moods. Perceptive and responsive, without mollycoddling her hurt pride.

Rolph was a truly nice person, Nance thought, considering him across the table. They often came to this quiet place near the office, for tea. Rolph was from a small town in Kent, England. His voice still had a trace of the broad a's and full, round o's, and his habit for tea at four came, he said, from a long line of tea-drinking ancestors.

Rolph said, refilling her cup, "I'm having the office adjoining mine made over as a studio for you, Nance. There are a couple of new books coming up. You'll get the art contracts."

"There's really no work space for me in Kit's apartment, Rolph. And I don't want to make a nuisance of myself. Kit has her own [illegible] Don't let this [illegible] Nance." [illegible]

to let this spoil my life, either. I have my work."

He nodded.

She continued, "I'm fortunate it's work I like. I can put all myself into it. It's so much more convenient being a jilted artist than a jilted stenographer, isn't it? Nine to five, with nothing but curlicues, and all those empty hours to fill! Artists are like authors—they never really stop working. Even in their sleep. I've often pushed myself awake to catch a dream, to get it on paper before I lost it."

He nodded, then frowned. "That's fine, for now. But drive yourself too hard and you'll go stale. I've seen it happen. Don't shut out your friends, Nance. Every contact is a stimulant, or a sedative. You need both." He grinned suddenly. "I'm not quite sure which category I'm in."

"Both!" She added, "You've been kind, Rolph."

"I'll be around if you need me, Nance."

She knew what he meant. Exactly. She would, just now, have preferred not knowing. Up to now, in her various encounters with Rolph Hilliard, she had sensed vaguely that he was on the verge of being in love with her. He hadn't put anything in words. Jeremy had been a barrier. Jeremy was no longer a barrier, but she wasn't ready for another love, and Rolph knew it. But he offered her his strength to lean upon, and she was grateful. She said gently, "Thank you, Rolph."

The tables around them were filling. Glancing up, Nance saw Steve Raymond and Libby Oliver in the foyer. Rolph saw them in the same instant, and lifting his brows at Nance for acquiescence, he waved them over.

"My lord," Steve said, seating Libby and pulling out a chair next to Nance, "tea!" He ordered martinis for himself and Libby.

But Libby protested, "I think I'll have tea, Steve. You should, too. Unless you want to start the Carlsons' party with a hang-over. Tea," she said firmly to the waiter, "for both of us, please."

Steve scowled, "Mama knows best."

"All right, all right."

Nance felt impatient with both of them. Especially Libby. Why, with Steve so churlish, did she tag along?

She questioned Rolph about it, on their way back to the office. They'd left Steve and Libby at the table, still bickering.

"Oh, Steve needs her, after a fashion," Rolph said. "He always has, and Libby knows it. She has [illegible] been a battle royal. But Libby was in Florida, and when she got back, it was too late. Libby's a sample of Hope Lives Eternal."

"It's hard on Libby."

Rolph shrugged. "Funny what people in love will put up with."

"But what is it getting her?"

"Nothing, at the moment. Except one of these days Steve is going to snap out of this and discover he loves Libby."

"Suppose he doesn't?"

"Then Libby will see to it there's not another Eve. It's worth, from Libby's point of view, a few dints in her pride. She really loves the guy."

Nance winced, although she knew Rolph's remark had no personal significance. I walked out on Jeremy, she thought. My darn pride! Only I couldn't have made a door mat of myself, like Libby. And Jeremy isn't Steve. He wouldn't have let me, or anyone else, pull strings. He wanted Eve, he married her, and that's that.

She said, as they walked along the corridor of their office building, "Rolph, I didn't tell you this before. The girl Jeremy married is Eve."

He didn't get it, at first. Then he whistled. Then, abrutly, he frowned. "Why?"

Nance knew what he meant. He hadn't, from the first, thought Eve had just happened to go to Thurstonia. He was seeking, now, the motive for the marriage. Eve's motive. Nance was heartened by his understanding.

He said thoughtfully, "Eve didn't need money, after what she got from Steve."

"Jeremy hasn't that sort of money, anyway. No, it wasn't that. I think I've figured it out. Partly, anyway. She hates Jeremy's father and mother. She hates me. She hated me long before she knew me, because I had everything that had been taken from her. It's the story of a child carrying a grudge, and I know it sounds far-fetched." She smiled wryly. "Yet I know I'm right . . . Rolph, it's not only losing Jeremy that hurts. It's losing him to her. I'm not particularly noble, but I think I could stand it if I thought he'd be happy with her. But the things you've told me, and Libby—well, how can he be happy with Eve?"

He said, "Let Jeremy fight his fight, Nance. You fight yours."

She managed a smile. "I expect that's the sensible thing to do."

"You can't be responsible for his trials and errors, Nance."

Not responsible, but you couldn't help being apprehensive. When you saw what Eve had done to Steve Raymond, how could you not worry over what she'd do to Jeremy? Unless Eve really loved him. Nance was trying hard to [illegible]

The Tale of The Big Brown Trout
By AL McCLANE
Fishing Editor

Pretty women seldom pay respect to philosophers. Now Pat, who is my wife and should know better, materially lessened the popularity of her sex for future generations.

I caught three large trout in the Haunted House Pool on the Delaware River one morning recently and I carefully strung them on a willow branch. The fish were taken honestly — on a dry fly — and when I left her to wander down toward Basket Brook my pace was quick and sure.

After all, I am an expert. She takes pleasure in casting a plug, and leaving her at the pool seemed safe enough. I had caught all the fish, and anyhow she could get plenty of exercise winging the bait toward Pennsylvania.

When I returned an hour later, I saw her blonde head bobbing among the cataracts, as she bounced to the gravel shingle near the end of the pool. There are probably among my readers young men who will be horrified at the thought that went through my mind as I turned from this scene of helpless womanhood, but there, next to my fish, was a brown trout of monstrous size. A fish that I could never match in 20 years of Delaware fishing.

She had flung her plug in the face of tradition with unerring aim. The trout weighed 7 pounds 3 ounces and swallowed a black finish Heddon River Runt. Of course you and I know such a lure is no good for eastern trouting, but then, we are philosophers.

The miracle of deep freezing and the ingenuity of a trout fisherman have been combined at a place called the Green Spring Mountain Trout Farm, in Newville, Pa. The hatchery reared fish just don't have the delicate flavor of a wild trout, especially when you've had them fresh out of the water on the banks of a far off stream.

Well, Colin Thomas decided he could produce a "wild" trout for the market and after consulting with a number of food scientists he learned the real problem was that the cells, tissues, and fatty oils of the trout's flesh broke down in a matter of minutes after the fish was taken from the stream. The change destroyed the flavor. [illegible] built a deep freeze unit. Under his system, the trout are cleaned packed in a pliofilm bag, and in the quick freeze — all in ten minutes time.

The trout arrive at your house frozen solid, and after a very impartial test I can report that they are equal to most and superior to many wild fish. They come in a cardboard creel, incidentally, along with a half-dozen recipes that can't be beat.

Lewis Meets Policy Group, Maps Strategy

By NORMAN WALKER

WASHINGTON (AP)—With a possible coal strike only a week off, John L. Lewis huddles with his 200-man Policy Committee today to map negotiating strategy.

The contract between the United Mine Workers union and the Northern mine owners expires on Saturday. Since that is not a working day, the first opportunity for the miners to stay away from work would be next Monday.

Lewis' union members traditionally won't work without a contract. However, agreements with Southern soft coal operators and with the Pennsylvania anthracite, or hard coal, owners extend until Sept. 30.

The UMW Policy Committee, due to meet with Lewis at Midafternoon, is the group Lewis usually consults when major union decisions are to be made. It always ratifies contracts before their terms are made generally known. It also helps draft strike plans.

John Busarello of Pittsburgh, head of the union's District No. 5, said over the week end he knew of no soft coal settlement in the works, but felt the calling together of the Policy Committee was a hopeful sign.

It was reported that some progress has been made in the soft coal, or bituminous, industry peace talks, but not enough to assure an agreement before a strike could develop. However, both sides were described as seeking to avoid a shutdown.

Lewis may beet during the day, too, or possibly tomorrow with Harry Moses, chief negotiator for the Southern Coal Producers Association.

Lewis has been talking with both men separately for some weeks. Their talks are reported to have touched on suggestions for higher wages, an increase in the 30-cent a ton welfare fund royalty payments, and plans for more regular employment among miners.

GENERAL IN TOKYO

TOKYO (AP) — Gen. Curtis LeMay, head of the U. S. Air Force Strategic Air Command, arrived today and immediately went into conference with the U. S. Far East commander, Gen. Mark Clark.

Commie Truce Talkers on Same Theme

PANMUNJOM, Korea, (UP) — Communist armistice negotiators accused the United Nations today of scattering "slanderous leaflets" in the Panmunjom neutral area and again charged the U. N. with killing and wounding prisoners of war.

The U. N. replied with a complaint that the Communists have failed to mark properly their prisoner of war camps.

A protest against the alleged scattering of leaflets was made in a note handed over at a brief liaison officers' meeting at Panmunjom. It was signed by Col. Chang Chun San, Chief Red Staff officer.

Although he did not specify what he meant by "slanderous leaflets," Chang was believed to be referring to surrender leaflets spread outside the zone and blown into the neutral area.

The other note was signed by North Korean Gen. Nam Il, chief Communist truce delegate, and was addressed to Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, senior Allied delegate.

In it, Nam protested the killing of one prisoner and the wounding of seven others Sept. 12 in a Koje island enclosure. He also blasted Harrison for failing to account for "your innumerable barbarous acts of torturing and slaughtering our captured personnel."

Such protests from Nam have repeatedly followed incidents in prisoner of war camps. The United Nations has warned that die-hard Communist prisoners have been ordered to create incidents for propaganda purposes.

Harrison replied with a note of his own complaining that maps the Reds turned over to the U. N. Aug. 15 do not give full information about four new prisoner of war camps.

Harrison said Allied aerial reconnaissance photographs show prisoner of war markings on buildings 600 and 1,000 yards away from two areas but no markings on buildings where the Reds said the camps were located.

He asked that "immediate action" be taken to insure that all prisoner stockades are properly marked.

By use of artificial insemination it is possible to get 1,000 calves a year from a bull compared with 50 by natural breeding.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ever since ilbur Peeble and his wife quar eled over politics he has been tting prune juice for breakfast stead of orange juice.

He knew it was just one way at Trellis Mae, who is madly r Adlai, was getting even with im for backing Dwight Eisenhow r.

But everytime he groaned, "I on't like prune juice" she replied

"It's prune juice for you from ow on. We're tightening up our omestic economy. That's part of ou are all goops."

"It isn't goop — it is G.O.P.," bjected Wilbur.

"Well, it's goop to me," said Trellis Mae. "Adlai and I think ou are all goops.'

Foreseeing four long years of prune juice if the Republicans won, Wilber decided it was time o compromise.

"I'm tired of all this fussing ver politics," he said. "If you'll o back to serving orange juice— nd keep your mouth shut about dlai for one full week —I'll buy ou a parrot."

"It's a deal," she agreed. "But t has to be a talking parrot — not ne of those old dumb ones."

That very morning Wilbur went o a bird store and picked out a ine parrot, which, oddly, was amed Polly.

"You're lucky," said the proprietor. "She's got the best vocabulary of any bird I ever had."

The conversation went from birds to the weather, from women to baseball, and from baseball to politics.

"Who's going to win?" asked Wilbur.

"A number of people who come in here are for Gov. Stevenson, said the proprietor, "but I tell 'em that I like Ike."

"I like Ike, too," said Wilbur.

And every lunch hour for several days he dropped into the store to see Polly and chat with the owner on politics. Meanwhile Trellis Mae never mentioned Adlai once, although the strain of staying silent visibly was making her nervous.

One week from the day she made her bargain her husband returned home with the parrot in a bright new cage.

"Oh, Wilbur, she's beautiful. Can she really talk?" said Trellis Mae, clapping her hands. Miffed at being doubted, Polly turned three slow somersaults on her perch, then looked upside down and said surily, "Hello".

Wilbur smiled and started to the bathroom to take a shower. Excited, Trellis Mae ran into the kitchen and came back with a cracker. As Wilbur paused by the bathroom door, he heard his wife say:

"Polly like a cracker?" "Polly like a cracker?"

There was a moment of silence, and then the voice of the parrot sounded, raucous but clear:

"I like Ike I like Ike."

Wilbur quickly closed the door behind him and was a long time taking his shower. When he reentered the living room, the bird cage was empty.

"Where's Polly?" he asked.

"One goop in this house is more than enough," said Trellis Mae. "I put her in the refrigerator to punish her for saying she liked Ike. She isn't funny."

"But she'll freeze," objected Wilbur. He went to the kitchen and opened the refrigerator door. Polly her shoulders hunched and shivering, was striding back and forth on a wire shelf, pausing now and then to blow on her cold claws. On the shelf below her lay the frozen carcass of a chicken Trellis Mae planned to roast the following evening.

"Poor Polly " exclaimed Wilbur.

"Oh, I'm all right," squawked the parrot, then pointed one wing down at the frozen chicken. "But look at that bird down there. Who did she say she liked —McKinley?"

Ike to Get Big Vote in State But Not Enough

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Ike Eisenhower will pile up the biggest GOP vote in Arkansas history but tradition will carry the state for Adlai Stevenson and the Democrats, in the opinion of Arkansas newspaper seditors.

They think Eisenhower — with the backing of disgruntled Democrats — will push the Republican vote from 21 per cent polled by Gov. Dewey in 1948 to 35 per cent this year.

Stevenson and the Democrats are expected to gain 4 per cent in strength, despite reports that a desire for a change in political leadership is spreading slowly through the state.

The gain — according to a consensus of editors and politically informed sources in 74 of Arkansas' 75 counties — put 65 per cent of the popular vote and the state's eight electoral votes safely in the Democratic column.

Editors in seven counties expect Eisenhower to win there. In an eighth, editors of two opposing papers differ — one picks Ike, the other Stevenson. In Garland (Hot Springs) County, Editor Robert Dean rates the two as 50-50 right now. No estimate was available from Newton County where the States Rights Democrats receive 979 votes to 848 for Harry Truman in 1948.

The most top heavy Democratic vote was predicted in Sharp and Prairie Counties — 9 8per cent. Eisenhower's best efforts were set

Korean Vets Eligible for Compensation

Recent veterans of the armed forces, who may be eligible to file claims for unemployment compensation under the Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act of 1952 after October 14, today were urged to visit the local office of the Arkansas Employment Security Division and register for work if they are not working.

Teddy M. Jones, manager of the Hope local office, which is to handle claims under Title IV of the Act, covering payment of unemployment compensation, pointed out that several conditions must be met before veterans can become eligible for payments.

This compensation is payable only to veterans who are unemployed for no reason other than that they cannot obtain a suitable job. One of the first requirements is that the unemployed veteran be registered for work with the Employment Security Division. Another is that he must be able and available for work. Local offices are currently seeking workers for such jobs as baker, printer, machinist, welder, electrician, and auto mechanic.

Mr. Jones said the purpose of the new veterans' unemployment compensation legislation is to provide discharged servicemen, who are unable to find jobs, with weekly payments which will tide them over temporary emergencies while they are out of work. The total of $676, which is payable in weekly amounts of $26, to be paid when out of work and eligible, will remain to their credit until used.

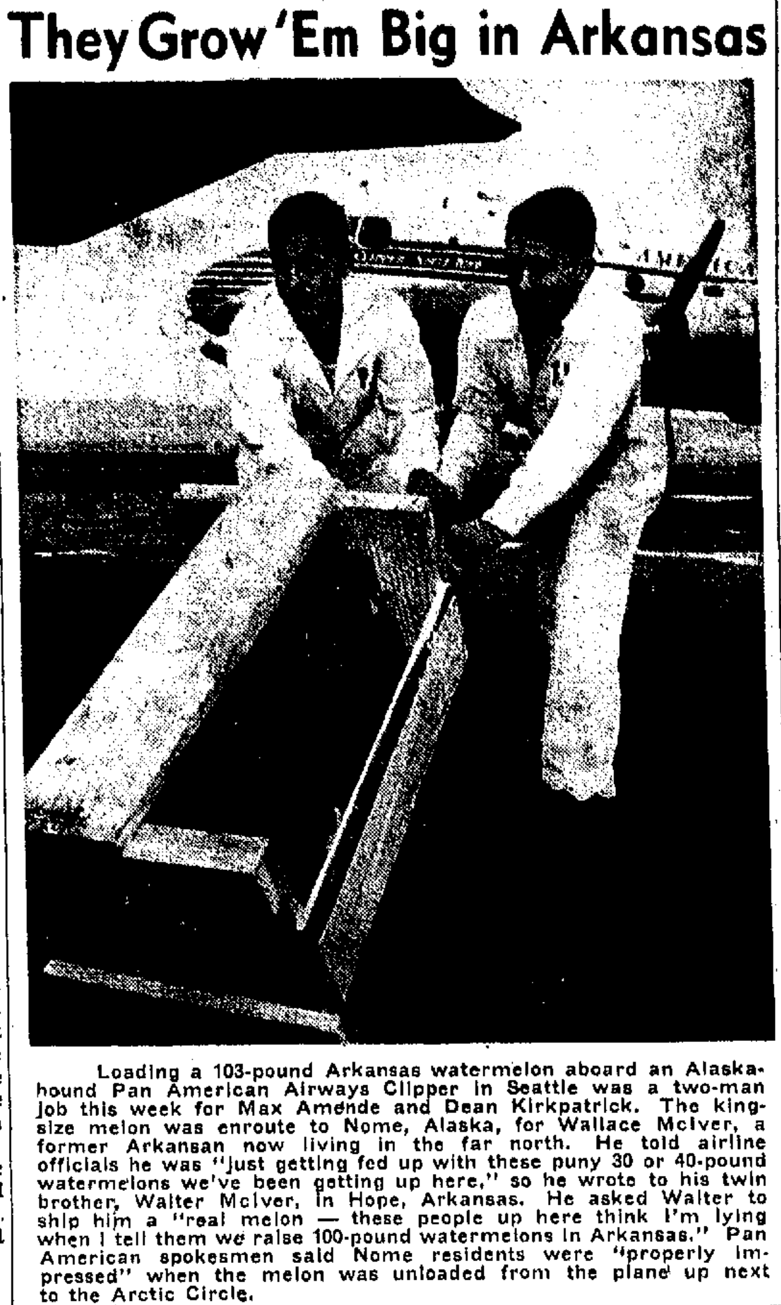
He also stated that the veteran cannot collect this unemployment compensation for the same period in which he is receiving mustering out pay. Nor can he collect benefits while receiving allowances for education or subsistence during on the job training.

In addition, if he has state wage credits that might make him eligible for benefits under any state employment insurance law, or under the railroad unemployment insurance program, he should file a claim for such benefits. Naturally, a claim for these benefits will be acted upon first, and if they amount to less than $26 weekly, he will get supplementary payments under Title IV to bring his weekly benefits up to that amount. If he is disqualified under the state law from receiving benefits for any week claimed, he will not be eligible for compensation under Title IV.

If the veteran still is unemployed after October 14, 1952, and reports to the local employment office to file his claim, he should bring with him his discharge or separation papers, his social security card, and a list of employers for whom he worked during the 18 months prior to his entering the service and up to the date of his claim.

"But he should report to the local employment office and register for work as quickly as possible" Manager Teddy M. Jones stated, "because there is a good chance that we may be able to find him just the kind of work he would like to do."

They Grow 'Em Big in Arkansas



Loading a 103-pound Arkansas watermelon aboard an Alaska-hound Pan American Airways Clipper in Seattle was a two-man job this week for Max Amende and Dean Kirkpatrick. The king-size melon was enroute to Nome, Alaska, for Wallace McIver, a former Arkansan now living in the far north. He told airline officials he was "just getting fed up with these puny 30 or 40-pound watermelons we've been getting up here," so he wrote to his twin brother, Walter McIver, in Hope, Arkansas. He asked Walter to ship him a "real melon — these people up here think I'm lying when I tell them we raise 100-pound watermelons in Arkansas." Pan American spokesmen said Nome residents were "properly impressed" when the melon was unloaded from the plane up next to the Arctic Circle.

More Pay for City Employes Recommended But Depends on Reduction of Expenses

The city's financial committee submitted six recommendations last night to the council in a report designed to curb expenses and at the same time increase salaries of employes.

And to set an example the council voted to meet Sept. 30, without pay. Usually the council only meets twice each month, the first and third Tuesday's. The recommendations:

1. That heads of each department make a survey of their expenditures, in salaries etc., with the view of reducing expenses substantially.

2. That department heads furnish the council with a complete list of all employes, together with duties and a log of a week's work.

3. That all vacations be given without additional cost to the city.

4. That we (finance committee) favor an increase in salaries.

5. That council be furnished a copy of payroll, number of employes in each department for 1940-45-52.

6. That all expenditures except absolute emergencies be curtailed.

The group voted to let the Negro American Legion use a building at the airport for a meeting site providing they keep up the insurance on it.

An ordinance was passed levying a 5 mill property tax in the city. This tax has been in force for years but has to be passed on every year.

Fred McElroy, Texaco distributor, asked the city to open up East Ave. G. in order that he could get to his place of business. The street commission was instructed to investigate estimated cost and determine whether the company would blacktop the street in event it was opened up.

The Mayor instructed the chief of police to have a traffic officer at the Spruce and Third Street cross Monday through Friday each week from 8 to 9 a.m. and from 3 to 4 p.m. This action followed a request from parents and teachers of the Brookwood grade school.

Noted Agri Lecturer to Talk Here

Edgar A. Hodson, noted agricultural author and lecturer, will address a group of farmers, agricultural leaders and business men in the Court House at 1 p.m. Friday of this week, it was made known today by Emory A. Thompson, chairman of the Terre Rouge-Bodcaw Soil Conservation District.

Mr. Hodson will discuss pasture development, an important factor in the economic future of South Arkansas. If cattlemen had followed Mr. Hodson's pasture and hay recommendations of fifteen years ago, according to Emory Thompson "We could refer to the 1952 drought as just another dry year."

Mr. Hodson's advice to livestock producters in the southwest since 1936 has included the development of deep rooted, drought-resisting crops such as Sericea Lespedeza and Kudzu. Mr. Thompson emphasized this by quoting a gain of more than two pounds of beef per acre each day on a kudzu pasture near Prescott this summer, while nearby farmers were buying hay or selling cattle because of a grazing shortage.

Mr. Hodsons' discussion, illustrated by enlarged photos and colored slides, is reported to be as entertaining as it is educational.

Mr. Hodson is reputed to know the name and characteristics of every native pasture plant in Arkansas. Folks who have plants they cannot identify, in their pastures, meadows, or lawns are urged to bring them to this meeting. The roots, stem, leaves and seed head should be included if possible.

The program is open to the public, and a sizeable number of Hope and Hempstead people are expected to attend.

Fulbright Talks With Adlai, May Get Key Role

By RELMAN MORIN

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas flew to Springfield through a roaring rainstorm late last night and went immediately to Gov. Adlai Stevenson's office in the executive mansion.

Fulbright avoided giving a direct answer to the purpose of his visit.

He is a guest at the governor's mansion. He said he may stay until when Stevenson leaves for Connecticut, beginning a second major campaign trip. The senator said "I just came up to see what is going on."

Fulbright said he is supporting Stevenson in the presidential campaign.

But he told newsmen he wants to hear the governor's idea about some of the decisive issues of the campaign. Namely civil rights legislation, the Taft-Hartley act, and Stevenson's position on Senate Rule 22, which requires a two thirds majority vote to shut off debate.

The Arkansas senator said he agrees, in principle, with Stevenson's proposal to repeal the Taft Hartley Act.

Thomas Fairchild, Democratic candidate opposing Republican Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin, told reporters he has "a very good fighting chance" to unseat McCarthy in November. He said he has asked Stevenson to campaign in Wisconsin, but evaded questions about Stevenson's plans.

The governor's chief lieutenants also ducked the question.

However, it appears more than likely that Stevenson will campaign in Wisconsin. He has frequently attacked McCarthy, usually without mentioning his name. Fairchild said he came away from his talk with Stevenson "hopeful" that the Democraic presidential candidate will come into Wisconsin.

Sevenson, in a statement issued to commemorate constitution day, took occasion to ask:

"Does anyone have real freedom of speech when not only his views but his very character and reputation are to be subjected to irresponsible, distorted attack by others?"

Refugees Tearfully Leave Wake

Editors note: Stan Carter, an AP war correspondent in Korea, flew to Wake from Tokyo aboard a military rescue plane. Honolulu says his story is the first press copy received there from Wake.

By STAN CARTER

WAKE ISLAND (AP) — Children clutching toys and dolls and young wives with tears in their eyes climbed into rescue planes today and left typhoon-lashed Wake for Honolulu.

They were the first of 350 persons evacuated today. More, including most of the fathers and husbands, will leave tomorrow.

They, and others to follow, take with them memories of standing knee deep in water in undergound concrete shelters — of crawling on hands and knees in search of their families. . . of thinking that only the persons huddled in the same shelters with them were alive — that everyone else among the 750 on this tiny island had been killed by the sledgehammer blows of raging wind, rain and waves.

They leave a Wake covered with wreckage. There has been no official estimate of property damage. Residents say it will reach eight or 10 million dollars.

At least 90 per cent of the buildings were levelled by the storm whose winds exceeded 160 miles an hour.

Would Change, Not Repeal T-H Law, Says Ike

By JOHN L. CUTTER

NEW YORK, (UP) — Dwight D. Eisenhower told organized labor today he favors changes in the Taft-Hartley law to eliminate "unionbusting" provisions, but he would do it through amendment, not repeal.

He also proposed that employers be required to take a nonCommunist oath, the same as union leaders. But he said most of the law's other provisions should be retained

Those were the only two changes recommended by the Republican presidential candidate as he talked to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor in his first major labor speech of the campaign.

He did not go into detail on the "unionbusting" provisions but drew scattered applause from delegates assembled in the Commodore hotel ballroom when he said:

"I know the law might be used to break unions. That must be changed. America wants no law licensing union busting. Neither do I."

"I don't want arbitrary power over either labor or industry. I do not believe that the president of a free nation can have such power without that nation losing its freedom

"My opponent made plain on Labor Day that he wanted power, as President, to compel arbitration. That is exactly what I am against.

"If you want the basic, irreconcilable difference between his position and mine, there it is. He and his party embrace compulsion. I reject compulsion."

On the other hand, Eisenhower listed some of the principles he feels must be retained. These were:

"The encouragement of collective bargaining the right to strike an advance notice before a strike is called a requirement that both unions and employers live up to their contracts the assurance that members of unions get a regular report on their organization's finances."

In making his first major labor speech of the campaign, Eisenhower said he did not come before the AFL convention, which has pending a resolution endorsing his Democratic opponent, "to curry any special favor."

"I have not come to bid or compete for your endorsement," he said. "My views toward labor will be the same as they long have been, regardless of the action taken by the AFL at this convention in the matter of endorsing a presidential candidate."

Eisenhower argued that the Republican record on labor matters is not as black as the Democrats would paint it.

He said it was the Republican party which first established in law the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively — in the railway labor act of 1926.

"It was considered a model law," he said, "until later administrations began playing politics with it. That law worked well."

He also recalled that it was a Republican administration which passed the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction law.

Eisenhower said he has no use

East Position Consolidated by Stalin

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Generalissimo Stalin has consolidated Russia's power position in the Far East. Apparently, as a counter to American power, through the agreements reached in the Moscow talks with Red Chinese leaders.

This is the outstanding single accomplishment of the conference which ended two days ago after a month of meetings between Chinese Premier Chou Enlai and top Soviet officials. But American officials are certain it is not by any means the only important result.

Speculation is that wrapped up in the secrecy behind the Iron Curtain are vital decisions bearing on the future of war — or peace — in Korea and on America's own Far Eastern power pocisition anchored in Japan.

What the official announcement of the conference showed, authorities here asserted, was simply that Russia had succeeded in backing out of a treaty commitment to withdraw from the Manchurian naval tbase of Port Arthur. Until they had maneuvered this, the Soviets were under legal and moral compulsion, by a 1950 agreement with Red China to quit Port Arthur this year.

In the cold-blooded terms of power relationships they would have been yielding a major position [illegible]

18 More Reds Grabbed in Midwest

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Justice Department announced today the arrest of 18 Midwest and West Coast Communist party leaders on charges of conspiring to advocate overthrow of the government by force and violence.

Attorney General McGranery and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said those arrested included the leaders of the party in Missouri, Washington state and Michigan.

Arrests were made in St. Louis, Rock Island, Ill., Charleston, Mo., Seattle, Detroit, Los Angeles, Portland and Eugene, Ore. Chicago and Minneapolis.

All the arrests were made on warrants issued by U. S. commissioners and federal judges on complaint of FBI agents. The attorney general authorized the filing of the complaints.

Little Hopes for Warplane Strike End

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite resumption of negotiations at one plant, there was little if any indication today of an early end to the strike which has crippled Southern California's warplane production and idled 40,000 aircraft workers.

Representatives of Lockheed Aircraft Co. and the AFL International Association of Machinists negotiate here again this afternoon before Federal Mediator Harry Malcom.

After yesterday's meeting, the first since 25,000 IAM members struck Lockheed Sept. 8, Vice President Cyril Chappellet of the company announced that a new offer had been made.

He said the offer would mean at least 7 cents more an hour for each worker and as much as 9 cents additional for some. Also, he said, all workers would receive about 2 cents hourly under an escalator clause, six paid holidays and improved group insurance. A union shop demand was rejected again.

A union official denied that the offer bettered Lockheed's pre-strike proposals. The IAM demands 14 cents more hourly.

Asked if progress was being made, Malcom said, "Any time people get together and talk over problems they are making progress."

Meantime, Douglas Aircraft Co. announced it will seek a court order banning mass picketing at its El Segundo plant, struck by 13,-000 IAM workers last Monday in a wage dispute. Lockheed recently obtained a temporary injunction against mass picketing after picket line incidents.

No negotiations are scheduled at El Segundo, where workers rejected a 5-cent-an-hour offer. They demanded 9.

Move Expected to Build Up a Stockpile

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government plans to issue an order tomorrow freezing shipments from many of the nation's soft coal mines, to provide an emergency stockpile in event of a prolonged coal strike.

WASHINGTON (AP) — John L. Lewis and the anthracite industry reached an interim agreement today to keep producing hard coal after their present contract expires on Oct. 1.

The temporary agreement to be effective until a complete new contract is negotiated, calls for a boost in the royalty paid by the hard coal mine owners to the United Mine Workers welfare fund from 30 to 50 cents a ton.

Vernon D. Northrop, under secretary of the interior, said today the order would be issued by the Defense Solid Fuels Administration (DSFA) of his depatment.

The order would bar coal shipments after midnight Sept. 19 from all bituminous coal mines which have received notices from John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers that would permit termination of the existing wage agreement on Sept. 20. Those are largely mines in the North, contracts with most Southern mines expire Sept. 30.

Inhabitants Describe Wake Isle Disaster

By ROY ESSOYAN

HONOLULU (AP)—Trees and roofs flew through the air like straws but children sang bravely as they marched to concrete bunkers on typhoon-lashed Wake Island yesterday.

Mothers comforted their children in underground shelters while water sloshed around their feet. Outside every building except four on the flat little atoll was being smashed to bits by raging wind and waves.

Eyewitnesses told stories like these today from Wake and Kwajalein by radio as rescue operations got into full swing to bring some 700 inhabitants to Honolulu.

A C97 Stratocruiser left the stormbattered atoll with 80 evacuees. Some 600 more will follow as fast as planes can land and load up.

Four injured were flown to Kwajalein Island, 700 miles to the south, by a PBM Martin Mariner yesterday.

Radio reports continued to trickle in with details of the terrible destruction wrought by heavy seas and wind greater than 160 miles an hour.
